The Quincy Sun

We're Celebrating Our 25th Anniversary!!!

We're celebrating our 25th anniversary with a Special Commemorative Issue of The Quincy Sun on Thursday, Sept. 23, 1993.

It will be a nostalgic look at a most significant quarter century in Quincy's history, featuring the top stories and photos going back to The Sun's very first issue Sept. 26, 1968.

We hope you will join us as we look back on such stories as the Coming of the T, the Blizzard of '78, those red hot mayoral election battles, the issues that affected our community, our Page 1 New Year Babies, and back to when the Fore River Shipyard was turning out ship after ship, the landmarks that have disappeared and their replacements, and, sadly, the prominent members of the community we have said farewell to.

Twenty five years of Quincy and The Quincy Sun. This special issue will be a collector's item.

We hope you will be part of it.

Advertising rates for this special supplement will be:

Quarter page, 5" wide x 8" deep, $200. Half page, 10" wide x 8" deep, $325. Full page, 10" wide x 16 " deep, $595.

Ads may be retail or congratulatory. And maybe you would like to mention your own anniversary.

For reservations or more information, please call us at 471-3100.

City, School Officials Support Chretien Proposal For New Education Fund

City and school officials voiced support this week for a proposal by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien to establish a new citywide education fund that would provide supplemental funds for Quincy schools.

Chretien's proposal calls for the city to designate a place on property tax or motor vehicle excise bills for taxpayers to check off amounts to donate to the local education fund. Donations would be voluntary, and failure to make pledged contributions with the taxpayer would not make the taxpayer liable for the amount pledged.

Revenues from the fund would be expended by a committee comprised of the superintendent of schools and at least four residents appointed by the mayor.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon said he was in favor of the proposal.

"I think very highly of it because it could give great support to the Quincy Public Schools," he said. "I think it's absolutely wonderful. I'm very excited about it."

Mayor James Sheets said he also fully supported the concept of a separate education fund.

"Because it's a voluntary fund, only those who wanted to would have to contribute," said Sheets. "It's a good idea."

Chretien said the recently passed state Education Reform Act permits cities and towns to establish such a fund. A majority vote of the City Council would be necessary to put his proposal into law, he added.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath has been asked to "draw up the necessary language" to establish the voluntary fund so that Chretien may introduce the proposal at the City Council's Sept. 20 meeting, Chretien said.

"This voluntary checkoff is simple and has the potential to funnel seriously needed funds into the public schools," said Chretien. "Because we are in tough economic times, there is strong resistance to new taxes. But many people who can afford to will donate if given a real opportunity to do so. Federal and state income tax returns have similar systems for providing money for such things as presidential campaigns and wildlife protection.

"I am confident that the mayor will be able to appoint good people to the committee that will oversee the expenditure of these funds. As a result, I can see how advocates for the schools would be able to successfully encourage taxpayers to contribute to the fund. Eventually, this fund could generate a significant amount of money. What's great about the idea is that children will benefit and people who don't want to contribute to the fund won't have to."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We have seen a lot of changes over these last few years and sometimes the challenge to accept changes is one of the greatest issues affecting society today.

The ability to accept changes can determine to a great extent, our behavior and the improvements we make in our lives. Those changes which benefit us are the easiest to accept and are usually unnoticed by most people. We sometimes call these changes progress.

Sometimes it is difficult to accept changes that do not please us or that create inconveniences. To many of us, great changes, political-economical-social, are less worrisome than the small changes. Minor changes affect our daily activities, and could create stress due primarily to our inclination to magnify them. We should all have the obligation and responsibility to acknowledge and to accept changes which bring us and our country to the place we belong in this world . . .

Friday Night At Veterans Stadium

Quincy Hosts Marshfield In Season Opener

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy High football team opens its season Friday night at 7 o'clock at Veterans Memorial Stadium against Marshfield of the Atlantic Coast League hoping to rebound from a 3-6-1 season and to avenge a 21-7 loss last year at Marshfield.

"We have good size, a fair amount of speed and good players at the skill positions, but we are inexperienced in the line and that is our big question mark," said coach Jack Raymer.

"We will put the emphasis on passing and will have a limited running game, which I think will be effective. If Mike Bartlett (eight touchdown passes a year ago) is on, our passing game should be strong because we have an outstanding group of receivers."

Offensively Raymer will start Jason Sova (160) and sophomore Terry Bowmen (165) at the ends, Butch Palazzi (255) and Jeff Burrell (265) at tackle, Mike Feeley (235) and sophomore Peter Kolson (180) at guard and Dave D'Olympio (195) at center.

Among others who will see service on offense are Jason Bennett at center, Mike Lombardi at guard, Paul Colleary at end, and Tom Petdjonovic at wide receiver and Sean McDonald at quarterback.

Mike Flagg, Greg Santoro and Malvesti also will play defense.

"We have a fine group of seniors but also have several fine underclassmen and we will be starting three sophomores," said Raymer. "I was pleased with our showings in scrimmages. especially against a strong Randolph team. We also scrimmaged Newton. Canton, and Watertown and showed improvement in each one.

"We will have to be patient with them, as we are inexperienced on the whole, but we will improve as the season progresses."

Marshfield, with a veteran team, is one of the favorites to win the Atlantic Coast League title and Raymer expects a tough opener.

The presidents will open their Old Colony League season at Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday afternoon, Sept. 25.

Youth Football

Panthers, Apaches Off To Strong Start

The defending co-champion Quincy Point Panthers opened the Quincy Youth Football League season with a 34-16 victory over West Quincy Elks, while the co-champion Quincy Apaches rolled over the Houghs Neck Manets, 34-0, last Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

This Sunday at the stadium the Manets will face the Elks at 6 p.m. and the Panthers will meet the Apaches at 7:30.

Led by the three-touchdown effort of Steve Roberts, the Panthers jumped off to an 8-0 lead in the first quarter and never looked back.

Roberts raced 20 yards for the first Panther score and James Bennett rushed for the two-point conversion.

In the second quarter the Panthers struck again when quarterback Carmen Lorenzano rolled out and ran 30 yards untouched for the score. Roberts ran in the two-point conversion.

With three minutes left in the half, the Panthers again threatened but ran out the clock and took a 16-0 lead into the intermission.

Roberts scored his second touchdown in the third quarter to increase the lead to 22-0 and Lorenzo hit Tommy Daley with a 20-yard scoring pass.

Sean McLean scored both Elks touchdowns and both conversions were good.

Panther coaches Tom Donovan and Mike Dunlea praised the two-way effort of Brian Miller and the solid blocking of Jonathan Brillo. Also playing well in the game, in which every varsity and junior varsity player saw action, were Bobby Harvey, Dan Smith, David Geloran and Andrew Sheridan.

Running backs Chris Bregoli and Pat Egan scored two touchdowns apiece to lead the Apaches' romp and Josh Parastedis added two conversions.

Quarterback Jim Finn was outstanding and his kickoffs helped the defense pin the Manets deer in their own territory.

Manets Select Cheerleaders

JUNIOR VARSITY: Co-Capts. Amanda Palmer and Jamie Ryan, Tracey Adams, Jacqueline Chapman, Kellie Desmond, Stephanie Edison, Sarah Holler, Becky Mackey, Caitlyn Nichol, Tara Pezzuolo, Katie Pringle and Robin Sawan. Coach is Tanya Innello.

The cheerleaders will hold a fund-raiser at Papa Gino's, Granite St., Monday, Sept. 20. Anyone interested can eat anytime between 5 and 11 p.m. and a portion of the cost will go to benefit the Quincy Youth Football cheerleaders.

96 Entries In City Tennis Tournament

The 23rd annual Quincy Tennis Tournament is underway with 96 entries competing. The tournament is sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and Continental Cablevision and directed by John Franceschini.

Last year's winner of the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Cup was Peter Trafton, who is not in the singles event this year. Last year's finalists, Joe Ryan and long-time competitor Al McDonald, have been established as the one and two seeds.

On the women's side most tournament watchers expect three-time champion Pam Trafton, a senior at North Quincy High School, to march to her fourth championship. Competition should come from Catherine Foley and Janet Diesel, a first time entry who had played well in early matches.

Although Peter Trafton will not be in the singles event, he is paired with daughter Pam, and the "William F. Ryan Bowl". The Traftons are ranked third in New England in this event and will be tough to beat.

Lenny Ciavarro is back to defend his 35-and-over championship with Joe Ryan, who is always tough in this event, providing much competition.

Newcomer, Tyrus Cobb has the misfortune of drawing Ryan in the first round dropping a 6-2 - 6-2 match that has established Cobb as a player to watch in future events. Scott McLelland and Ibrahim El-Kassem are first time entries that have skills that should effect who wins this highly competitive division.

The Boys' 16-and-under has the largest draw in a long period and with Brendan Gibbons, last year's champion, moving past the age limit, there will be a new champion. Andrew Bisconte, Matt Knowles, Mike Welch and Mike McEvoy have all played well in early matches.

There are nine divisions of play in the tournament which is open to Quincy residents. All matches are played evenings on weekdays and start at 9 a.m. on weekends at the Russell Park Tennis Courts located behind Quincy High School. Spectators are invited and bleachers seating is available. Weather permitting the tournament finals are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

All competitiors receive a complementary T-shirt and championship plaques for the winners and finalist are provided by Continental Cablevision, the 2nd. year sponsor for this event.

Results of matches played at press time are:

MEN'S SINGLES
FIRST ROUND

Mark Scanlon defeated Carl Williams 6-0, 6-1.

Chris Baker defeated Apiwat susena 6-0, 6-0.

What Will Raiders Do For Encore?

North Home To Stoughton Saturday Night

By TOM SULLIVAN

What will the North Quincy football team, following the best season in school history, do for an encore this year?

The Raiders, unbeaten (11-0) Old Colony League and Super Bowl champions, will have to wait another week to open defense of their league title, but fans will get a chance to see what is in store for them when they host Stoughton of the Hockamock League in Saturday night's 7 o'clock opener at Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

North hasn't faced Stoughton for a number of years and the Black Knights are on the upswing after several lean years. Stoughton was 6-3-1 a year ago, its best season in several years and, with 14 returning veterans, coach Greg Burke expects an even better season this fall.

"Stoughton has some excellent players and should be a tough opening night test for us," said North coach Ken McPhee. "This game should give us some indication of what to expect when we open our league schedule."

North lost a lot of outstanding players to graduation, including all-scholastics Liam Higgins, who threw 11 touchdown passes, and Dave Reinhart, a big two-way lineman who had an outstanding season.

However, McPhee has a number of returning players with varsity experience, especially on defense.

"We are inexperienced on offense and defense will be our strong point," the 12th year coach said. "We have a lot of experienced players on defense.

"However, our offense has been improving in every scrimmage and I was especially pleased with our final scrimmage with Marshfield. We did everything we had to do and Danny Duncan had a fine game at quarterback. He was a starting wideout last year and I feel he will be a worthy successor to Higgins at quarterback."

The Raiders also scrimmaged Newton North, Wellesley and Xaverian.

North's running game will be built around junior Sean Nee, who ran for 600 yards as a sophomore despite missing three games with an injury.

McPhee has one of the finest noseguards in the league in Dave Pacino and two excellent linebackers returning in 260-pound Brian Raftery and 228-pound Sean Halpin.

Offensively North's wide receivers will come from among George Wirtz (145), and Jason Gott (160), Nathan Gott (165) and Jerry Fernandez (175).

Raftery and Kevin Ross (230) will be the tight ends.

At tackle will be Dave Carney (215) and Halpin.

The guards will be Pacino (200) and Justin Dilks (205) and Jason Picardi (190) will be the center.

Joining Duncan (160) in the backfield will be Nee (165) and Derek Epps (160) at tailback, Glenn Peterson (185) at fullback and Mike MacGregor (175) and Jamie Karvelis (160) at wingback.

Tim Zanboni at fullback and Ben McCarthy and Pat Kielty at tackle will also see action on offense.

Defensively it will be Peterson, Carney, and Picardi at end, Dilks and Ross at tackle, Pacino noseguard, Halpin and Raftery linebackers, and Jeremy and Nathan Gott, Toby Odom (160), and MacNgutter (150), Epps and MacGregor in the secondary.

North will be seeking its 14th win in a row. The Raiders' last loss was at the hands of Bridgewater-Raynham on Nov. 9, 1991. They followed with wins over Taunton and Quincy and then came last year's dream season.

North will play its first OCL game on Friday night, Sept.. 24, at 7 against Falmouth at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

William Degan Memorial Road Race Sunday

The first annual William F. Degan road race will be held this Sunday at 10 a.m. starting and ending at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Mayor James Sheets will fire the starting gun for the race, being held to honor the late Bill Degan, a federal marshall from Quincy who was killed in the line of duty in August, 1992.

Proceeds from the race will go to benefit Quincy's D.A.R.E. program and the U.S. Marine Corps Toys for Tots, two charities that Degan strongly supported.

Anyone on the South Shore is invited to enter as a runner or walker.

They can choose to run in the 10K road race, a three-mile run or a three-mile walk.

Anyone not entering but who would like to be a sponsor or make a donation should call (617) 499-1996.

Donations in the form of checks or money orders can be sent to the Degan Memorial Fund, 60 Murphy Memorial Dr., Quincy 02269.

INSIDE INFORMATION

Regardless of whether radiator hoses look fine on the outside, it is recommended that they be replaced every four years. Wear typically occurs from the inside out with radiator hoses. When this happens, car owners have little warning of hose failure until they break through. By then, of course it is too late. To avoid an expensive tow, it is best to replace radiator hoses as a preventive measure. Hoses may fail sooner than expected on some cars due to the electrical conductive. The result is an electrical current running through the system which causes a change in the chemical composition of the rubber that can cause unseen hose failure on the inside.

HINT: Have the condition of the engine's coolant checked every year.

For most of your cars maintenance needs including the replacement of your radiator hose, rely on our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. In addition, for the best brake service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Cross Country

North Boys Feature Veterans, Freshmen Mix

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy boys' cross-country team has had rough sledding in recent years and, with a young team this fall, Coach Geoff Hennessy, starting his fourth year with a 6-18 record, feels .500 would be a good season.

"The Old Colony League is loaded this year, and we'll just have to see what we can do," Hennessy said. "The development of our younger runners will be the key. Once again, we have a nice crop of freshmen."

The Raiders were 2-6 in dual meets last fall.

Returning starters are Co-Capt. Eric Torvi, a senior and four-year veteran, and sophomores Terrence Roche, Brian O'Donnell and Steve Cannon.

Torvi placed first in the 19-under men's division of the recent Walpole road race. His time of 37:48 in the 6.2-mile race was his best ever. North's Ken Duncan also ran and finished in 47:06.

There were 532 finishers in the race.

Other returneers are Eric Yu, a senior and four-year veteran; Co-Capt. Ken Duncan, senior and four-year veteran; Shawn Piccozzi, senior and four-year veteran; seniors Ricky Cheng and Warren Fong and sophomore Andy Myers.

Hennessy has nine promising freshmen who will give the Raiders depth but not much experience.

The Quincy Youth Arena will observe its 20th anniversary on Saturday, Oct. 2, at George Bryan VFW hall on Broad Street from 8 p.m. to midnight with a combined anniversary reunion and parent appreciation night.

"It is hard to believe it has been 20 years since we had our big parade and grand opening of our then new hockey rink," said arena manger Beverly Renihardt.

"Through the efforts of families who had a dream and helped both financially and physically, the arena was built. Since then many other families have supported and maintained the arena and we would like to extend a cordial invitation to all to attend the free anniversary reunion."

Many former players are now QYH parents and coaches. Many received scholarships due to their hockey ability and QYH has given out over$50,000 in scholarships to college students.

Any family who participated and has not received a letter regarding the reunion is asked to send their names and addresses and the number of people who will attend to the Youth Arena or call Beverly or Lorraine at the arena. 479-8371.

Creedon May Appoint Interim College President Within Next Two Weeks

College president in 1983.

"There is a record in Quincy of my being treated differently from other college presidents," he said.

Creedon said it would be "inappropriate" to comment on Johnson's charges of "political" reasons for the dismissal because of potential litigation and Mayor James Sheets has expressed similar sentiments. Creedon added, however, that "it's certainly his (Johnson's) right under the Education Reform Act to appeal the decision."

Johnson had clashed in recent years with Creedon and various members of the School Committee over a number of issues, and had charged at least one former School Committee member with having a "racist attitude" toward him.

In April, Johnson himself was accused of racism after showing a fake red pepper during a School Committee meeting, which Italian-American committees members led to a disciplinary hearing. Raymondi said the pepper was shown while they were talking and was an ethnic insult, while Johnson maintained it was a joke. The incident led to a disciplinary hearing.

Sheets said after the incident that he did not want it to hamper the transfer of control of the college from the School Committee to an independent governing board of trustees. The mayor has also said Johnson's firing will not affect the decision to transfer the governance of the college.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges has ruled that the college must transfer its governance to a separate board of trustees or risk losing its accreditation.

In June, the School Committee began proceedings to fire Johnson for alleged mishandling of the college's finances, insubordination and other problems. The college, it was revealed, had overspent its budget by $2.7 million.

Johnson subsequently filed a complaint with the district attorney's office, saying the School Committee had violated state law by discussing the possible firing in private. A decision on that matter has not yet been reached.

Young Choice As Quincy College Interim President

Donald L. Young, an educator with 35 years' experience in college teaching and administration, was expected to be named interim president of Quincy College at Wednesday night's School Committee meeting.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon was scheduled to announce his choice for the post from among several names under consideration.

The Sun learned from several sources before it went to press Tuesday that Young, a Wollaston resident, was the front-runner for the job, and college sources predicted he would be named Wednesday night.

He will succeed Dr. O. Clayton Johnson who was fired two weeks ago by Creedon as president of the college following months of embattlement with the School Committee over his administration.

Johnson was facing a dismissal hearing by the School Committee when Creedon fired him under powers granted school superintendents by the new state Education Reform Law.

Johnson, the college's first black president, has a racial complaint pending before the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

He says he will eventually be reinstated as president of Quincy College, a post he held for 10 years.

Young has been an instructor in English at Quincy College since 1991. Before that he had been at Eastern Nazarene College since 1967 where he was a vice president and academic dean and English professor.

He was also at Eastern Nazarene College earlier, as an assistant English professor in 1958 and was also a teaching fellow at Boston University from 1955 to 1958.

He was also associate professor of English and chairman of the Division of Letters at Pasadena College in California in the 1960s.

Other names that were under consideration for the job included:

Carmen Mariano, director of the Quincy College Plymouth campus; Scott Greenberg, director of Extended Services; Stephen Kenney, director of Grant Services; Richard DeCristofaro, assistant Quincy schools superintendent; Arthur Woodward, an administrator for public information in the Quincy schools and Susan Nash, a dean at North Quincy High School.

Young will hold the interim presidency until a permanent president is named and that may not be until the middle of next year.

It could take until the end of this school year, sources say, before the issue of governance for the college is finally settled.

If that matter has not been resolved, the School Committee--and not a new governing body--might make the appointment of the permanent president.

New Vehicles For Police, Fire Depts.

The police and fire departments each received appropriations for new motor vehicles Monday night from the City Council.

The police department received $264,220 to fund 11 marked and four unmarked cruisers to replace some of the older vehicles in its current fleet. Ward 1 Councillor called the appropriation necessary "in order to get uniformity in the fleet."

Police Chief Francis Mullen said vehicles replaced will be sent to City Purchasing Agent Robert Denvir for resale.

The fire department received $22,500 for what Fire Chief Thomas Gorman called a "4 by 4 Bronco truck." The vehicle can be used as a command center, to tow boats, and in snow and other emergencies, the chief added.

Kolson said that particular kind of truck "is the thing of the future."

City Auditor Robert Foy said both appropriations will be funded by revenues added to the FY94 city budget through an increase in state aid.

In Wake Of Rape

Security Guards To Be Hired At Four Senior Sites

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City officials are hoping to boost security at four senior housing complexes under the jurisdiction of the Quincy Housing Authority by the end of the week.

The plans follow the sexual assault and robbery of a 76-year-old woman in her apartment at one of the facilities, O'Brien Towers on Bicknell St. in Germantown, early last Friday morning. The City Council and QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer are offering a $1,000 reward for any information leading to the conviction of the perpetrator of the crime.

The other three buildings that would receive the additional security are Pagnano Towers on Curtis Ave. and Sawyer Towers on Martensen St., both in Quincy Point, and Tobin Towers on Clay St. in Wollaston.

Comer said Tuesday he wants a permanent security officer installed at each of the four buildings from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily.

"I'd like to have them (security officers) within a couple of days," said Comer. "That way, out of this unfortunate (sexual assault) incident something good will happen."

Mayor James Sheets has expressed similar sentiments since the incident but was out of town this week and unavailable for further comment. Executive Secretary Thomas Koch, however, said Sheets also would prefer have to security officers stationed this week.

"It's up to the housing authority to implement the security, but he would like to get it done as soon as possible," said Koch.

The new security will be paid for by $50,000 the City Council appropriated Monday night at Sheets' request from the city's federally-funded UDAG (Urban Development Action Grant) Monarch III account and an additional $30,000 from the QHA budget. Comer said the funds will be used to hire four security guards, one for each of the buildings.

Comer said that he had not begun formally taking bids on the matter but on Monday had received "12 to 14" offers to bid from security companies

Property Tax Bills Due Nov. 1

Property tax bills for the second quarter of FY94 have been mailed and are due Monday, Nov. 1, announces City Tax Collector Dana Childs.

Payments received after Nov. 1 will be assessed a late charge of 14 percent dating back to Nov. 1. Payments will be considered late after Tuesday, Nov. 2 regardless of postmark date.

Anyone who has not received a bill can contact the tax collector's office at 376-1083, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Any new owners since Jan. 1, 1993 are advised that tax bills issued for 1994 are issued in the name of the prior owner. New owners should obtain a copy of the bill through the prior owner or the tax office.

Failure to receive a bill does not negate interest for late payments.

A Safety Checklist For Folks In Apartments

This safety checklist was compiled by the Quincy Police Department. For more information, call 479-1212.

Let's Look At The Building

- Is there some type of control over who enters and leaves the building? If there is a security door, do all residents check before buzzing someone in?
- Are entrance, parking areas, hallways, stairways, and laundry rooms well-lighted?
- Are laundry rooms and storage areas kept locked?
- Are mail boxes in a well-traveled area? Do they have good locks?

Your Own Unit

- Does the entry door have a deadbolt lock and peephole?
- Are sliding glass doors, leading to balconies, secured by pins in the frame or a wooden rod in the track?
- Does the management permit tenants to change locks when they move in?
- Do you leave a radio playing and a light on while you are gone?
- Do you alert your neighbors or your building manager when you leave for a trip or vacation?

Get To Know Your Neighbors And Work Together

- Organize an Apartment Crime Watch program so that neighbors can look out for each other.
- In large complexes and buildings, consider volunteer tenant patrols to watch for crime in and around the building, provide escort services for the elderly and people who may be out at night, sit in the lobby to monitor people entering the building. Teenagers can be a great resource for these efforts.
- Work together to insure that management provides adequate building security.
- If someone has been the victim of a crime, be a good neighbor, lend an ear and lead them to others who can help.

City Council Commends Sun On 25th Anniversary

The Quincy Sun was honored by the City Council Monday night for 25 years of service to the City of Quincy.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who sat in for Council President Charles Phelan who missed the council meeting because of mononucleosis, presented Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth with a commendation recognizing the newspaper for its quarter century of contributions to the city.

"You're a valuable member of our community," said DeCristofaro.

Bosworth, who called the commendation "a great honor," spoke not of his own accomplishments since putting out his first edition Sept. 26, 1968 but instead of the pride he has felt in the city the paper serves.

"Quincy was the greatest community I could ever have picked to start a newspaper in," said Bosworth. "I'm most proud of the word 'Quincy' in our name. It's The Quincy Sun."

Sun Editor Robert Bosworth also thanked the council for its recognition.

"You've been kind of a part of our family," he said. "I'm not going to say we'll be here in another 25 years, but we'll certainly try."

The City Council commendation to The Sun, which congratulates both Bosworths, reads:

"In Recognition Of: twenty-five years of providing the City of Quincy with news, public service announcements, feature articles and countless acts of charity. We salute you, your family, and your staff for the dignified and professional manner in which you conduct your business. We celebrate your high standards and achievements.

Congratulations on the pursuit of excellence in the newspaper industry. The Quincy Sun is a valuable member of our municipality. Thank you.

"And be it further known that the Quincy City Council extends best wishes for continued happiness and success."

--MICHAEL WHALEN

Council Meets 'Ibor,' Police Dept's New K-9

The City Council Public Safety Committee has gone to the dogs.

Or actually, the dog.

The committee got a firsthand look Monday night at one of the German Shepherds purchased for the city's new K-9 unit.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the dog, named "Ibor," was bred in the Netherlands and spent two years there before coming to the United States. He added that the K-9 unit will be of invaluable assistance to the police department in the future.

"They (dogs) served this city very well in the past and I'm sure they will again," he said.

Mullen also praised the two officers assigned to work with the K-9 unit, Rick Wash and Dave Colletti, who attended Monday night's meeting along with Ibor. Mullen said the two volunteered for the duty.

"They did it to serve the City of Quincy," he said. "They went above and beyond (the call of duty), and we're very proud of them.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the council's Public Safety Committee, voiced similar sentiments.

"This is another example of the Quincy Police Department doing just a little bit more than what was asked of them," said Kolson.

The City Council approved an appropriation of $18,000 for the K-9 unit at its previous meeting. City Auditor Robert Foy said an increase in state aid, which has been added to the FY94 budget, provided the funding for the unit.

$25,000 Appropriated For City's Cemeteries

The city's cemeteries received an appropriation of $25,000 Monday night from the City Council.

The funds were taken from the city's sale of lots account.

Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Executive Director Raymond Cattaneo, said the money would be used for grass seed and other items that would help improve the appearance of the cemeteries, but no heavy equipment.

The appropriation is granted annually by the council, Cattaneo added.

QCA Meeting At Atlantic Center

PRESCRIPTION FOR BETTER BONES

It used to be taken for granted that a person's bones stopped growing in mass and strength sometime during late adolescence. Post menopausal women have the added problem that the process of bone thinning and weakening sets in, often leading to osteoporosis. New studies have found, however, that moderate exercise and calcium consumption can not only stop bone degeneration, but actually strengthen and increase bone mass. Moderate exercise in the studies was described as two 30-minute walks, plus one low-impact aerobic class per week. The recommended amount of calcium was about one gram. Taking low doses of the hormones estrogen and progesterone have also been found to strengthen bones.

P.S. Low doses of estrogen in post menopausal women has also been found effective in lowering the risk of heart disease.

Tofu and broccoli are two excellent non-dairy sources of calcium—try combining them in a delicious stir-fry. Of you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment, and our new, more comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Plan E: The Impossible Dream

(Henry Bosworth, still taking it easy, dips back to February, 1976 for this column re-run. He'll be back to work next week. Well, that's what he says.)

The recent death in Florida of William J. Deegan, Jr., Quincy's first city manager, brings back memories of Plan E—Quincy's Impossible Dream—of a quarter-century ago.

Many have their own answers to that question. And others would just as soon forget Plan E ever happened.

For eight years. Quincy divorced its Plan A charter of government to romance Plan E. It was a short, stormy marriage.

James R. McIntyre, former city councillor, ,mayor and state senator, who came into office as a young councillor as Plan E was going out, wrote a 25,000-word thesis on the subject for his college master's degree in political science, some years ago.

McINTYRE

You may have your own ideas if you were around at the time, but McIntyre's conclusions on the rise and fall of Plan E:

It was oversold to the people as a Utopian non-political government which would provide better services with lower taxes.

You might be interested that two unsuccessful attempts were made as far back as 1938 and 1940 to bring Plan E to Quincy.

In 1940, then Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, running unopposed for his fourth Plan A term, called supporters of Plan E "charter meddlers."

Seven years later, thanks largely to Plan E's success in what McIntyre calls once "politically infested" Cambridge, the Quincy "meddlers" won. Plan E was voted in by an overwhelming majority,—17,420 to 7,532 to become effective in 1950.

And, to Quincy from Superior, Wis., on Jan. 10, 1950 came 41-year-old William J. Deegan, Jr. He was the City Council's unanimous choice from a field of 28 applicants.

Quincy residents who has heard and read so much about Plan E, settled back to watch the magic. And to wait for all the promised benefits: a business-like government, better services, higher wages, lower taxes.

Deegan began streamlining the government by consolidating departments. He instituted an in-service training program for department heads and launched the city on various surveys.

First official criticism of Plan E came in May after the new tax rate of $45.20 (get that!) was announced. The $4.20 increase really belonged to the previous Plan A government, Plan E supporters argued.

Councillor Frank N. Orcutt, however, is quoted as wanting to know: "When is the city manager going to make some savings? The people were sold a bill of goods on Plan E. They expected miracles, a bed of roses, but all they got was an increase in taxes."

But up stood another councillor according to McIntyre, with these stirring words: "I don't believe Bill Deegan needs anyone to defend him. He has accomplished almost a miracle in savings. The job he has done is most commendable."

The speaker, believe it or not: Carl W. Anderson. Later, he changed his mind to become Deegan's and Plan E;s most bitter foe and probably the man who chased Plan E out of town.

On 1951, city employees got a $300 pay raise and the tax rate went up only $1.36. Then the local newspaper, praising Plan E for the slight tax increase, chided Orcutt:

"Yes, it looks as though Quincy was certainly sold a bill of goods when Plan E was foisted upon it. The only catch is that the bill of goods looks like pretty good merchandise."

The "merchandise," however went up in 1952. Another tax rate increase ($7) and with it a demand from Orcutt, Anderson, Councillor David Crowley and former Mayor David McIntosh that Deegan resign. Orcutt, however, bolted the ouster bloc because "of new information." Deegan and Plan E weathered that storm.

Deegan, however, then got an indictment against Anderson charging him with six counts of interfering with the administrative affairs of the city. A Norfolk County jury deliberated 73 minutes and found Anderson innocent, He wept happily at the verdict.

A $3 tax drop in 1953 heartened Plan E supporters. In 1954 it went up $1.20 to an even $52. Things weren't so bad.

In 1955, however, Deegan surprised everyone by announcing he was resigning to enter private industry. There had been talk he and Anderson were packing guns. Then came Plan E's crushing blow: an $8.60 tax hike.

On the ballot went the question of returning to Plan A. Yes, said the people, by a 1,500 vote majority. Plan A would return in 1958.

By then, the old Quincy Civic Association..the "blood and heart of Plan E" couldn't even get a quorum together to fight Plan A.

Despite the tax increases, the big crisis for Plan E was the Anderson case, McIntyre thinks. Deegan, he feels, made a fatal mistake seeking court action. Even if Deegan had won that legal round, he would have lost the political battle, theorizes McIntyre.

There would always have been a strained relationship between the manager and council, he feels. Deegan would forever remain the man who brought a member of the council into a criminal court.

McIntyre thinks Deegan should have immediately resigned in the resulting chaos because he "personified the plan." He should have "assumed the cloak of martyrdom if necessary to insure the success of the plan."

Plan E might then have survived thinks McIntyre who went on to become a strong mayor under Plan A.

Quincy Groups Will Receive Project Bread Grants

On Wednesday, Sept. 29, Project Bread will award grants totaling $3 million to a record 424 soup kitchens, food pantries and homeless shelter feeding programs throughout the state, including six in Quincy.

The funds, which will provide emergency meals to over 100,000 hungry Massachusetts residents, were raised in the 24th annual Walk for Hunger.

Over 46,000 people participated in the 20-mile pledge walk, the largest annual one-day fund raiser for the hungry in the nation.

Project Bread will award $53,500 in grants to six emergency feeding programs in Quincy, DOVE, the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, the American Red Cross S. Area Voucher Program, Quincy Comm. Action Programs Emergency Food Center, the Protestant Social Services Bureau, the Seaside Advocacy Group and the Quincy Crisis Center.

The superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site said this week she is "very excited" about a grant of $250,000 in federal funds earmarked for the site.

Marianne Peak said the funds, which were obtained mainly through the efforts of Sen. Edward Kennedy, will ensure that the site is able to maintain the high quality of its services.

"We're very pleased the senator has taken the steps to assist the park," said Peak, who added she learned of the grant through a press release sent to her from Kennedy's office.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, also praised Kennedy for urging Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Sen. Robert Byrd to approve the extra funds as part of the Interior Appropriations Bill, which passed the Senate last week.

"He has been instrumental in getting the money," said Mader. "He's been a tremendous help."

The additional $250,000 will fund next season's trolley service for the site operated by Beantown Trolley Co. of Randolph, which began this year, as well as services and maintenance at the site's Visitors Center at Presidents Place and its program at United First Parish Church.

Kennedy, in a prepared statement, said Quincy should be credited for setting such excellent standards at the site.

"The exception made for Quincy in this tight budget is a tribute to the community's impressive success in attracting more tourists to the Adams Historic Site," he said. "Continuing the trolley service between the historical sites is a sensible response to the increase in visitors this year. Combined with the new Visitors Center, this assistance will draw more tourists to Quincy, keep them in town longer, and generate increased business for the city's shops and restaurants.

"The potential for economic growth in Quincy is real and deserves this modest federal investment."

In addition to the new grant, Kennedy secured $1.1 million last year to begin the trolley service and church program and to open the Visitors Center, which is staffed by park rangers seven days a week.

Increase The Silver Haired Legislature

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This is an attempt to increase the number in the role of the Silver Haired Legislature.

The Massachusetts Silver Haired Legislature (SHL) is sponsored under the Commonwealth of Massachusetts through the Office of the Secretary of the Executive Office of Elder Affaires. With identical member as in our General Court representing all the best interests of the elderly in the Districts of the Commonwealth. The Prospects for the SHL are duly elected by the elderly by an election sponsored by the Council on Aging in their town. Two year terms.

The Silver Haired Legislature (South Shore) has initiated a new way of communicating. It is a way the South Shore Communities can be attracted to the Silver Haired Legislature.

For the past three months the South Shore Silver Haired legislators have been attending a monthly meeting at 80 Clay Street Quincy. There has been eighteen (18) SHL members from thirteen (13) Cities and Towns invited to these meetings on the first Saturday after the third Tuesday. Each and every month the number of Silver Haired Legislators have been increasing in attendance. The Members have found that this monthly meeting does accomplish much being very productive. We suggest the several Districts find a way to pool their districts for monthly meetings, after they read this NEWS release. These meetings should be open to the public. The SHL is looking for prospects to fill the ranks of the SHL that have become vacant for various reasons that include the unawareness of this vitale organization.

There are many pieces of legislation that have been coming before our Legislature affecting the senior citizen, some these proposals are being introduced in various ways prior to filing date or with out benefit of Public Awareness. This results in the proposal receiving attention to benefit the interested parties, generating momentum for possible passage. The Silver Haired legislature does not Legislate the General Court does that.

It is the real purpose of the Silver Haired Legislature to be an Advocacy, Quasi Legislative body, to be aware of an support legislation affecting the senior, positively or not, speak-out against legislation that can adversely effect the Senior.

What the Silver Haired Legislature needs is to become more of a house hold name, having representation in all the Districts of this Commonwealth. May I suggest you the "Senior" call your Council on Aging and ask for a ballot and the election date.

For more information Commonwealth of Massachusetts-Silver Haired Legislature-Executive Office of Elder Affairs 5th Floor, McCormack Bldg., One Ashburton Pl., Boston, MA 02108-1696 or call 770-7750, ext. 313.

American Lung Assn. Thanks Fire Dept.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County, I would like to thank the Quincy Fire Department for participating in the "Superkids" Fireman's Foam Day at the South Shore YMCA to raise money for children with asthma.

In all, about 150 kids took part and all seemed to really enjoy themselves. These children worked hard raising money for kids with asthma and really deserved such a wonderful day.

Many thanks to Chief Gorman and his men for making the time in their busy schedules to help with this enjoyable day.

Council Rejects Brett Proposal To Hike Parking

Sept. 23-29 1959 54 Years Ago

The City Council refused to support a proposal by Councillor Joseph E. Brett to increase parking meter charges from the present rate of five cents an hour to five cents for a half hour in order to boost revenue from municipal parking areas.

The Council's Ordinance Committee effectively killed Brett's idea by voting that no legislation was necessary.

The Committee voted the same way on a proposal to permit all-day parking for 50 cents in 150 stalls in the John Hancock Parking Area after Councillor Thomas S. Burgin suggested that the proposal would put the city in competition with private all-day parking lots.

But the Committee looked favorably on a proposal for three-hour parking for 25 cents in 150 stalls when Councillor Edna B. Austin told members some women had complained that they were unable to have their hair done in the present two-hour limit.

TAXES OPPRESSIVE

Francis X. McCauley, 29, of 9 Medway St., Houghs Neck, an executive trainee at the Shipbuilders Cooperative Bank and a candidate for the City Council at large, listed "a tax rate which is becoming oppressive" as the big problem facing the 1960-61 Council.

"The Council will have to cope with problems that are mainly financial in nature and it will need to differentiate between projects that we actually need and those we would like but cannot afford at present," he said in answer to a question by the League of Women Voters.

McCauley said the projects he considers important include a municipal incinerator, increased recreational facilities in the form of improved playgrounds, beaches and programs, and a program for the development of the Granite St. area.

McINTIRE HITS CRITICS

City Councillor James R. McIntyre, 29-year-old candidate for mayor, struck back at critics who claimed he is too young for the job by citing training, experience and background as being far more important than age when dealing with governmental problems.

Recreation Dept. Exercise Classes To Start Monday

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct two separate exercise classes on Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Lincoln Hancock Community School gymnasium, announces Director Barry Welch.

Both classes will begin Monday, Sept. 27 and will start at 6 p.m. or 7 p.m.

The 6 p.m. class will be aerobic exercise with elements of both high and low impact. The 7 p.m. class will feature strength and stretching exercises designed to improve tone, flexibility and endurance of specific areas. Both classes will be taught by Debbie Vacca.

Registration for the classes can be done at the program. Participants can pay a one time fee of $25 for all classes, from Sept. 27 through Dec. 15, or $3 for each individual class, payable at the time of the class.

Participants in the 7 p.m. class may also take part in an adult swim at 8 p.m. in the pool located in the same building.

A towel or exercise mat is recommended and proper gym attire is recommended.

Quincy Impact To Sponsor Parents Together Evening

Quincy parents are invited to attend an evening get-together on Friday, Oct. 1, sponsored by the Family Life Task Force of Impact Quincy.

The event will take place at North Quincy High School, beginning at 6:30 p.m., and will feature programs for English- and Cantonese-speaking parents.

Parents Together will feature Dr. David Treadway, a nationally known family therapist, television personality, and talk show host. Dr. Treadway is the author of "Before It's Too Late," and numerous articles on parenting issues and substance abuse.

Rev. Daniel Chan will conduct a special program for Cantonese-speaking parents. Also featured will be Heath Fradkoff, a 14 year old stand-up comedian, who will share "the kid's side of the story."

"This event is an opportunity for parents from the entire city to come together for support, enrichment, enjoyment, and knowledge," said Donna Cunningham, chairperson of the Family Life Task Force. "Parenting is the toughest job that any of us ever have, and this is a chance to build some support, and have some fun, as we also learn skills that will help make this job easier."

The Family Life Task Force was formed based on the interest of the many parents who have participated in Active Parenting groups. Last year, Impact Quincy co-sponsored more than 15 such groups, whose members participate in a six-week, video-based discussion program that teaches practical skills in raising children of all ages. The Task Force is currently planning the Active Parenting groups for this year.

The Parents Together evening is open to all parents, and is free of charge. Information displays and refreshments will be available beginning at 6:30 p.m., and the speaking program begins at 7 p.m.

For more information, call the Impact Quincy office at 472-6027.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Merrymount Neighborhood Bridge Club Celebrates 50th Anniversary

A 50th Anniversary union luncheon of the Merrymount Neighborhood Bridge Club was recently held.

There are two original members still active in the club, which has been known by several names -- Hi-Lo Girls and Nine Belles. The two original members are Anne Muir and Virginia Mahoney.

In the many years, there has been 26 players, and several are now living in various cities and states out of this area.

Two others who were original members also returned for the celebration, are Doris Vincent and Edna Calkins Grant. A phone call from California from Mildred Sargent, was a pleasant surprise.

Other long-standing members are Kay Hansen (at whose home the reunion was held) Doris Mowbray, Alice McCarthy, Peg Benjamin, and the new comers Sally Moscardelli and Edith Trubiane.

The club has ben unusual in that the members' children all grew up together.

Firefighter Commended For Saving Bank Manager's Life In Robbery

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy Firefighter Paul Griffith was commended by the City Council Public Safety Committee Monday night for helping to save a man's life following a recent bank robbery.

Griffith has been credited with saving the life of William Crowley, manager of the Hibernia Savings Bank in Wollaston, after a lone gunman robbed the bank July 20. Griffith, who was at a nearby Christy's market at the time, was told about the robbery and rushed to assist Crowley until an ambulance could respond.

Griffith told the Public Safety Committee he used his EMT (Emergency Medical Technician) training to help control Crowley's bleeding until help arrived on the scene.

"I was glad I could help," said Griffith, who accepted the award in front of his wife, children, friends and family members. "I just wish I could have done more."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman had strong words of praise for Griffith.

"It makes you really proud to have a person like Paul in your department," said Gorman. "He didn't have to do it. He could have just gotten in his car and driven away. But he did a nice job, and I'm really proud of him."

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, the Public Safety Committee chairman, called Griffith "a person who has gone above and beyond the call of duty." He also introduced a resolution at the meeting to establish an annual Citizens Hero Award in the city to recognize an individual for a similar act of heroism.

Homemade Ice Cream A Purdy's Speciality

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

With the success of commercialized ice cream, homemade ice cream is often considered as an outdated remnant of the past, gone the way of poodle skirts, hoola hoops and drive-in restaurants.

But if you long for a time when ice cream was strictly home-made, those days are happily here again at Purdy's Ice Cream Shoppe, 68A Billings Rd., North Quincy. The local parlor is dedicated to preserving the old-fashioned tradition of home-made ice cream.

Kevin Forti, manager of Purdy's, described the homemade ice cream making process as "a lot of hard work, because it is easier to go through the short cuts, but I am proud to call the ice cream homemade, and I'm proud to call it Purdy's.

"There is no substitution for quality," Forti adds.

Considered by some as the premiere ice cream shoppe in Quincy, Purdy's has been serving the Quincy area since 1985. Of the 18 ice cream flavors which Purdy's makes, vanilla is the top seller, Oreo is a distant second, chocolate is third, coffee is fourth, and chocolate chip is fifth. Forti plans to extend its ice cream menu to 25 and 30 flavors by next spring.

"Homemade ice cream gives a more consistent taste, allows for more creativity, and gives you more of a reward, especially when customers come back", said Forti.

Purdy's received a five cone (star) rating from the Quincy Business News earlier this year, and they plan on entering the "Taste the South Shore" contest next year.

Forti attributed the success of Purdy's to Lynne Buccini, daughter of owner Joseph Buccini, who has been working at Purdy's since it opened eight years ago. He also credited part-time employees Jennifer Cleary and Erik Yu.

Because of the stiff competition from other ice cream parlours and Forti's commitment to customer service, Purdy's hasn't changed their prices in four years.

"You have to hustle and give the customers what they want to keep up with the competition", said Forti.

The parlour is tastefully decorated with balloons and photographs of Russian children which Forti took during his days as a professional photographer. Customers can relax and enjoy an ice cream at one of the many tables set up in Purdy's smoke-free environment.

The standards of good service and quality which Forti stressed is attested by some of his regular customers.

"Their homemade ice cream is better quality, and the service is fine", declared Tom Costello, of Weymouth.

"They made a cake for me the night before I needed it. Provided you give them a day's notice, they'll do anything you want", said Jim Molloy, of Quincy.

Purdy's is open daily from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. The phone number is 472-8558.

Prostate Screenings At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital will sponsor free prostate screenings during Prostate Cancer Awareness Week on Tuesday, Sept. 21 and Thursday, Sept. 23 from 5 to 8 p.m. in the hospital's ambulatory care department on the fourth floor.

Space is limited and advanced registration is required.

Call the Public Relations Department at 773-6100, ext. 4016 to make an appointment.

The screening will include a Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) blood test and a digital rectal exam (DRE). The examinations will be conducted by urologists on the staff at Quincy Hospital, including Drs. Denis Blais, William R. Helfrich, and Steven Starr of South Shore Urological Associates; Gary Bolgar; Adnan Kaleli; and Prasanta Mitra.

Council Approves Landtaking For N. Quincy Traffic Lane

The City Council Monday night approved the landtaking of a small piece of property owned by Dunkin' Donuts at the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum St.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said the action was necessary to continue improvements to East Squantum St. and the intersection at Quincy Shore Drive.

"It's the only thing that's holding us up," said Ayers.

The piece taken from Dunkin' Donuts, which will subtract slightly from the restaurant's parking, will be used to install a third traffic lane at the site, Ayers said.

He added, however, that city officials have been negotiating to obtain a nearby piece of land from the U.S. Navy to secure additional parking for Dunkin' Donuts. Ayers said he, Councillor Michael Cheney and Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon have been working together on the matter.

"Dunkin' Donuts has received a verbal commitment from Jack Gillon," said Cheney.

"We've been working with the owner of Dunkin' Donuts," added Ayers. "We don't want to hurt his business."

Ayers said repavement of East Squantum St. is scheduled to be completed by mid-November.

The project, which began over a year ago and was funded by a $1.3 million mitigation package worked out between the City of Quincy and the Massachusetts Water Resources Department, includes other improvements. Ayers cited as examples raising the causeway three feet to prevent future flooding, improved traffic signals, and installation of a traffic divider in front of Dunkin' Donuts to prevent cars from crossing over lanes while entering or leaving the restaurant.

"It will be a better looking entrance, and it will make entrance to Squantum safer," said Ayers.

Quincy Quarries Climbfest Saturday

The metropolitan District Commission, in cooperation with the Boston Chapter of the Appalachian Mountain Club, will sponsor the fourth annual Climbfest on Saturday , Sept. 25, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Quincy Quarries Historic Site in Quincy.

Climbfest is a day-long rock-climbing competition and outdoor festival that emphasizes the fun and camaraderie of rock-climbing.

Among the many attractions of the Climbfest will be the "Treadwall", a free standing climbing wall open to the public, ranger-led historic tours of the granite quarries, live animals from the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, a ropes course, music, food, and raffle drawings.

There is no admission for spectators.

The competition is open to all climbers. Categories range from novice to expert and prizes will be awarded to the top contenders.

Pre-registration is available until Sept. 17 for $18. Registration on the day of the event begins at 8:30 a.m. and the cost is $22.

throughout the South Shore and in the Greater Boston area.

"We're working on it as fast as we can," he said.

Comer guessed that the $80,000 might be able to pay off an average bid for nine to 10 months, and said an additional $15,000 would likely be needed to pay for an entire year's worth of security.

Comer said security guards used to be posted at each of the buildings, but that was stopped in the mid-1980s because of lack of funding. In the meantime, police officers have been assigned to watch over the facilities.

Council members Monday night expressed concern and outrage over the lack of security at the buildings.

"It was particularly hard for me, knowing the situation and knowing the lady," said Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who is employed by the QHA and also serves as chairman of the City Council Public Safety Committee. Kolson voted present on the council's 7-1 appropriation vote because of the fact that he is a QHA employee.

Kolson also made the announcement about the $1,000 reward, which was raised through $100 donations from each of the nine city councillors and Comer.

"I share the absolute outrage over what has happened over at O'Brien Towers," said Councillor Michael Cheney. "The lady (who was attacked) is still in the hospital, and she is not doing well. It's a disgrace that something like this could happen."

Cheney asked Acting City Solicitor James Timmins to prepare a legal opinion on whether the City Council has the authority to require all senior facilities to have security systems including cameras and other equipment. He added that if the council does have that authority, he would like such a requirement to be put into law in the form of a city ordinance.

Council President Charles Phelan had to miss Monday night's meeting because of mononucleosis but sent a letter to the council saying he, too, was outraged by the incident and urging support of the UDAG appropriation.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said the $50,000 appropriation was not the final solution to the security problems at the complexes.

"This is just a small step," he said. "We've got to do a lot more. It is a shame this (attack) has happened."

The attack at O'Brien Towers occurred Friday just after 4:30 a.m. Police said a white male with dark hair sexually assaulted a 76-year-old woman in her apartment and then robbed her. The woman, who told police her attacker was naked and held a pillow over her head, was taken to Quincy Hospital and is still being treated for non-life threatening injuries.

At press time police still had no suspects in the case. The fact that no signs of breaking and entering were found at the complex, however, has led to speculation that the woman may have been attacked by one of its mentally ill residents.

Under federal and state regulations, at least 10 percent of the units at senior housing complexes have long been set aside for people with disabilities. In the late 1980s, the federal government expanded the definition of disabled to include the mentally ill.

There are 275 units at O'Brien Towers, about 39 units or 14 percent of which are occupied by the handicapped, Comer said. He would not specify how many of those are mentally ill, saying that the QHA is not supposed to break the handicapped into categories.

Breakdowns for the QHA's four other senior housing complexes, Comer said, are as follows: Pagnano Towers, 18 of 156 units or about 11.5 percent are occupied by the disabled; Tobin Towers, 14 of 200 units or seven percent; Sawyer Towers, 35 of 150 units or 23 percent; and Drohan Apartments on Copeland St. in West Quincy, 13 of 40 units or 32.5 percent.

Sheets has said that while there is "nothing wrong" with disabled people living at the complexes--noting that Vietnam veterans, among others physically disabled, live there--the presence of the mentally ill can sometimes cause a security threat because of the uneasy mix of residents.

Recently, an elderly man at O'Brien Towers was beaten by two mentally ill men after he tried to get them to stop peering in his balcony. The two men face an eviction hearing, according to Comer.

Residents of O'Brien Towers have begun circulating a petition to ban the disabled from the complex, saying it should be a facility for senior citizens only.

Council members Monday night said the mentally ill should not be tenant of a senior housing complex.

"To have mentally ill people housed with seniors and no mental professionals is unthinkable," said Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, who added that he has asked Sheets, through Koch, to include Drohan Apartments among the buildings receiving security guards.

"It's really wrong to be putting them (mentally ill) in senior housing facilities," said Cheney. "They have to live somewhere, but putting them in these complexes is an injustice both to them and to the seniors."

Sheets and other officials have also suggested that the mentally ill should be removed from such facilities. State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Reps. Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin are currently trying to drum up support to override Gov. William Weld's recent veto of a state bill that would have capped the number of mentally ill tenants at 10 percent. Officials have said that some complexes have about 25 percent mentally ill residents.

If Weld's veto of the bill were overridden, however, it would not affect O'Brien Towers, which is federally supported, Comer said. Federal rules do not allow a cap on disabled tenants, he said.

Comer added, however, that federal regulations do allow the QHA to house the handicapped in wings or on floors of a facility separate from its elderly tenants, and that would be a possibility not only for O'Brien Towers, but also the city's other two federally-funded buildings, Pagnano Towers and Drohan Apartments.

Comer said that Sawyer Towers and Tobin Towers are state-supported facilities and therefore would be affected, if they were housing more than 10 percent mentally ill residents, by an override of Weld's veto.

Houghs Neck Legion Post Hosts 70 Wheelchair Veterans At Lobster Bake

Houghs Neck Legion Post recently hosted 70 hospitalized wheelchair veterans with a lobster bake and entertainment at the post home.

Veterans from Roxbury and Brockton VA Hospitals and the Chelsea Soldiers Home were accompanied by Recreation Directors Charles Appleton, Bernie Barrett and Iima Vanderpool from the three hospitals.

Following a seafood meal, the group was entertained by disc jockey Al Crest.

Houghs Neck Legion Post and Auxiliary members who volunteered their services were:

John Hirtle and Dan Shields, chairmen; Ray LaRue, Dick Burke, Richard Murphy, John O'Hare, Steve Frates, Russell Baratelli, James Fratolillo, Jim Macfaney, Dick Wainwright, Paul Hennessy, Albie Beratelli, Terrie Clark, Carol Gardner, Gina Laneau, Ann Barnhill, Diane Fratolillo, Noreene Stewart, Dee Elsmore, Sue Picard, Peggy O'Neil, Paul Hennessy, Cathy Dillon, Jane Sarson, Sandy Gagne, Janet Wilson, Mary Timcoe and Alice Scribner.

Grace Barr Presented Children In Crisis Award

Grace Barr, 28 Gardiner Rd., Quincy, was recently presented a Joe Long Award by The Endowment for Children in Crisis.

Barr, a Boston public school teacher for more than 25 years, is one of four recipients of the award. The award is given annually to those unsung children's heroes who "work tirelessly in the trenches, delivering services, hope and support to children at risk."

The award includes a $2,500 cash gift given in the winner's name to the non-profit organization of his/her choice.

Since 1977, Barr has been an early childhood liaison, to early intervention programs in the Boston school system. Her job is to help the transition between Early Intervention Programs and the school system's Early Childhood Program.

The job is demanding. Some children are severely disabled due to premature birth, post-natal trauma, or illness and genetics. However, almost two-thirds of the children she serves are damaged in utero due to cocaine and alcohol dependency of the mother.

Barr provides extraordinary understanding. Through her compassion and tremendous caring, she empowers families with a sense of dignity, trust and confidence.

Barr is also the founder of a summer camp for three to five year olds with disabilities so severe that they have no other camp experience available to them.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Barr graduated from Archbishop Williams High School and Framingham State College. She received her master's degree from Suffolk University.

Barr is a member of the Quincy Democratic City Committee and the Boston Teachers Union.

She and her husband, John, a retired Boston school principal, have two sons: Justin, 23, and Brendan, 21.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

People who are sensitive to the suffering and misfortune of others are generally happy people. Showing pity for others with sympathetic and kindly action is like lending a helping hand.

Jesus said on one occasion, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth . . . but lay up for yourself treasures in heaven."

Every time we do something for someone else, every time we set ourselves aside that another may live a fuller life, every time that we contribute to some project for human betterment, we are laying up spiritual treasures. If we think about the matter for a moment we realize that the only money we have truly saved unto eternity is the money we have spent unselfishly for the benefit of others. These are treasures stored away "where moth and rust do not corrupt."

By TOM SULLIVAN

After staging a gallant last minute rally to edge Marshfield, 21-20, in its opener, the Quincy football team is eagerly looking forward to Saturday's Old Colony League opener against Bridgewater-Raynham in a 1:30 game at Bridgewater's Legion Field.

B-R, a 21-0 winner over Canton in its opener, has a new coach in Dan Buron, who succeeded veteran coach Frank Almeida. A year ago Quincy tied B-R, 14-14.

"We saw them against Canton and they are strong," said Quincy coach Jack Rayner, "They run a wishbone similar to that of Almeida's."

The Presidents handed Marshfield two first-half touchdowns with first-game mistakes and had to be satisfied with a 13-13 halftime tie instead of being up by two touchdowns.

Trailing, 20-13, with 3:29 left in the game, Quincy staged a stunning comeback and quarterback Mike Bartlett, who had an excellent game, hit sophomore Terry Bowman with a 21-yard touchdown pass and Raymer went for the two points. Bowman rushed for the two points which put Quincy ahead , 21-20.

It took a key interception by Quincy's Steve Provos on the final play of the game to preserve the win.

"This was a great win and it was one o the finest comebacks since I've been coach," said Raymer. "These kids just never gave up and we ground them down at the end. We are a young team (three sophomores in the starting lineup) and we are going to make mistakes. Patience will be a key, but this is a great game to build on."

Bowman had a fine game as did junior Sam Brown, each playing in his first varsity game. Tom Malvesti, also playing his first varsity game, also stood out.

Bowman rushed for 64 yards, caught the touchdown pass which put Quincy within a point and added the winning two points. "He's a real hustler and you re going to see a lot of him," Raymer said.

Brown rushed for 67 yards and Mike Elder for 30 yards. Bartlett was 5-for-9 for 58 yards and a touchdown.

"Mike was outstanding and ran the team very well," Raymer said. He showed a lot of poise and he will be better than last year."

Marshfield had a huge line, but Quincy rushed for 160 yards in addition to 58 through the air. "I thought our rushing game was all right and we will have a good passing game," said Raymer.

Quincy held the Rams to 134 yards overall, 57 on the ground.

Defensively Raymer had good works for junior Mike Feeley, who had nine unassisted tackles; Paul Colleray, John Green, Jason Bennett, Matt Strauchon, sophomore Bill Dunn and defensive backs Joe Gangi, Tim Dowling, who had two interceptions, and Provost, who had his game-saving interception.

Raymer also praised the work on offense of Malvesti, who had a key reception, Jason Sova, who had two catches; Dave D'Olympio, sophomore Peter Kolson, Jeff Burrell, Feeley and Butch Palaza.

The Presidents drove from their 37, eating up nearly five minutes, to score on their first possession. Bowman capped the drive with a seven-yard scoring run and Elder kicked the extra point.

Marshfield got its first big break when its punt was fumbled, giving the Rams the hall on Quincy's seven. Jay Brown scored from the three and Rob Studley's conversion kick tied it at 7-7.

Midway through the second quarter Marshfield got another big break when the pass from center went over Elder's head on a punting situation and the Rams had the ball on the Presidents' six. Matt Bearce scored but the extra point kick was no good and the Rams held a 13-7 lead.

Quincy came right back and drove from its 48 following the kickoff and Bartlett scored from the one on a keeper. Elder's kick was wide and the teams were tied, 13-13, at halftime.

Midway through the third quarter Marshfield made good on fourth and four from the four as Don Robocheau hit Sean Morey in the back of the end zone to put the Rams out in front, 20-13, following Studley's conversion kick.

Then came the President's great comeback.

"We played with a lot of heart and Bartlett displayed the leadership qualities we needed," Raymer concluded.

Volleyball

North Girls Eye Third Straight Title

The North Quincy girls' volleyball team is picked by many to win its third straight Div. 1 championship.

No Div. 1 team has ever won three state titles in a row.

Monday they defeated Falmouth, 2-0, and in their opener they topped Durfee, 2-0 (15-0, 15-9).

Friday they will host Dennis-Yarmouth and next Tuesday will play at Medway at 7:30 p.m.

In the opener sophomore Sara Stanton had nine straight service points, Capt. Maureen McCarthy had eight kills and Linda Jellison had five kills.

Coach Jim Rendle has only three returnees from last year's undefeated state champions, seniors McCarthy, Heather Simmons and Wendy Sweetser. They join sophomore Stanton, Jellison and Jen Teahan in the starting lineup.

Three of last year's players are now starting in college: Regina Murphy at Yale, Joanne Curreri at Rutgers and Heather Rendle at Bucknell.

Apaches Edge Panthers, 8-0

The North Quincy Apaches scored with less than three minutes left in the game to edge the Quincy Point Panthers, 8-0, Sunday in a re-match of their 1992 Quincy Youth Football League championship game.

This Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium the Apaches (2-0) will meet the Elks (0-2) at 6 p.m. and the Panthers (1-1) will face the Manets (1-1) at 7:30 p.m.

The Apaches-Panthers game was filled with penalties and turnovers and a fumble set up the only scored of the game.

With less than three minutes to play the Apaches quick-kicked and Jim Finn punted to the Panthers' 40.

On the first place the Panthers fumbled and Apache linebacker Dan Toland recovered on the 45. Two plays later quarterback Chris Bregoli raced to the Panther 15 and then passed to Finn for the scored. Bregoli rushed for the two-point conversion.

Pat Egan, Manny Vasquez and Josh Echelle played well on offense for the Apaches, while Toland, Fred Elfman, Matt McLaughlin and Jay Ford were standouts on defense.

Softball

Washington, Beau's Noll Playoff Winners

The Quincy Men's Softball League playoffs are under way and, in A Division, the division champion Washington Tap advanced to the semi finals by blasting Brigham and Women's Hospital, 19-3, and 6-0 behind the pitching of Larry McGue.

In B division Beau's Place defeated Liberty Lounge, 6-4, and 7-6 to advance to the semifinals against the winner of Malachy I-Washington Tap series. Steve Spencer was the winning pitcher in both games.

In the C. Division Noll Electric moved into the finals by upsetting previously undefeated Liberty Lounge (30-0), in three straight games. Noll trailed Washington Tap, two games to none but came back to tie the series at 2-2.

Stoughton 24, North Quincy 7

Raiders Hope To Re-Group Against Falmouth

Before the season opened North Quincy football coach Ken McPhee said defense would be the Raiders' strong point and that the offense would improve as the season progressed.

The first half of that prediction came true in last Saturday's opening game against Stoughton as the defense played well but the offense failed to get going as North's 14-game winning streak came to an end, 14-7.

McPhee is working hard on the offense this week as the Raiders prepare for their Old Colony League opener against Falmouth Friday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Falmouth was a 20-14 winner over Dennis-Yarmouth last week. North defeated Falmouth, 13-7, a year ago.

"We didn't play well offensively and we will have to work on that," McPhee said. "The defense, as expected, was strong and did a fine job.

"We had a couple of fine scoring chances but couldn't capitalize. We need a lot of work on our passing game and the offensive line has to improve."

Danny Duncan was under a lot of pressure and had a tough debut at quarterback with only six for 33 as he continually overthrew his receivers.

North's running game was shut down by Stoughton's big line with Sean Nee leading the way, rushing for 56 yards.

"Our secondary played well with Derek Epps, Jeremy Gott, Toby Odom and Mac Ngutter doing a fine job," McPhee said.

McPhee praised the work of the defensive line as David Pacino, Justin Dilks, Kevin Ross, Brian Raftery, Dave Carney, Glen Peterson, Sean Halpin and Nathan Gott all played well.

"This was a great win for us," said Stoughton coach Greg Burke. "No one gave us a chance. After all, they won the Old Colony League and Division 1B Super Bowl last year.

These kids showed a lot of guts out there and anyone who thinks the Hockomock League can't compete better take another look at our league." Earlier Foxboro of the Hockamock League had defeated Boston College High.

North kicked off to open the game and immediately received a tough break as Epps intercepted a pass and returned it to the Stoughton six only to have the play called back due to an inadvertent whistle. "That was a real tough break," said McPhee.

Stoughton's punt went only to the Black Knights 32 and North drove its touchdown, Duncan scoring from the one on a keeper. Ross kicked the extra point.

Late in the first half the Raiders drove to the Stoughton one-yard line, but time ran out before they could get another play off. "That was the turning point in the game and if we could have scored, it would have changed the complexion of the game," said McPhee.

Midway through the third quarter Ross punted to the Stoughton 25 and Aaron Bascon cut the outside and out raced the Raiders for a 75-yard scoring run.

Stoughton's extra point was no good but North called for roughing the kicker and the Knights went for the two points.

Shawn Tarpey rushed for the two points which put Stoughton ahead, 8-7.

With two minutes left, Tarpey clinched the win with a 250 yard scoring run. The try for the two points failed.

North had one last chance but, with 1:36 left, four straight passes could not pick up a first down and Stoughton ran out the clock.

Earlier North had reached Stoughton's 10. Stoughton held for three downs and Ross' field goal attempt had plenty of distance but went wide.

"We are young on offense but we will improve and we will bounce back," McPhee promised.

North Girls Open Season At Plymouth

The North Quincy girls' cross country team opens its season today (Thursday) at Plymouth and coach Geoff Hennessy feels his team is ready.

"Our girls have been running the last three weekends at Fresh Pond in Cambridge and our goal was to have every varsity girl at 17:30 or better for the 2.5-mile loop, but bad weather and puddles on two of the three weekends prevented that," Hennessy said.

However, the top five were close with Erin Duggan (16:44), Laura Blaikie (16:45), Katie McNamara (17:33), Erica Doherty (17:34) and Mel Gaziano (17:36) comprising the group.

"Our gap from first to fifth is only 51 seconds which is outstanding," Hennessy continued. "All the good teams are tightly pecked this way. And we have nearly two whole months to get even faster."

Others looking good include Kelly Duggan (18:18), Colleen Cotter (18:42), Chrissy Herman (18:30), Kathy Jordan (19:22) and Ursula Feurtado (19:29).

North will host Falmouth Tuesday, Sept. 28 at 3:30 at Pageant Field in a meet which will go a long way toward deciding the league title.

3 From Quincy On UMass Teams

Girls Under 12 Tryouts Saturday

The Quincy Youth Soccer League girls under 12 travel team will hold tryouts this Saturday at 10 a.m. and next Thursday at 5:30 p.m. at O'Rourke Field.

Bad Girls Reach Finals In Two Tourneys

The Quincy Bay Bad Girls 14 and under classic soccer team, coached by John Murphy, recently ended a busy summer season by playing in major tournaments in Nashua, N.H., Fairfield, CT and Norfolk, VA.

The girls had a rough sledding in the Nashua tournament, but reached the finals in the Fairfield and Norfolk events.

In the Nashua tournament the Bad Girls lost three matches to Berkshire, 4-0; Wincheser, 3-1, and Spirit of Mass., 2-0.

All three opponents were semifinalists with Winchester the eventual winner.

At Fairfield University Quincy provided two stunning upsets and reached the finals.

After dropping a 1-0 heartbreaker to Scarsdale, N.Y., Pam Farrell and Fitzpatrick scored to lead Quincy to a 2-1 victory upset over Wayne, N.J. Amanda Rork and Kristen Kelly played outstanding defense to hold on for the win.

Under the lights at Fairfield's varsity field, Quincy defeated Fairfield's number one team, 2-1, in pouring rain. Fairfield's undefeated league champion took the lead late in the game, but Quincy tied it up with a free kick by Sarah Satkevich.

Quincy's attack improved as the weather worsened and Farrell came up with the game winner with 10 minutes remaining.

In the championship game Quincy was worn down by Fairfield's B team and lost, 2-1. Quincy took the lead early on a penalty kick by Satkevich but couldn't hold on.

Quincy was presented the tournament sportsmanship award.

More than 120 teams participated in the 10th annual Lafayette Fiesta in Norfolk, VA. and Quincy placed second overall in the under 14 division.

Initially losing, 2-0, to the Reston Wildcats, the eventual tournament winner, Quincy came back with a 6-2 victory over Midlothian Blast.

Angella Hogrell and Barry had two goals each and Fitzpatrick and Satkevich one a piece. Marybeth Feeney, Kara McSweeney and Hillary O'Donoghue contributed to the win.

In the semi-finals Quincy upset a strong Manassa, VA team in a shootout. After falling behind, Hogrell tied it up and the decision would go to penalty shots.

Quincy won the shootout, 5-4, on goals by Satkevich, Kelly, Shanker, Hogrell and Good.

In the finals Quincy, with only 12 players, due to injuries, lost to Reston, the number two team in Virginia, 2-0.

Boys, Girls Tennis Clinics Start Sept. 27

The Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy School Athletic Department will offer a series of tennis clinics for boys and girls of middle school age.

The program will begin Monday, Sept. 27 and continue for four to five weeks depending upon the weather.

The program is designed to introduce the skills of tennis to middle school age participants, and will be taught by Peter Swanson, a Quincy High School tennis coach.

Swanson will visit each of the four middle schools and then establish a schedule for after school play on the courts nearest each school.

The program is free and equipment will be supplied by the recreation and school departments.

For more information contact Quincy Recreation Department at 376-1396.

MWRA May Ship Sludge Fertilizer To Utah Landfill

The MWRA Board of Directors has approved a proposal to reserve space at an existing landfill in Utah for the potential deposit of fertilizer or sludge cake produced at its Fore River processing plant in Quincy.

The out-of-state landfill proposal is in lieu of MWRA's original plan to construct and operate its own landfill in Walpole.

Under the proposal, the MWRA would sign a 30-year contract for landfill space capable of receiving up to 7.5 million tons of material, 14 times the capacity of the Walpole landfill.

The proposal, to be forwarded to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and federal court overseeing efforts to end pollution in Boston Harbor, will also contain a plan to provide for the emergency disposal of sludge product at other locations in the event the Utah facility became unusable. It also provides for beneficial use of sludge products by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In addition, the proposal would allow the MWRA to immediately commence construction of a landfill in Walpole without opposition should circumstances change so that the long-term back-up disposal needs of the MWRA are not met by the alternative plan.

Under the terms of the proposed contract, MWRA would pay ECDC Environmental of Salt Lake City, Utah, owner and operator of the landfill in East Carbon City, Utah, a $1.25 million per year reservation fee and an $80-$95 per ton tipping fee, including transportation costs, should the landfill be used. Recent use of an out-of-state landfill cost MWRA $100 per ton.

Authority officials point to two advantages with the Utah landfill proposal. First, all transportation of fertilizer or sludge products would be by rail as opposed to trucking material from Quincy to Walpole.

Second, the out-of-state landfill is immediately available. Construction of a landfill in Walpole would take a year.

License Requested For Center Restaurant

By JENNIFER DOMINICCI

Barnaby's, 215 Parkingway met with the board Tuesday to request an All Alcoholic-Common Victualer License.

It's owners, Mark Hamill, Paul Antonuccio and Bernard Sharpe, with blue prints in hand, proposed that they would like to open a restaurant.

"We're looking to open a quiet, little establishment. It will seat less than 100," said Antonuccio.

Sharpe added, "We don't want D.J.s or dancing, we just want to serve good food."

The owners were told that they would first have to meet with inspectors before any further decisions could be made.

"We could use a good restaurant in the area, though," said Police Chief Francis Mullen.

The board motioned to continue in two weeks.

City Awarded Shipyard Grant

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Rep. Ronald Mariano announce that the City of Quincy, on behalf of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth, has been awarded a $42,000 Municipal Incentive Grant for a Shipyard Redevelopment Study.

The grant, administered by the Executive Office of Communities and Development, was one of 14 Strategic Planning grants awarded in the first round of FY94 funding. The project was chosen out of 140 applications received in three categories which requested a total of $4.2 million. Only $698,000 was awarded.

"This grant will be a tremendous help to Quincy and Braintree in aiding our efforts to restore the shipyard to the tax rolls," said Morrissey. "The study will determine the best use for the property to accomplish this goal."

Mariano said he was "pleased to see the grant come to fruition. Development of the shipyard is a primary concern of mine, and I would like to see it put back to use in a productive manner while remaining sensitive to the concerns of the surrounding neighborhoods."

Municipal Incentive and Planning Grants are designed to assist local governments in the planning, management and operation of various local functions.

Stop And Shop Raises $2,000 For Crisis Center

Stop & Shop Supermarket Company's fourth annual "Food for Friends" fundraising campaign held outside the company's headquarters at 1385 Hancock St., Quincy Center, raised more than $2,000 for the Quincy Crisis Center.

Company employees and Mayor James Sheets volunteered and sold hot dogs, soft drinks, popcorn, potato chips, and ice cream. A drawing was held for tickets to Boston Red Sox and Bruins' games.

Live entertainment was provided by the Treg Monty Jazz Trio.

The joint effort raised money for the Quincy Crisis Center, a non-profit organization serving citizens of Quincy and South Shore with meals to the hungry, emergency grocery delivery for the elderly, a 24-hour crisis hot line, home visits to the elderly and others in need.

Stop & Shop matches a portion of the sale's proceeds raised. Since 1989, more than $800,000 has been raised to service agencies in need.

Board Says Dollar Saver Complied With Safety Regulations

By JENNIFER DOMINICCI

The Quincy License Board found Dollar Saver of Quincy Inc., 321 Quincy Shore Dr. to be in compliance with the city's safety regulations.

The owner, Gerson Levine, was told that he could continue to operate his store, but that it would be monitored for a short period.

The board's decision came after the issue had been in session for three weeks. Levine's sign violated public safety regulations.

Numerous letters of complaint were received by City Clerk Joseph Shea from concerned residents relative to an unsafe sign that stood 75 feet high.

Kathy Nugent, Local Building Inspector, sitting in for Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, claimed that Dollar Saver owner, Gerson Levine, failed to cooperate with city officials.

Mr. Levine received a certified letter from Nugent June 28, due to the "deteriorated condition" of the sign and the "extreme hazard" it posed to the community.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey issued a Field Correction notice August 3rd, at 12:05 p.m. at Levine's store which stated no occupancy.

"The store continued to operate regardless of the no occupancy sign that was posted," stated Nugent.

Nugent added that Levine's "blatant disregard for the safety of his patrons and the people of the area" could not be tolerated.

Levine stated that he did not fail to cooperate with city officials, "since August 4th I've tried to remove the sign."

He claimed that the party responsible for removal of the sign was at fault, not him.

However, when Nugent questioned Levine as to why he hadn't taken action before August 4, he ignored her, reiterating that it wasn't his fault.

While Levine failed to take the blame for his store's safety violations, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers volunteered more information regarding Levine's business, which includes an abandoned building.

"Residents are concerned with the condition of the abandoned building and would like to see a tenant in it to enhance the area," said Ayers.

Levine said that he was meeting with Walgreens, CVS, and Osco Drug Stores in the hopes that one of the companies would be interested in the building and help resolve the situation.

The board motioned to place the item on file and to continue to monitor the area.

Pub Hearing Postponed

The Quincy License Board postponed a hearing regarding Joe's Pub & Grub, 132 East Howard St., resulting from noise complaints, received by the Police Department from neighbors of the pub.

City Clerk Joseph Shea felt it best that all regular board members be present for the hearing. Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey was absent.

ARE YOU IN FOR A SHOCK?

Replacing worn shock absorbers not only results in a better ride and handling, but it is likely to extend the life of the tires, as well. This is due to the fact that worn shock absorbers allow wheels to move up and down excessively when going over uneven roads. As a result, the wheels are subjected to a variety of changes in the angles at which they contact the road. In time, the tires may experience undue wear on their outer edges by virtue of their improper relation to the pavement. In some cases, shocks may be so badly worn that the tires leave the road altogether. When this happens, they will scuff against the road as they remake contact. This can lead to uneven tire wear, to the point where a tire may go out of round.

HINT: Shock absorber deterioration may be so gradual that a car owner does not notice it until a passenger points it out.

For all your automotive needs and wants, including replacing your shock absorbers as well as your tires, come to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We look forward to putting our years of training and experience to work for you and your vehicle. You'll find us conveniently located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550. The Quincy Sun

Vol. 26, No. 1 • Two Sections | Thursday, September 23, 1993 | 30¢

Reprinted from the first issue of The Quincy Sun Sept. 26, 1968

Sunrise

This is the first issue of The Quincy Sun.

As you look over this complimentary copy you will notice we also call it, "Quincy's Own Weekly Newspaper."

And, that's what it is going to be--a weekly community oriented newspaper with emphasis on Quincy news.

We are not even going to try to cover the rest of the state, the nation or the world. We will leave that to other newspapers, radio and television.

We believe most Quincy residents would like to know more about what is going on right here in their own city--and why.

Our goal is to provide this information through our news columns, special features and photographs.

We intend each week to present comprehensive coverage of Quincy's government, schools, business, industries, civic, church, fraternal, social and veterans organizations.

We invite organizations and individuals to submit news items and assure you no item will be too small to print. If it is of interest to you, it is of interest to us.

That's why we call it "Quincy's Own Weekly Newspaper."

For awhile, we will sample the city with free copies of The Quincy Sun. Then we will seek paid subcriptions. In fact, subscription forms appear in this issue for those who want to become regular subscribers immediately and receive their copy of The Quincy Sun each week from now on.

We intend to improve and expand in the weeks ahead, adding new features and more news. Any suggestions you might have along this line will be greatly appreciated. This is your newspaper, too.

And, for the record, The Quincy Sun will be politically independent.

It will be fair and impartial to all--presenting both sides of issues of interest to the community.

It will cover the local news in depth and with integrity.

It will serve the community, its people, its business and industry, with respect for Quincy's proud past and dedication to a progressive future.

With your help and participation The Quincy Sun will shine brightly on the community.

New North Quincy Station Site

Major Delay Averted In Quincy MBTA Extension

DIMMOCK ST. BRIDGE nears completion for MBTA rapid transit extension to Quincy. This is view of progress looking north. Adams St., Beale St. bridges and Granite St. overpass have yet to be constructed. A new site has been selected for the North Quincy residents probably won't see the first train until early 1970 instead of Christmas, 1968 as predicted. (Photo by Roger B. Whitcomb)

A threatened potential year and a half delay in the MBTA extension to Quincy has been averted and 22 North Quincy homes spared from demolition.

Mayor James R. McIntyre disclosed last night that the planned North Quincy transit station will be relocated 350 feet, preventing an ominous "long term" construction snag and taking of the homes.

But despite the development the Mayor does not expect trains to be running to Quincy until early 1970, mainly because of a construction slowdown caused by the iron works strike. MBTA General Manager Leo Cusick had predicted the Quincy line would be in operation by Christmas 1969.

The North Quincy station, the Mayor said, will be located 350 feet north of the new West Squantum St., bridge.

Original plans were to put the station immediately under the bridge with it extending 300 feet north and south.

The locations was selected as a result of a number of hearings in 1965 and 1966.

But the new site has been designated with agreement by city officials, North Quincy merchants and the MBTA, Mayor McIntyre said.

"MBTA planners and engineers thought the original site was the best location at the time," he said. "But since the, they have run into difficulty because of the Newport Ave., extension.

"It is a space difficulty--trying to get the Newport Ave. extension, the station and tracks and the Newport Ave., ramps to West Squantum St., all under one bridge.

The Mayor had innumerable meetings with MBTA officials to hold them to their original commitments to place the station under the West Squantum St. bridge.

"But," said he, "when we saw the preliminary plans for the station under the bridge would require the taking of 22 homes in tha Holmes St. and Moscow St area, I sought a meeting with the MBTA and the North Quincy

City Council Will Discuss Incinerator Plan Saturday

The City Council's special committee on dumping and refuse problems will meet Saturday at 10 a.m. to discuss a proposal for an estimated $2 million incinerator.

The committee will explore various methods of rubbish disposal -- including compaction -- before making a final recommendation on which is best for Quincy.

"Our quarries are rapidly being filled," noted Committee Chairman George B. McDonald. "We are fast approaching a crucial stage in which a long-range rubbish disposal system must be agreed upon and thoroughly planned. We can't fool around with this any longer."

The full council membership has requested to sit with McDonald and regular committee members, Councilors Albert R. Burlaiso, Edward Graham, Arthur Tobin and John F. Koegler, at the series of upcoming meetings to help find the right answer to the problem as soon as possible.

Councilor McDonald is also inviting interested residents to attend the committee meetings in the council chamber to hear the various proposals.

At Saturday's meeting, John Forrest, president of North American Incinerator Corp. of Boston will outline his firm's proposals for either a municipally or privately operated incinerator.

McDonald said one of that firm's special incineration features is rocket-type grates for complete combustion, leaving no unburned rubbish or garbage.

He said his committee, Mayor James R. McIntyre and key department heads have been invited to inspect the North American built municipal incinerator at Greenwich, Conn. He expects the Quincy delegation to make the trip within a week.

McDonald said of particular interest to the Quincy group will be a new section added to the 30-year-old incinerator six years ago.

Its furnace, he said, burns more than 300 tons of refuse a day at a cost of $5.75 per ton. Primary combusions is at 1,850 degrees with the rubbish itself the only fuel. "There are more technological advances developed by North American since then which may be incorporated in an incinerator built today," McDonald said.

He believes Quincy would require dual 250-ton capacity burners to handle up to 500 tons of refuse a day. He estimated the Quincy Junior College has reached another milestone in its 10-year history with a fall total record enrollment of 1,687 students.

Peak Enrollment At Jr. College

The growth the school has, undergone in just a decade is shown by comparison of this figure with the first enrollment in September, 1958. Total students that opening year 35.

Of the 1,687 students this year, 711 are in the full-time Day Division-592 freshmen and 182 sophomores.

The part-time Evening Division has 976 students including:

- Evening College, 464.
- Quincy City Hospital student nurses, 51
- Evening Community Educational Services, 436.
- General Dynamics personnel, 25.

The biggest gain is the 436 students enrolled in the Evening Community Educational Services program for adults. This is nearly triple the 160 taking these courses last year.

The overall gain in total enrollment would have been considerably higher than 122 if it had not been for a drop in those taking courses at General Dynamics. There were 170 at General Dynamics last year compared to 25 this fall.

The college, keeping pace with its growth, now has three Deans assisting White. They are Hugo F. Salsiz of Quincy, Dean of Administration, Joseph J. Fiuhr, of Squantum, Dean of Students, and Richard T. Mola of Braintree, new Dean of Evening Community Educational Services.

The college offers more than 60 courses in liberal arts, business administration, secretarial and continuing education.

Between 90 and 95 per cent of Quincy Junior College graduates go on to a senior college.

The Quincy Sun

A Quarter Century

By HENRY BOSWORTH
Publisher
The Quincy Sun

It was 1968 and . . .

James R. McIntyre was in his second term as mayor and keeping a close eye on the extension of the MBTA Red Line into Quincy.

He talked them into relocating the site of the North Quincy T station 350 feet to avoid a potential costly year and a half construction delay and spare 22 homes from demolition.

The General Dynamics Shipyard was booming with a workforce of over 8,000 with 500 more jobs waiting to be filled. There were predictions the yard could soon have 10,000 workers. Back then no one would have ever thought a sludge plant lie in the future.

A Vietnam War Memorial was unveiled in Mount Wollaston Cemetery inscribed with the names of 27 residents who had given their lives in a country many of us had trouble finding on a map. Sadly, that list of names grew to over 40.

The average family income in Quincy was $11,000. Crew cuts were still in style but long hair was on its way. You could still buy a pretty nice home for under $25,000. A new Ford was going for $3,200 and you could fill the tank at 34 cents a gallon. Bread was 22 cents a loaf. You could mail a letter for six cents.

It was a good year, we thought, to launch a community weekly newspaper in Quincy,

On Sept. 26, 1968, the first issue of The Quincy Sun rolled off the press.

Other stories in that first issue:

The City Council was meeting to consider a proposed $2 million incinerator. Quincy Junior College had a record fall enrollment of 1,687 students.

Coaches Hank Conroy and Carl Leone discussed the season's prospects for their respective Quincy and North Quincy football teams. Three young beauties, Martha Gallagher, Mary Beth Golden and Pattie Ann Ridlen were competing for the "Little Miss North Quincy" crown.

There was a report from Washington by Congressman James Burke and features by Dr. Charles Djerf and Fr. John McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church. And, making its debut, a column called "Sunbeams."

The first editorial, appropriately, was entitled "Sunrise," introducing "Quincy's Own Weekly Newspaper." A letter from Mayor McIntyre welcoming us to Quincy appeared below it.

And, fortunately for us, there were also full page ads from President Chevrolet, South Shore Buick and a centerfold (two full page ads) from South Shore Television, plus a number of other various sized ads.

Initial reaction was encouraging. But some of the so-called experts who read the "Sunrise" editorial were predicting "Sunset" within six months.

There were times we thought they would be right.

But fortunately we had a foundation in South Shore Television and President Chevrolet. Remo and Pete DeNicola at South Shore TV and George Reardon at President Chevrolet strongly believed in a community newspaper and that having two newspapers in town instead of one was better for the town.

They backed that belief by commiting to large ads on a steady basis that carried us and kept us alive during those crucial early months.

Thanks largely to them and a few other advertisers, news sources and readers who also believed in a two-newspaper town, we managed to survive.

The Sun was a dime a copy then and $3.50 for a year's subscription by mail. Those who paid the $3.50 must have had faith in us considering the skeptics who were predicting we wouldn't be around for a year.

We didn't exactly take the town by storm. It was awhile before people got used to a weekly newspaper and one that also came by mail.

We still smile about those early days when our reporters would call someone and say he or she was from The Quincy Sun. It wasn't unusual to get a response like: "Who's son, did you say?"

The Sun was born in a second floor corner office in the old Quincy Conservatory of Music Building at 7 Foster St. We re-located a year later to the Mutual Building above the Kincaide Furniture store on Hancock St. which has since burned down.

In 1975 we moved to our present street location at 1372 Hancock St. We purchased it a few years ago and became a Quincy taxpayer.

Twenty five years. A quarter century. A lot has happened in that time.

We experimented with television in 1982, launching 24-hour news channel (Ch. 8) on Quincy Cablesystems, now Continental Cablevision. The program drew a good audience but there wasn't sufficient advertising revenue to sustain the operation of the channel. Reluctantly, we pulled the plug in 1990.

Down through the years, The Sun has won its share of awards for editorials, features and photography plus many community service awards.

One of the awards from our peers was the National Newspaper Foundation's Blue Ribbon Award which recognized us as "an outstanding community newspaper."

That's what we started out to be: a good community newspaper. And we are still working at it.

In the 25 years we have seen old landmarks come down and future ones go up. We have covered the inaugurations of six mayors and recorded Quincy's economic ups and downs, its community issues and controversies, and sadly, we have bid farewell to many friends, some prominent, some not.

We have seen our first young newscarriers grow up, go off to college or to war, get married and have children of their own.

We have been asked: "What is your favorite edition of The Sun?"

The first one would have to be our favorite because that was the beginning. But if we had to pick our other favorite it would be the Feb. 9, 1978 issue: The Blizzard of '78.

Though Quincy and the area was paralyzed by 27 inches of snow, we managed to bring in a skeleton staff and got the paper out Friday—just one day late. The banner headline over the storm story and photos of the driving snow pleaded: "Please, No More!"

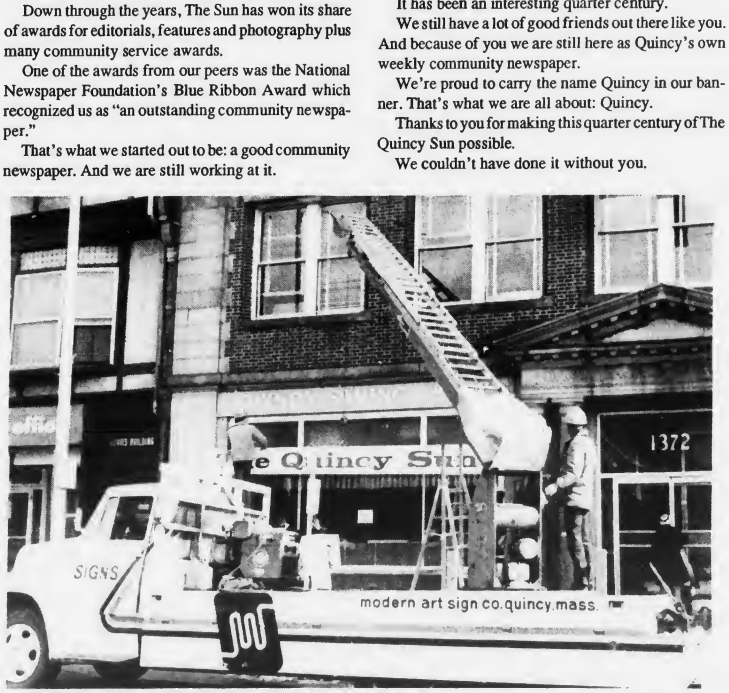
It has been an interesting quarter century.

We still have a lot of good friends out there like you. And because of you we are still here as Quincy's own weekly community newspaper.

We're proud to carry the name Quincy in our banner. That's what we are all about: Quincy.

Thanks to you for making this quarter century of The Quincy Sun possible.

We couldn't have done it without you.



THE QUINCY SUN sign went up at our third and present location in the old Quincy Savings Bank Building, 1372 Hancock St., Feb. 25, 1975.

Dear Henry

As Mayor of the City of Quincy, may I welcome to our community The Quincy Sun and wish it every success.

It is imperative in these modern times that our people in Quincy know and understand the problems of the community and there is no better way than to have the issues of the day presented objectively, analytically, and fairly in a newspaper presentation. It is no less important that the people know what transpires in the community, that the government be given an opportunity to present its news and views, and that business and community organizations get adequate news space so their fellow citizens can know about the day to day activities and the direction in which Quincy is going.

I am pleased that The Sun has chosen Quincy for its location, and I am sure that the people of our fine City will be well informed.

My best personal wishes to you.

Very truly yours,

James R. McIntyre

Dear Henry & Bob:

Many years ago, Henry, you had a dream ... you wanted to print a newspaper which was dedicated only to the citizens of Quincy, and, so, The Quincy Sun became a reality and the first issue was published in September 1968.

You have made available to Quincy residents ALL the important news of the day, from that which pertains to the City's governmental activities, to the births and deaths, and sports activities. Community associations have been given the opportunity to publicize their programs.

During those years many improvements have been made to your paper along with format changes, all of which have made the paper first-class!

On behalf of the citizens of Quincy and my administrative staff I extend sincere congratulations to you on the occasion of your TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY!

Sincerely,

JAMES A. SHEETS

Shipyard Workforce Over 8,000

•Construction of the MBTA Red Line went ahead after 22 homes were saved from demolition when the extension was moved 350 feet.

•City Council President J. Vincent Smyth proposed a 10-member youth council to give kids a louder voice in community politics after he cited breakdown in law and order and increased use of drugs.

•The Hong Kong Flu was expected to hit hard. Vaccinations were the order of the day.

•Quincy Police Chief Francis Finn recommended a $2,800 closed circuit TV system to film on-the-spot accurate recordings in the event of a youth riot.

•Jordan Marsh announced plans for its distribution center--the largest in America--in Quincy. Completion was slated for the 1970s.

•Mayor James McIntyre proposed legislation giving law enforcement officers the authority to make on the spot arrests for suspected false prescriptions and illegal possession of harmful drugs in an effort to crack down on Quincy's drug problem.

•In an effort to allow General Dynamics to bid on contracts for super-size ships, Mayor McIntyre directed the Department of Public Works to widen the span of the Fore River Bridge 300 feet.

•Quincy was linked to the Natural Warning System, or "hot line," to give the city a two-minute warning in case of a nuclear attack or disaster.

McIntyre Pledges Revaluation Fight

•Mayor James McIntyre, in his mid-term address, promised to fight against citywide property reassessment-revaluation--which he said could have a negative impact on the "small homeowner."

•Quincy experienced its most crippling storm in decades when 71.5 inches of snow were dumped during several northeasters. Some 15,000 homes in the Quincy-Weymouth area lost power. Mayor McIntyre sought federal aid to allow Quincy and other communities to use Army equipment to battle the storms.

•1000 Southern Artery was on its way to becoming the largest elderly housing facility in the country when contracts were signed for a 226-unit addition.

•The city's tax rate threatened to rise to $20 to $30 from $98.90 if the $4 million hike in municipal budget requests were approved.

•City Hall was draped in black and a memorial service was held at First Parish Church to mourn the passing of former President Dwight D.

(Con't On Page 6A)

Eisenhower.

•The City Council approved a record $34,594,682 budget. Taxpayers faced a $112-$115 tax rate.

•Ruth Gordon won the Academy Award for best supporting actress for her role in "Rosemary's Baby." Upon receiving the award, the 72-year-old Quincy-born actress said, "This is very reassuring."

•Representing one of the largest single changes in two prospective branches, 21 men were appointed to the Police and Fire Departments. The appointments made a police narcotics division possible.

•At a packed two-hour City Council meeting, the issue of a Mechanic St. parking lot was debated with proponents arguing the lot was an economic necessity and opponents saying storeowners should provide their own parking areas. The parking lot proposal fell through.

•As of May 15, General Dynamics still had 500 jobs to fill with the payroll at $70,070,435.

•Ground was broken for a $5 to $6 million electronic research and development laboratory complex in the Echo Lake area.

•The Houghs Neck Congregational Church, erected in 1894, turned 75 years old.

•The $15 million South Shore Community College faced delays for at least a year. By year's end Mayor McIntyre introduced legislation to take 90 acres in the Echo Lake area by eminent domain for the school.

•McIntyre was re-elected to his third and last term as mayor.

•Court action was threatened by the mayor against the Metropolitan District Commission unless something was done to alleviate morning traffic jams at Neponset Bridge.

City's Population Down

Quincy's population is down.

The 1970 United States census showed 87,966 residents.

The current state census lists the population at 86,343--down 1,623 according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

City's Official Flower

Did you know that the Forget-Me-Not is the official flower of Quincy?

A vote by the 1974-75 City Council declared that the Forget-Me-Not should thus be remembered.

An Observation

Quincy Patrolman Thomas Scanlon, a familiar figure in the City Hall area, was quoted in The Sun's first issue Sept. 26, 1968 on the long-hair and beads fad among many young males.

"I suppose," he said, "it won't be long before one of them comes up and reports, 'Officer, someone just stole my handbag.'"

Quincy Seen 'Boom Town' Of The 70's

•The Quincy Police Department planned several innovative law enforcement programs such as closed circuit TV, computerized traffic signal systems, and a training program to help police officers recognize family crises and cope with them.

•Mayor James McIntyre, predicting another substantial tax hike, said he'd reject general pay increase requests for city employees and would cut department budgets to the bone.

•Nearly 2,000 more tradesmen were sought by General Dynamics, making this year the busiest year in Quincy shipbuilding.

•Mayor McIntyre slashed $997,475.27 from the budget during an 18 hour marathon budget session, thereby saving $5 on the 1970 tax hike.

•Adoption of zoning proposals and the new MBTA extension led some Harvard Business School students to refer to Quincy as the "boom town" of the 1970s.

•Creation of a concentration air pollution control district for Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth was sought.

•A record high $39.9 million budget was passed. Property owners faced a possible $130-plus tax rate.

•A longtime Quincy Square landmark, the Waldorf Restaurant, was demolished to make way for the MBTA parking lot.

•A walk-in center, telephone hot line, and residential home for addicts to receive treatment were all part of "Survival Inc.," a Quincy program for youths with drug problems.

•The cost of municipal services were shown to go up $23.4 million in 10 years.

•Homeowners in flood-prone areas were able to obtain flood insurance at a rate of $4 to $5 per $1,000 coverage.

•A public opinion poll by Mayor McIntyre showed an overwhelming majority of local residents felt the City Council should have the right to cut the School Department budget. School Committee Vice Chairman James F. McCormick denounced the poll.

•An estimated 20 homes needed to be cleared in order for the planned Lincoln-Hancock School to be built.

•An anti-pollution petition signed by the 500 Quincy Point residents was presented at the State House hearing opposing a fuel oil burning variance for Boston Edison's North Weymouth station.

•Montclair School Principal Leon Gould tried out the Japan-tested classroom television teaching method.

•The Quincy High School Presidents went to the Orange Bowl--as spectators--after funds were raised for the undefeated football team. The Quincy Fathers Club spearheaded the drive.

GENERAL DYNAMICS Shipyard was booming in the 1970s. Here the Goliath Crane lifts giant sphere aboard an LNG tanker in 1977.

•Raymond Crombie of Quincy, who played Santa for six South Vietnam orphanages, had a surprise Christmas visit at his home from six South Vietnamese students.

The T Arrives At Last, Jobless Figure Doubles

•The multimillion South Shore MBTA line opened 12 years after the Old Colony Railroad line was shut down. The "Kiss/Ride" stopping area was created for people dropping spouses off to catch the train.

•Creation of a coordinator position to gear private and public drug programs was one of Mayor James McIntyre's goals for the year after drug arrests soared 180 percent by the end of 1970.

•Starting in February, 36 families were relocated so construction of the Lincoln-Hancock School could begin.

•A pilot program at Snug Harbor School where more than half the students would receive hot lunches free and the others would pay 30 cents met with controversy. Proponents of the program call it a necessity. Opponents said the program was not an education program and that home rule was being taken from Quincy in favor of state law.

•The Quincy Police Betterment Association picketed City Hall for a $12,500 maximum salary, seniority benefits, a "bill of rights," and a revised work schedule.

•A water ban went into effect from noon to 9 p.m. in the summer because of a water use increase of one million gallons over the year before.

•The community of Post Island and the Fort Square United Presbyterian Church both celebrated their 75th birthdays.

•Walter Hannon defeated Joseph Brett 17,966 to 15,373 to become the 24th mayor of Quincy succeeding James McIntyre.

•Monsignor Joseph F. Maguire of St. John's Church was named Auxiliary Bishop of Boston by Pope Paul VI.

Deaths included Dr. A. Paul Gossard, 73, retired superintendent of schools for 19 years; J. Ernest (Honey) Collins, 84, a member of the Park and Recreation Board for 33 years; Dr. Kenneth P. White, president of Quincy Junior College; William J. Martin, 35, president of South Shore National Bank.

Dear Henry:

As we celebrate the success of the 1993 MDA Labor Day Telethon, I want to extend my personal thanks to you for your paper's 25 years of support for our Telethon and MDA's programs of research and services. With the help of caring news media like the Quincy Sun and of your readers, we've been able to make tremendous progress toward our goal of eradicating neuromuscular disease.

Congratulations on your 25th anniversary. I know the citizens of Quincy deeply appreciate the great service you give your community.

Best wishes on the next 25 years.

God bless you.

Love,

Jerry

General Dynamics Lands $350 Million Contract

•Mayor Walter Hannon, in his inaugural address to perhaps the largest crowd to witness such an event, pledged to appoint a coordinator to study the General Dynamics "situation and seek quality investment in Quincy." He said he would also appoint a coordinator of drug programs in the Mayor's office, and provide more housing for the elderly.

•A record $52 million municipal budget, representing an increase of $4.8 million, was presented to the City Council. The budget would bring the tax rate to $164.20.

•Council President Arthur Tobin appointed a committee to investigate Mayor Hannon's charges of drinking, absenteeism and theft in the Quincy Water Department. No basis for the charge was found.

•After some careful consideration, the School Committee unanimously recommended the WMEX property in Montclair Marshes be considered for the new North Quincy High School.

GRAND OPENING--An auto with Mrs. Kathryn Curtis, 86, of 1000 Southern Artery at the wheel and Mayor Walter Hannon as her passenger crashes (on purpose) through a paper sign to officially open the new 900-car Quincy Center Parking Plaza in November, 1972. (Quincy Sun Photo)

•Two hundred and fifty 10-cent parking meters were installed in Quincy Center. City Councillor Clifford H. Marshall, who was also chairman of the council's Ordinance Committee, said there was no ordinance to cover their installation and they may have been illegal.

•The Duke of Windsor died. The late duke gave up the throne to marry former Quincy resident Wallis Simpson. She had lived on Davis St. in North Quincy from 1917-18.

•The Quincy High School Marching Band was invited to join the Cotton Bowl festivities. The North Quincy High School Band was invited to march in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin. All that was needed was $55,000. Quincy made it by year's end.

•Bonfires and fireworks were banned for the Fourth of July due to ecology and economy reasons.

•A firebomb caused $50,000 damage to the former Hunting School in Houghs Neck.

•A HUD (Housing and Urban Development) $885,284 grant cleared the way for completion of the Quincy Point Improvement Project.

•Mayor Hannon, the Shipbuilders Union, Chamber of Commerce and Quincy Center Business and Professional Association sought signatures for a petition to demand the Nixon administration find work for General Dynamics.

Deaths included William C. Edwards Sr., 78, city historian for 45 years; Mryon N. Lane, 64, former district attorney of Norfolk County (1954-66); Dr. Bradford E. Gale, 64, former pastor of United First Parish Church; and Harry Pavan, city solicitor (1965-72).

Congratulations and Best Wishes to the Bosworth Family and The Quincy Sun for 25 years of Outstanding Community News Coverage.

$100 Million Revitalization Plan For Downtown

•A $3,000 pledge from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association made possible the beginning of a $45,000 downtown redevelopment study and master plan.

•The tax rate fell $1.10 instead of rising. The new rate was $154.30.

•An almost snowless winter saved the city more than $200,000.

•In his midterm address, Mayor Walter Hannon pledged, among other things, to establish a program to reduce municipal spending; a commitment to acquisition of open space, a "Spring Offensive" to clean up the city, a Historic Zoning Committee, and a city-wide cultural redevelopment study and master plan.

•Taxpayers were invited to voice their opinions about the budget during regular Saturday meetings and by submitting written statements to the City Council through their ward councillors.

•The North Quincy High School Band headed for Ireland for the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin.

•The South Quincy Civic Association circulated a petition opposing the proposed South Quincy MBTA station and parking facility. The goal was 20,000 signatures.

•Realigning Quincy into eight zones, which might have caused one of the largest numbers of people running for the City Council, fell by the wayside after several months of publicity and discussion. Realigning Quincy was one idea to make voting precincts more equal in compliance with a Superior Court order.

•Quincy residents started having their Social Security numbers engraved on valuables to cut down on thefts.

•A farewell party was held to say goodbye to the 88-year-old Hancock School and the 84-year-old Lincoln School. Both were to be replaced by the $5 million Lincoln-Hancock School.

The name "Richard M. Nixon" was under consideration.

•Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter was made an honorary citizen of Quincy. The future president was in town to speak at the South Shore Council of Church's breakfast.

•Gov. Francis Sargent paid a congratulatory visit to Faxon House, Quincy's alcoholism detoxification center, in the wake of a new law which states alcoholism is not a crime but an illness and alcoholics should not be arrested.

•A group of mothers demanded an interim bag lunch program be instituted until the hot lunch program, which was mandatory by law and which would be delayed, went into effect. School Committee Vice Chairman Paul Kelly called the demand "ridiculous" because it would mean hiring matrons on a temporary basis.

•Communion was distributed by lay people for the first time in Quincy's Catholic churches.

In the wake of two Quincy shootings within a week, Dist. Atty. George G. Burke called for tougher gun control.

•The Hilgenhurst Report, which was applauded by political and business leaders, outlined a $100 million proposal to revitalize Quincy which included 300,000 square feet of shopping space, 4,000 new housing units, and gradual transformation of Hancock St. between Revere Rd. Cottage Ave. into a pedestrian mall.

•Quincy got set to tighten its belt during the energy crisis after warnings that came from sources all the way up to the president. Warnings were spurred when one of New England Power Co.'s biggest generating stations--at Brayton Point--came within two hours of simply running out of fuel.

•City Councillor James Sheets proposed fencing off Swingles Quarry in the wake of two deaths. Robert Hanson and Caroline Echardt died climbing the ledge. Eventually the grout, a huge pile of discarded granite boulders, was removed and signs were posted.

Deaths included Dr. Charles Djerf, 62, a member of the School Committee for 16 years (1954-69); Russell T. Bates, 80, city councillor, state rep, county commissioner, and son of former Mayor Gustav B. Bates; James D. Asher, 59, founder of WJDA and host of "Breakfast with JDA"; James F. McCormick, Sr., 60, a member of the school Committee for 12 years (1960-71) and "father" of the Vo Tech School; and Msgr. John J. Allston, 78, retired pastor of St. Joseph's Church.

Five New City Councillors Take Oath Of Office

•In the biggest political turnover in Quincy's history, five new councillors began their terms of office. The five: Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly, Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon Jr., Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets, Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers and Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington.

•Mayor Walter Hannon, beginning his second year of office, pledged in his inaugural address to attack the unemployment problem in Quincy. He also advocated the development of downtown Quincy and attempted to add to the tax base and employ local people with projects similar to Kemper Insurance and the State Street South complex.

•Sen. Edward Kennedy, in a visit to The Quincy Sun in January, predicted a big year for the General Dynamics shipyard. Kennedy said there would be an increase in shipbuilding contracts.

•Residents rallied to aid five-year-old Tammy Stuart, who was mauled by dogs near the Snug Harbor Housing Projects. Thousands of dollars were raised for plastic surgery.

•In October, evidence against former Cemetery Supt. Anthony Famigletti by Special Investigator J. Blake Thaxter was presented before a Norfolk County grand jury. The investigation, stemming from alleged irregularities within the Cemetery Department, had been going on for over a year. Famigletti was forced to resign.

•A random telephone survey conducted by The Quincy Sun concerning then-President Richard M. Nixon in February: 31.4 percent of those favored his resignation; another 31.4 percent favored him completed the term; 25.7 percent advocated impeachment and 11.4 percent were undecided.

Six months later, following Nixon's resignation, another Sun survey found 60.6 percent in favor of prosecution.

•Quincy's unemployment rate hit 10.57 percent during January and February. According to the Office of Manpower Affairs, the city's unemployment rate increased 4 percent during three consecutive six-month periods.

•Eighteen hundred production workers at the Fore River Shipyard walked off the job in March, marking the beginning of a 123-day strike of Local 5. An eventual three-year contract gave the workers of Local 5 a $1.48 per hour across-the-board pay raise over 3 years with insurance, retirement disability and other benefits. The loss to all parties during the strike was estimated in the millions of dollars.

•Political hopefuls made an appearance at The Quincy Sun in August, one month before state primaries. Visitors included: Attorney General candidates Barry Hannon, Charles Cabot, Francis X. Bellotti, Edward O'Brien, William Cowin and George Sacco; Democratic candidate for state treasurer Mark Furcolo; and gubernatorial hopeful Michael Dukakis. Visiting at various times afterward were Thomas P. O'Neil III and Kitty Dukakis.

•Rep. Joseph Brett was elected to his ninth term. Also elected were Rep. William Delahunt, Rep. Thomas Brownell, State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, Auditor Thaddeus Buczko, Congressman James Burke, Senator Arthur Tobin, Dist. Atty. George G. Burke and County Commissioner Thomas K. McManus.

•The 78-year-old business of Old Colony Laundries, Inc., came to an end due to union pressures, drop in work incentive and spiraling operations and supply costs.

•Machine guns were added to the Police Department weapons in response to a 40 percent rise in the city's crime rate. Defending his controversial stance, Mayor Hannon said the Police Department needed to fight crime with equal force.

•The 246 nurses who had turned in their resignations changed their minds when a 30-month contract between city officials and the hospital nurses union gave them a $1,220 pay hike.

Deaths included Billy DeWolfe, 67, movie comedian who grew up in Quincy as Billy Jones; and Edward T. (Red) Lewis, 68, last Plan E City Manager of Quincy (1956-58).

LaRaia Wins Recount To Defeat Hannon

•Joseph J. LaRaia was declared the mayoral winner after a recount ironically requested by incumbent Walter J. Hannon showed six blocks of 50 votes originally credited Hannon belonged to LaRaia. It gave LaRaia a 438 vote victory, heralding the start of a tumultuous mayoral term.

•James A. Sheets became Ward 4 city councillor and state representative. Sheets started his political career by running for City Council to give his Quincy Junior College students a gist of governmental workings.

•Other election results were: Councillors-at-Large Arthur Tobin and John J. Quinn, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon Jr., Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers, and Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington, all re-elected.

Newcomers to the City Council were Councillor-at-Large Paul Harold and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel J. Raymondi.

•School Committee winners were Christopher Kennedy, Patricia Toland, and Francis X. McCauley.

AMELIO DELLA CHIESA who served 12 years as Mayor--eight years inder Plan A and four under Plan E--died in 1975. He served the longest of Quincy's Mayors

•The City Council requested a $12 million bond issue for an addition-renovation to North Quincy High School. The State School Building Assistance Bureau denied them the money.

•Max Zides of the singing team of Hum 'n' Sturm, died 12 days after he and partner of 35 years Tom Currier were honored at the awards dinner of the Montclair Men's Club.

Deaths included Charles H. Wickens, 70, founder of the Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home; Albert L. Grahn, 77, founder of Grahn's Bakery; James J. Collins, 70, who covered Quincy for The Boston Globe for a half century; and William F. Ryan, 52, recreation director of Quincy for 20 years.

JOSEPH LaRAIA and his wife, Louise, and young daughter are all smiles after recount in 1975 showed him to be the winner over Mayor Walter Hannon.

WALL-TO-WALL PEOPLE--Hancock St. in downtown Quincy was jammed from one side of the street to the other for an Easter shopping promotion in March, 1975. The Easter Bunny, atop one of the buildings, dropped ping-pong Easter eggs which were good for prizes at stores. Eager hands are stretched and waiting. LaRaia Begins Stormy Term •Upon taking the oath of office to become the 25th mayor of Quincy, Joseph J. LaRaia began a term which would be marred by scandal, questionable appointments, and bitter scrutiny by the City Council.

•LaRaia began his term in 1976 with the "January Massacre," during which he cleaned out the remaining people from Walter Hannon's and James McIntyre's administrations, citing a need of individuals "in those positions who will serve with regard to my goals and not in opposition with them."

•After some bitter arguing, LaRaia agreed to a $13.5 million project to renovate the 50-year-old North Quincy High School, $1.5 million less than originally planned. Controversy over the high school also stemmed from the fact that the Kent Corp. and clerk of the works were both working as liaison between contractor and city to speed up the project. Kent was getting $310,000. The clerk was getting $600 a week.

•Mayor LaRaia locked horns with both Police Chief Francis Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry. The mayor cut $700,000 from Finn's budget proposal and $950,000 from Barry's budget proposal for the year.

•The tax rate was set at $194.60, a hike of $34.90. The mayor blamed the unprecedented boost on underbudgeting in Hannon's administration and interference by Council President Arthur Tobin.

•In a probe of the 1975 mayoral election in which LaRaia won by 484 votes on a controversial recount, Quincy District Judge Albert L. Kramer found flaws in the election system. He said it could be improved by eliminating the flash count system of quick vote counting, doublechecking tally entries by the warden and clerk, and prohibiting employees and families of candidates from working as election officers and providing badges to election officials to make them recognizable.

•WJDA personality Mary Johnson of Merrymount, who with her husband, Russ, had met Jimmy Carter when he came to the state in 1973, died from cancer a few days after Carter won the election. When Mrs. Johnson was in the hospital, Carter personally sent her a bouquet of roses.

•Ruby C. Bigelow of North Quincy turned 100. She received a plaque from Mayor LaRaia and letters from President Gerald Ford and Gov. Michael Dukakis.

•At 14,772 students in September, the 1976-77 Quincy school enrollment was the lowest in 10 years.

•The blue laws were black and blue when a number of Quincy stores threw the 250-year-old statute to the wind by staying open Sunday. Five stores were cited for violations by the Police Department the first Sunday they stayed open.

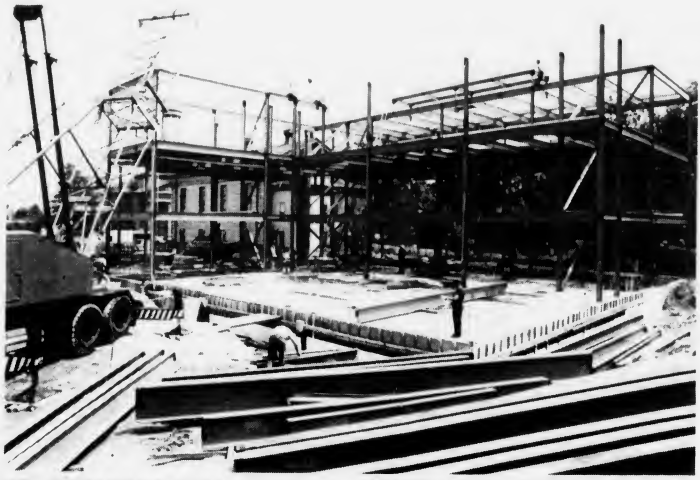
•Deaths included: Mrs. Evelyn Della Chiesa, widow of former Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa; Mrs. William F. McIntyre, 72, mother of former Mayor James McIntyre; Michael J. Peatridge, 23, information officer for Mayor LaRaia; Anthony Venna, 76, former Quincy Welfare Commissioner; Frank G. Kelly, former news photographer and founder of Quincy Track Club; Joseph P. Collins, co-founder and director of the Quincy Detoxification Center; Paul Nigro, 17, president of the National Honor Society at Quincy High School; Alfred Raymondi, superintendent of the Quincy Highway Department and father of Daniel G. Raymondi.



STEEL GIRDERS FOR new City Hall began to sprout in August, 1978 on what used to be the city employees parking lot. Old City Hall, now the James R. McIntyre Government Center, can be seen at left. Plans for the new building were made during Mayor Joseph LaRaia's administration and the structure completed under Mayor Arthur Tobin.

Tobin Ousts LaRaia, School Enrollment Drops

•City Councillor Arthur H. Tobin overpowered incumbent Joseph LaRaia 19,096 to 14,046 in the city election to become mayor-elect of Quincy.

•Judge Ellis F. Brown ruled that LaRaia's appointment of Lt. Corady Solimini as Inspector of Divisions in the Police Department, a position second only to that of Police Chief, exceeded the mayor's power boundaries.

The injunction obtained by Finn prevented LaRaia from getting information from Rowell and put Rowell on Special Services, but granted LaRaia the right to look at records of the hearing and punishment of three Quincy Police officers who were involved in a bookmaking incident in 1976.

•LaRaia, Chief Finn and Fire Chief Edward Barry were at it again. The mayor proposed a three-member commission to supervise operation of the Police and Fire Departments, much to the chagrin of the two chiefs.

•In March, LaRaia and the City Council began yet another battle over the budget, particularly the $3.4 million supplementary budget LaRaia sent to the council to cover some last minute pay increases for city employees. Budget Coordinator Sarah Saccone wouldn't answer any questions about a $600,000 mistake in the budget, and the council wouldn't listen to the person she wanted to speak for her.

•A $2.40 hike in the tax rate was something of a contrast to the $34.90 of the year before.

•Aside from Tobin's victory, other election winners included:

Joanne Condon, the second woman ever elected to the City Council, defeated Walter J. Hickey to win the Ward 6 seat vacated by Dennis Harrington to run at-large; Mary Collins and Joan Picard, elected to the School Committee defeating Frank Anselmo and Charles T. Sweeny; John J. Sullivan re-elected to the School Committee; Francis X. McCauley elected Councillor-at-Large from the School Committee; Stephen J. McGrath, 24, who upset Ward 5 Councillor Warren A. Powers; Paul D. Harold re-elected Councillor-at-Large; Leo J. Kelly, Ward 1 Councillor; Daniel J. Raymondi, Ward 2; John J. Lydon Jr., Ward 3, and James A. Sheets, Ward 4.

•A new state law permitted stores to stay open between noon and 5 p.m. on the four Sundays preceding Christmas.

•For the second time in three years 5,000 members of Local 5 at General Dynamics walked off the job and remained out nearly three months. Local 5 President Stanley Kyller cited a need for wage parity with all East Coast shipyards.

•Building developments that didn't exactly go as smooth as silk included: a $5 million shopping plaza on the site of the old Squantum Naval Air Station, stalled by the Board of Zoning Appeals; $120 million development with a 3,000 apartment complex called Marina Landing, including housing for elderly, recreational facilities and a hostel. And a $35 million plan by the Boston Celtics at State Street South in Montclair was shot down by opposition from Mayor LaRaia and residents.

•Upland Rd. was rededicated the Thomas S. Burgin Parkway in honor of the former Mayor and State Senator.

•Quincy High School's Marching Presidents won the state high school marching band competition in the Christmas Festival Parade but turned down a second prize trip to the Cotton Bowl parade in Dallas.

•Mayor LaRaia and his planning director, L. Norman Lundin, revealed a revitalization plan for downtown Quincy which would include a highway from Granite St. to McGrath Highway, an international merchandise mart, a high rise motel and an office building. The plan drew mixed reviews.

•Once again school enrollment dropped, this time to 14,260, the lowest in 20 years. School Supt. Lawrence Creedon announced prophetic plans to close down three or four schools.

•An amount of $2.44 million was appropriated for an annex to be built on the parking lot behind the 133-year-old City Hall.

•Deaths in 1977 included: Mrs. Charles A. Ross, 95, widow of the former mayor of Quincy; M. Joseph Sweeney, 69, president of Sweeney Funeral Service, Inc.; Judge Kenneth Nash, 88, justice of Quincy District Court for 52 years; George H. Bonsail, 82, retired president of Quincy Savings Bank; Roland Josselyn, 93, the grand old man of Houghs Neck; John P. Flavin, 75, former state representative, city councillor and city solicitor; Harry E. Rodgers, 87, widely known Wollaston musician and Masonic organist; Joseph H. Tobin, 64, co-founder of WJDA.

ARTHUR H. TOBIN and his wife, Shirley, celebrate his victory over Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia in November, 1977.

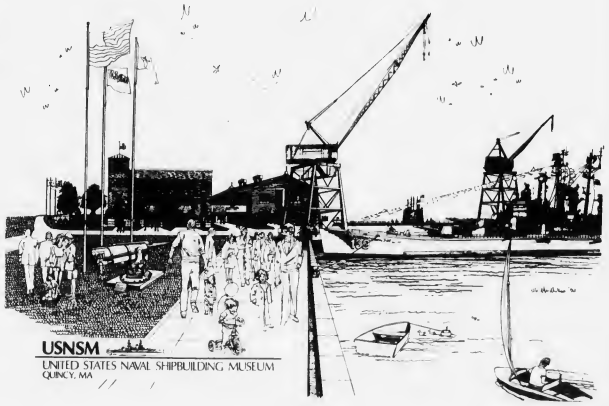
The U.S. Naval & Shipbuilding Museum salutes

The Quincy Sun

for your 25 years of service to the Quincy community ....

Our History Is Our Future!



... and your continuing support of our efforts to bring the U.S.S. SALEM home!

This is it! Final arrangements are being made now for the SALEM's arrival at the Fore River Shipyard in early October. Check The Quincy Sun every week for details. Or call the U.S. Naval & Shipbuilding Museum (USNSM) office for more information: (617) 479-7900.

The Blizzard Of '78: 27 Inches Of Snow!

•It was more than a snowstorm. It was more than a week or three off from school. It was the Blizzard of '78--THE blizzard of the century, in which 27 inches of snow was dumped in Quincy, bringing the city to a veritable halt.

•Arthur Tobin was sworn in as the 26th Mayor of Quincy, expressing a desire to unite the people "and with a fresh spirit launch our city on a new beginning." Among his top priorities was downtown revitalization.

•City Councillor Paul Harold announced his candidacy for state senate, citing the probable less than adequate attention Tobin could give to Quincy by holding down both jobs as mayor and senator at the same time, and won by less than 2,000 votes in the September primary and by an astounding 23,693 vote landslide over Jens Thornton.

•Cong. James A. Burke (D-Milton), who represented Quincy in Washington for 20 years, announced he would not run for re-election due to diabetes. He was succeeded by Brian Donnelly.

•The Tobin administration approved a $10 million home office building for the National Fire Protection Association on 42.5 acres of Pine Hill in West Quincy.

•Tobin referred to Campanelli Properties' construction of a 10-story, $10 million office building in Quincy Sq. as a "catalyst" to spark downtown revival. But in an exclusive by The Sun, concerning the lack of information on the proposed East-West Connector downtown businessmen were getting, touched off a flurry of meetings.

•Francis McCauley resigned from the School Committee to assume his new duties as City Councillor-at-Large. Frank Anselmo, School Committee veteran, succeeded him.

•A $7 million deficit left over from the previous mayoral administration. A five-year, $6.7 million bond issue was proposed by Tobin to cover the debt. Eventually the bond issue and a $94.4. million budget was passed by City Council.

•The city tax rate was down 60 cents to $196.60.

•Referendum Question No. 1, the classification amendment which would permit communities to value residential, business and industrial properties and open space at different rates, became the big issue in the November elections.

•Kent. Corp., the firm which was hired to hurry along construction on North Quincy High School, was dismissed.

•A public hearing in the Quincy Vo-Tech gym drew 1,200 Quincy people who were miffed over the noise coming from jets departing from Logan Airport's runway 22.

•The U.S. House of Representatives approved the transfer of the Adams Birthplaces from the City of Quincy to the National Parks System, to give them better care.

•General Dynamics delivered three liquefied natural tankers during the year, for a total of five. Boasted the GD annual report, "Quincy is aggressively developing a new business opportunity in an effort to provide a balanced and stable workload into the 1980s."

•In September, General Dynamics lost a $287.8 million contract to Litton Industries of Pascagoula, Miss.

•In what was described as a disgrace to the city, the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater, costing a total of $544,000, was still unfinished in May, five months after the projected deadline.

•Six men at Kurtzman of Quincy, Volkswagen repair specialists, made the Guinness Book of World Records by doing a complete engine change in one minute, 37 seconds.

•Mary Pratt, a physical education teacher in the Quincy schools and the city's all-time No. 1 female athlete, became the fourth woman inducted into the Hall of Fame at Boston University.

•Sacred Heart Church celebrated its 75th anniversary. Umberto Cardinal Medeiros was the chief celebrant of the Mass.

•United First Parish Church, built in 1828, celebrated its 150th anniversary.

•The Quincy Sun, "Quincy's own newspaper," started in 1968, celebrated its 10th anniversary Sept. 26.

•Among those who died in 1978 were:

Robert M. Faxon, a descendant of one of Quincy's earliest families; Judge Gertrude R. Halloran, the first woman justice at Quincy District Court; Charles W. Hedges, former city councillor, state representative, state senator, and Norfolk County Sheriff; Alexander Smith, who was city auditor and served 25 years on the School Committee; David Crowley, city councillor from 1946-49 and city councillor under Plan E from 1950-55; Edward Dobbyn, retired chief naval architect for the Navy Department at Fore River.

Please, No More!!!

An army of weary workers struggled into the weekend to dig Quincy out from under what may be the worst snowfall of the 20th century, one that brought the city to a standstill for at least four days.

The northeast storm, backed by winds that gusted to more than 90 miles an hour, dumped at least 26 inches of snow, the heaviest since the Boston weather bureau began keeping records in 1870.

High tides surged on by the windy four at least five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum where several hundred people were evacuated.

This was something that happens once in a hundred years," said Quincy Police Capt. Ro Cenicchi. "I've been on the force 25 years and I've never seen anything like it."

No deaths were attributed to the storm in Quincy.

The Quincy Fire Dept. reported no serious fires during the storm, a fortunate turn of events since most of the side streets in the city were impassable for at least three days.

We were very very lucky," said a Fire Department spokesman.

Under Gov. Dukakis' emergency declaration all but the most essential traffic was banned from Quincy streets while the city's heavy equipment cleared through the nights to clear the roads.

There were isolated incidents of looting.

Neville's Package Store on Newbury St. North Quincy, owned by former Gov. Councillor Edward J. Vincent Smith was reported almost cleaned out by thieves. Two men were arrested after breaking into the Roman Gardens Cafe, Southern Artery.

"I will expedite the prosecution of any cases of looting," he said. "I will avoid the district courts and go straight to the grand jury. I will ask high bail and recommend substantial sentences."

The MBTA's Red Line ceased to operate between Andrew Station and Quincy as the height of the storm Tuesday and for near day some 200 shoesters attacked drifts up to 10 feet deep on the tracks.

Limited service between Quincy and Ashmont was expected to begin early Friday.

The MBTA also took its buses off Quincy streets, said spokesman Rob Ferris, to allow cleanup crews to work unimpeded.

John Newsome of Mass. Electric said some 1500 customers in Quincy lost power mostly in North Quincy and Quincy Point during the storm but it was restored Wednesday. Scattered outages, particularly in Houghs Neck were reported Saturday.

The problem was getting people on the source of the failure, said Newsome. The GHOST TOWN--Lone walker braves high winds and driven snow in deserted Quincy Sq. Tuesday during the height of the most furious storm to hit the New England area in recorded history. Nearly 3' inches were dumped here and winds reached gusts of more than 90 miles an hour during what was like a winter hurricane. Only the faint outline of South Shore Bank can be seen in the snowy background.

Kennedy Visits Quincy To Seek Federal Aid

Senator Edward M. Kennedy visited Quincy Thursday afternoon and promised that the Congressional delegation would be working on federal aid to pay for the enormous clean up job.

He said if Quincy is declared a disaster area it would mean that the federal government would pay 75% of the cost of snow removal and the state would pay 25%.

He said the delegation will also work on obtaining grants for persons whose homes have been devastated and other programs for small businesses.

Gov. Dukakis extended the emergency to midnight Friday but gov. the banks, which had been closed since Tuesday, the option of opening their doors at 10 a.m. could get back to work without using their cars.

Emergency Telephone Numbers

Here are the telephone numbers to remember in these times of emergency:

Quincy Emergency Communications Center	773-1300
Quincy Civil Defense	472-1618
Quincy Police Emergency	911
MBTA information	722-3000
Boston Edison	262-4700
Mass. Electric	357-7100
Mass Public Works	727-3690

The Mass. Public Works number is useful in determining the fate of cars abandoned during the storm.

Energy Crisis Drives Gas Prices Over $1 Mark

•Paul D. Harold resigned his City Council seat to become a full-time senator in January. Joseph E. Brett succeeded him.

•The rate was hiked $27.40 over 1979 to $224 for 1980, the highest tax rate in the city's history, as a result of a decade of fiscal postponement.

•A $7.5 million slander suit filed by staunch Joseph LaRaia supporter The Boston Post Gazette was dismissed in Superior Court when the newspaper refused to open its books to prove Tobin had done damage to LaRaia with a disparaging remark made during the mayoral campaign in 1977.

•City Councillor James Sheets was legally allowed to draw salaries from his job as teacher and city councillor. Despite a bid from former City Councillor Albert R. Barilaro trying to prevent Sheets from doing so, Superior Court Judge Henry H. Chmielinski reaffirmed a 1974 ruling saying there is no provision forbidding Sheets from being both councillor and teacher.

•The City Council appropriated a total of $725,000 for property revaluation and the commercial firm P.R.C. Jacobs of McLean, Va., was hired to do the job, ending the council's 15-year block against valuation.

•Demolition began on 38 units of Squantum Gardens previously used for families of South Weymouth Air Station personnel to make way for 2.6 acres of recreational land.

•Renovation of North Quincy High School would eventually cost $17.6 million when completed, up $4.1 million from the projected 1977 price, when it was discovered there was $1.5 million which had to go to the contractor for 94 extra days on the job.

•In 1979, the Adams Birthplaces were finally turned over to the U.S. Park Service because Quincy was unable to afford their upkeep.

•Dogs were allowed to be kept in the Germantown housing projects, overturning a 1978 ordinance by Health Commissioner Dr. Samuel Solomon which said dogs were a health hazard.

•Ground was broken in September for the National Fire Protection Association's new $11 million headquarters in West Quincy.

•The Department of Housing and Urban Development granted $3.79 million to build a parking garage over the MBTA tracks to serve the Campanelli-Stop & Shop office building in Quincy Sq.

•A plan, which opened up three new management positions, was conceived to bring Quincy City Hospital out of its financial quandary.

THE MASSACHUSETTS CONSTITUTION which was written at the John Quincy Adams Birthplace came home for exhibit in September, 1979. Here it is carried by Ted DeCristofaro and Ronald Catudal.

•Korean born Stephanie Ann Siteman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Siteman of South Quincy, became an American citizen. Congressman Brian Donnelly presented her with a large American flag that had once flown over the Capitol.

•Nearly 30,000 gallons of home heating oil spilled into the Town River by accident from the barge of George T. Tilton. No lasting environmental damage was done.

•Representatives of Shipbuilding Workers Local 5 at General Dynamics predicted major layoffs and the ultimate closing of the yard in October if work wasn't found. It was disclosed that after GD finished its contract for 10 liquefied natural gas tankers, there would be no work in sight.

•The Navy awarded General Dynamics a $23.8 million contract to repair a cable ship, which would take about 500 men, after awarding a contract of over $100 million to a West Coast shipyard.

•Mrs. Lolita Harris of the Quincy Housing Authority became the first black person to hold a high public office in the city when she was named the state member of the Board of Commissioners in April.

•Ruth Gordon, along with 18 others, came to the Neighborhood Club to celebrate the 65th reunion of the Quincy High School Class of 1914, the so-called "worst class" on record because no one made the honor roll.

•Gasoline topped a dollar a gallon, as did home heating oil, when the energy crisis hit. Lines at a Willard St. gas station had 30 to 40 cars queued up.

Tobin Re-Elected, LaRaia Writes Book

•The Atlantic Self-Help program started a $5,000 pilot program to have smoke detectors installed in the housing of the elderly.

•The National Newspaper Foundation named The Quincy Sun as a National Blue Ribbon Newspaper, one of only 165 papers nationwide to be so named.

•The Massachusetts Constitution, on which the U.S. Constitution was based, came home to Quincy for four days. It was written in John Adams' South Quincy law office in the birthplace of John Quincy Adams.

•Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia wrote the novel, "A City Under Influence," in which he made disparaging marks to his opponents, under pseudonyms.

•LaRaia barely made it back into the City Council.

•Those who died in 1979 included:

Mrs. Edna Austin, 93, the first woman to serve on the City Council; Laurence J. Curtin, 78, leader of the fight to overthrow the Plan E-City Manager form of government; and Avedia Zildjian, 90, who turned out the world's best cymbals from an old family formula.

STILL STANDING BUT doomed for demolition in 1981 were the Presidential Cooperative BAnk, Connie's Snack Shop, Bookhaven, the Claus Gelotte Camera Shop and the BayBank building at Granite and Hancock Sts. as Quincy Center Plaza takes shape behind them.

Proposition 2½ Referendum Winner

•Proposition 2 1/2 reared its head in November when Quincy voted for the referendum 26,859 to 14,135 to limit the tax levy to 2.5 percent of the total property valuation, leaving city officials deciding who to lay off. Schools would be hit hardest.

•Mayor Arthur Tobin was sworn into a second term in January. Extra police were present in the Council Chamber because of a reported threat on his life.

•Mayor Tobin and a City Council commission agreed to put Quincy City Hospital under private management because municipal management proved to be "inadequate."

•Tobin said he cut $6.9 million from the budget proposals of various departments and $5 million from the school department. He also said he would veto any appropriation that went above the 4 percent cap.

•Leo J. Kelly was elected by the City Council as Council President. Joseph LaRaia took the third at-large City Council seat.

•A funnel of smoke rising from Houghs Neck could be seen everywhere in the city when DiMarzio's Roller Skating Rink burned to the ground the morning of Jan. 4.

•It was the worst year for vandalism in the city, according to Richard J. Koch, executive director of the Park and Recreation Board, with vandals causing more than $10,000 in damage.

•Judge Albert A. Kramer came under fire for being too lenient on drug users and for letting inmates go to make room for people arrested for drunk driving. Kramer said it wasn't so.

•Ground was broken for Quincy Center Plaza, a 10-story, $14 million office building at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts. and the parking garage which would go along with the building.

•Work on Monarch II in North Quincy began under the banner of the O'Connell Brothers construction firm. OCB, Inc. also finished and dedicated the commercial union building.

•General Dynamics negotiated a three-year contract with Local 5 without a strike, a first in a decade. The shipyard also received several new contracts.

•Females were allowed to join the stalwartly male Koch Club Boys Bowling League, making it the Koch Club Coed Bowling League.

•Simon Fireman of Quincy was named by President Carter to a Department of Commerce advisory board on international trade.

reigning Miss Quincy Bay.

•The papers of the late Laurence J. Curtin, City Councillor from 1931 to 1936 and 1939 to 1942, were presented to the Quincy Historical Society.

•Edward Moore retired after 21 years as aide to Congressmen James A. Burke and Brian J. Donnelly.

•Houghs Neck's own Louis, a spotted basset hound, got nationwide recognition when he received his own crossing sign on Sea St. Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Brownell and Councillors Kelly and McCauley were present for the somber event.

•Great Hill, Myles Standish, and N.H. Hunting Elementary Schools closed down when enrollment dropped to just over 12,000 in the city. The money saved was $250,000.

•A seven-member committee was set up to see about bringing cable television to Quincy.

•The City Hall was placed on the National Register of Historic Places, making it eligible for 50 percent matching federal grants for preservation.

•The city's population, once the seventh largest in the state, dropped to 83,904.

•Patti Lyons-Catalano became the second best marathoner in the world after several events including a second place showing in the Boston Marathon.

•Those who died in 1980 included:

Jason Feldman, 55, owner of Jason's Luggage and Music Shop; Arthur L. McGilvray, 59, owner of the drug store of the same name at the Quincy MBTA station; the Rev. Chester A. Porteus, 74, rector emeritus of Christ Episcopal Church and longtime chaplain of the Police and Fire Departments; Dr. John M. McIvor, 67, opthalmologist, and member of the Quincy City Hospital for many years.

City Celebrates Release Of Hostages

•New developments planned for the downtown area included a $14 million office complex on Chestnut St., a $20 million retail complex on Hancock St. next to the Bargain Center, and a $28 million retail mall in the John Hancock Parking area.

•The hostages were released from Iran after 444 days of captivity. The South Shore National Bank celebrated by tying a giant yellow ribbon around it.

•According to Mayor Tobin, the city was faced with a budget shortfall of $3.5 to $4 million by the end of fiscal 1981, which could mean 700 employees lose their jobs.

•City Councillor Francis McCauley announced he would be running for mayor in January after reading an accusation that he was a "hatchetman" who should "run for mayor if he thought he could do a better job."

•Quincy Cablesystems won the Quincy franchise on a recommendation by the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Cable Television.

•The Nut Island Sewage Treatment Plant suffered a 50 million gallon spill of partially treated sewage during Christmas week 1980. It was disclosed that one diesel operator was covering all shifts because of retirement, illness and death.

•The Quincy Sun won third place in its division in the New England Press Association for its 15-part series on the drug problem in Quincy.

•Mayor Tobin presented the City Council with a budget of $63.8 million, bringing the city well within the $56.9 million tax levy. The budget didn't include financing for Quincy City Hospital, Quincy Junior College or the Sewer and Water Departments.

•The budget for the School Committee was set at $8.4 million less than 1980, at $26.6 million. By now the School Committee was stripped of fiscal autonomy by Proposition 2 1/2.

•Family, church and youth groups using picnic areas would now be required to pay the Park Department $25.

•Teenagers Bonnie MacMurdo and Tracy Duclos were killed in an automobile accident on Quincy Shore Drive, site of five fatalities in 15 years.

•School Supt. Lawrence Creedon predicted that in five years (1986) "the high school population will be such that we can consolidate it into one school."

•David B. Lynch turned to back a bid for control by stockholders supporting Abraham D. Gosman and kept control of the $1 billion Multibank Financial Corp.

•Reports circulated that Mayor Tobin would be named clerk-magistrate of the Quincy District Court, succeeding the late Dennis F. Ryan.

•Tobin got his home rule petition creating a revolving account for Quincy City Hospital without an amendment giving the City Council the right to appoint three members to the Hospital Board of Managers.

•The city was in danger of losing federal funding of the South Quincy-Faxon Park Wastewater Collection and Pumping Facility because of a failure to adopt a sewer user charge demanded by the state and federal government.

•Fifty city employees decided to take advantage of early retirement benefits, saving 50 jobs for employees with less seniority and easing the layoff situation.

•To boost local business during the Easter season, Mayor Tobin ordered "lenient enforcement" of parking regulations in downtown Quincy.

•A prayer service was held in United First Parish Church for Ronald Reagan after he was shot and wounded.

•Executive Director of the Rent Grievance Board Jane Reikard was laid off because of Prop. 2 1/2. Several councillors showed up at a meeting wearing "We Want Jane" buttons.

•More than 17,000 Red Line riders were bused to North Quincy from Mattapan to catch the train when construction work began on lines between Andrew and Ashmont Stations.

•Comfortman (Sandy Rounseville) climbed his one story business building to protest the closing of the municipal comfort station. Rounseville, dressed like Paul Revere, also rode down Hancock St. on a horse shouting "The meter maids are coming!"

•Gypsy moths invaded West Quincy. Mayor Tobin suggested spraying for five days at a cost of $5,000.

•The City Council passed a $66.4 million budget for fiscal 1982.

•An MBTA fare hike went into effect Aug. 1. Fares went from $1 inbound and 50 cents outbound to 75 cents each way to and from Wollaston and North Quincy.

•Beth Ann Strenge of Quincy walked off with Miss Quincy Bay honors.

•Judge Albert Kramer of Quincy District Court underwent triple bypass heart surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital. He was expected to return to the bench in October.

Deaths included Paul Lentini, 32, and James Gibbons, 31, both of Quincy, both Boston firefighters killed battling a fire in the Back Bay; Clarence L. Edwards, 82, retired city health inspector; Dr. Alfred V. Mahoney, 71, former city health commissioner; George C. Fay, 64, leader of many civic and charitable causes, including the Quincy Christmas parade; and Dr. George D. Dalton, 83, retired chief of obstetrics at City Hospital.

School Closings Protested

•Francis X. McCauley was sworn in as Quincy's 27th mayor.

•To make the 15 percent budget cut mandated by Proposition 2 1/2, Mayor McCauley proposed cutting $3 million from schools, among other things. QEA President Joanne O'Malley said this could mean 75 teacher layoffs, the closing of the Lincoln-Hancock Pool and large athletic cuts.

•More than 500 people jammed into Quincy High School's Resource Center to protest any more school closings under Prop. 2 1/2. One matter of controversy was whether or not to close the Pollard School.

•Stop & Shop Co. moved its headquarters into Quincy Center Plaza, the "first big step to the revitalization" of Quincy, said Ron Zooleck, executive vice president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

•Quincy Sun Channel 8 made its broadcast debut.

•Superior Court Judge Hiller B. Zobel ruled that Quincy must refund General Dynamics $13.5 million due to overassessment.

•Quincy began a successful crackdown on parking tickets, with an estimated $400,000 to $500,000 in projected fines. The city also moved to collect delinquent real estate taxes.

•Parents picketed to prevent the approved closings of Willard, Wollaston, Pollard and Massachusetts Field Schools.

•Quincy residents, led by City Councillor Joanne Condon, moved to have 2 a.m. liquor licenses rolled back to 1 a.m. to cut down on drunk driving accidents.

•"The meters are going! The meters are going!" shouted Sandy Rounseville (Comfortman), flogging a campaign for validated parking as he rode up and down Hancock St. on an elephant.

•The Cherry Sheet for state aid to Quincy showed a net gain of $7.8 million, $2.5 million more than expected.

•The 57-year-old Strand Theater, the first big run motion picture house to three generations of movie goers, was sold to the South Shore National Bank and ultimately torn down.

•A committee which had been studying the mayor's office recommended that the mayor's salary be boosted to $48,500 a year from the current $25,000 and that the salary for City Councillors be increased from $3,000 to $4,500 per year.

•General Dynamics landed $272.6 million in contracts.

•Six black families moved into the predominantly white Germantown housing projects. Incidents of racial slurs, rock throwing and harassing phone calls were reported.

•David Harris of Randolph, deputy commissioner of the State Dept. of Commerce, called Quincy "the most racist city in America." Unable to back up his comment, he later said "Quincy is among the top five."

•Quincy High School's Presidents pounded North Quincy's Red Raiders 26-3 in the 50th anniversary of the Turkey Day Football Game.

•The archaic Blue Laws were repealed after 300 years, allowing stores to open on Sundays.

•Mayor McCauley filed suit against the MDC and Boston Sewer and Water Commission for violating the law by discharging more than 3.5 billion gallons of raw and partially treated sewage into the harbor and Quincy Bay.

City Ordered To Pay $12.1 Million To GD

•The Quincy Education Association approved a "work-to-rule" plan which meant no member of the QEA would perform any action outside of regular school hours unless paid.

•A total of $12.1 million, about 30 percent of the taxes Quincy property owners would be expected to pay, was ruled payable to the order of General Dynamics by the State Supreme Court because of overassessment in 1977-80. This reaffirmed a lower court ruling.

•A list of some 1,000 people who had more than 20,000 overdue in parking tickets amounting to $80,000 in penalties was sent to the Registry of Motor Vehicles in a long-awaited crackdown by the city.

•Quincy stores were opened for the first time Sunday, March 27 following the repeal of the blue laws. Merchants liked it; city officials didn't.

•Paul Gooch, 17, of Brockton, drowned after jumping off a 50-foot ledge into Swingle's Quarry, calling to attention the age-old problems and dangers of swimming in Quincy quarries.

•Rev. Bedros Baharian resigned from the Planning Board of the Planning Dept. and was succeeded by Joseph F. McConville.

•Ward 4 was up in arms about an MDC plan to force more sewage from Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Randolph and Holbrook into Nut Island.

•Frank Remick, owner of Remick's of Quincy and father of actress Lee Remick, died at age 73.

•The tax rate dropped an unprecedented $28.60 to $177 per thousand.

•Mayor Francis McCauley, citing underpayment of mayors all over the state, sought a $40,000 salary for himself and $6,500 for the City Council.

•Delays in the Burgin Parkway Extension and the Quincy Adams MBTA station were attributed to the failure of the MDC to raise money to channel Town Brook.

•Monique Powers, 18, was asked to register for the draft.

•George Belezes of Quincy, 100, was believed to be the oldest man ever to receive a cardiac pacemaker.

•Mayor McCauley was able to name four new captains, two new lieutenants and nine new patrolmen after several lawsuits were dropped against the captain's list. Chief Francis Finn had threatened to resign for lack of captains.

•The "Snow White," a ketch-rigged yacht that ran aground and was abandoned in Town River, provided one of the biggest drug hauls in the New England area when $9 million in marijuana was found below deck.

•After years of controversy, financial problems and public discord, the Quincy Adams MBTA station officially opened for business.

•The City Council voted 8 to 1, with Patricia Toland the lone dissenter, to keep Prop. 2 1/2 off the ballot.

•Stephen Durkin, 27, captured a School Committee seat in his first try for public office, ousting two term committeeman John Sullivan.

•Francis McCauley was re-elected mayor without opposition. Voter turnout was 36.4 percent.

•Pamela Lall and Brian Gilfeather were among those at St. George's Medical School in Grenada when the little island was invaded by American military forces.

Former Mayor James McIntyre Dies

JAMES R. McINTYRE

•James R. McIntyre, former Quincy mayor, city councillor, state representative, state senator, and Senate counsel, died of a heart attack at 53 after undergoing surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital.

•Three weeks after being sworn in for a sixth two-year term as Ward 1 Councillor, Leo J. Kelly resigned to take the post of project manager of housing developments in Quincy. His council seat was filled after Michael Cheney defeated Robert Johnston by 79 votes in a special election.

•Police Chief Francis Finn said his department was on "the brink of disaster" because of budget woes. The situation was eased after the City Council transferred $35,000 from the personnel budget into the expense account.

•Downtown economic revival surfaced after F.X. Messian purchased the old Sears building on Hancock St., for $1 million and planned extensive renovations and retail development there.

•Ten men, mostly from Quincy, were arrested and pleaded innocent to 109 counts of assault and civil right violations following an attack on five sailors, three of them black, near Louis Cafe in Houghs Neck.

•Tax rates of $21.95 for residential property and $32.50 for commercial property in Quincy were approved by the State Department of Revenue.

•After several months of debate and considerable opposition, the city's License Board voted 5-0 to grant a license for a McDonald's restaurant in North Quincy.

•Swingle's Quarry in West Quincy was drained in search of the body of Paul Gooch, 17, of Brockton, who drowned in June 1983 after jumping into the water from a 50-foot ledge. His body was never recovered.

•Dr. O. Clayton Johnson was installed as the third president of Quincy Junior College.

•The new controlled parking system in downtown Quincy grossed $40,413 during its first month of operation in June. The new validated system replaced parking meters that operated for 30 years.

•Ground was broken for the $9.9 million construction of the 1.2 mile long Burgin Parkway extension.

•The days of "Happy Hours" at Quincy drinking establishments were numbered after the License Board voted 5-0 to ban them. The ban, proposed by City Councillor Joanne Condon, would take effect in January 1985.

•Construction of Crown Colony Place in West Quincy, the largest single development in the city's history, was officially underway after groundbreaking ceremonies were held.

•Superior Court Judge James Lynch Jr., calling the February attack on five sailors in Houghs Neck "blatant racism," sentenced four men to jail terms for the assault.

•Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of the Quincy District Court, referred to Germantown as a "white ghetto" and a breeding ground for crime, incest, family violence and alcoholism as he accepted the Citizen of the Year Award from the South Shore Coalition of Human Rights. After much public outcry, Kramer apologized to Germantown residents after touring the area.

•The Cranch School, sold by the city to Housing Organizational Trust for $150,000 in September 1983, was resold to a development corporation a few months later at a $100,000 profit.

•The Most Rev. Bernard Law, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, said in an interview with Quincy Sun Ch. 8 that he feels no compulsion to moderate his voice on issues that some people view as a religious invasion of the political arena.

•John J. (Jack) Donahue, founder of the North Quincy High School football program in 1932 and head coach for 29 years, died at age 79, only 12 days before the 52nd renewal of the Quincy-North football rivalry on Thanksgiving. He had seen all 51 games before his death.

•For the first time in 11 years, the city sold grave sites in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. Some residents waited in line all night to purchase final resting places.

•The legislature passed a bill creating the Massachusetts Water Resources Community, which would serve many area communities, including Quincy.

•Peter and William O'Connell proposed a $250 million development project on the site of the former Squantum Naval Air Station. The project would develop into Marina Bay.

•Deaths in 1984 included: William F. McIntyre, 19, son of Senate Counsel and Mrs. James R. McIntyre; Philip A.G. Carbonaro, 67, retired chief of Army materials; Dennis E. Harrington Sr., 72, retired assistant superintendent of the Boston Post Office; Ray G. Perry, 71, retired square dance caller; Henry P. Murray, 85, retired owner of Henry Murray Labs of Boston; John J. Kelliher, 68, longtime aide to former Mayor McIntyre; John J. Sullivan Jr., 43, director of operations for Norfolk County Commissioners and son of John J. Sullivan.

Ruth Gordon Dies At 88

•A fire of suspicious origin destroyed the closed Pollard School in Quincy Point. The extent of damage was so great that it was decided to tear the building down and construct condos.

•City Clerk John Gillis said Quincy might have 30 instead of 39 voting precincts. This would save on voting machines and personnel.

•The City Council approved a home rule petition sponsored by Councillor Joanne Condon asked the state to loan the city $17,715,999 interest free to pay back a tax abatement judgement won by General Dynamics.

•The majority of the 725-member Quincy Education Association voted for a one-day strike--which is prohibited by state law--after failing to reach contract agreements with the School Committee following a heated all-night meeting.

•General Dynamics announced 3,084 workers would be laid off by the end of the year. City councillors mulled ideas for the shipyard. Councillor Patricia Toland suggesting setting up a task force to consider the shipyard's options. Councillor Michael Cheney lambasted General Dynamics for being "apathetic" in its options.

•After complaints from Chief Finn about the dilapidated conditions of the 50-year-old police station, architectural consultants suggested either renovation and addition at a cost of $4.8 million or relocation at a cost of $5.5 million.

•After over six months of rallies, petitions, official visits, and formal City Council opposition, Quincy got its wish when Long Island was not selected as the site for a sewage treatment plant. The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority chose Deer Island instead.

•Thirty Wollaston residents were evacuated from their homes when chemicals leaked from bottled ruptured when compacted in a garbage truck. Seven people were rushed to Quincy City Hospital.

•Although closing of the General Dynamics Shipyard was inevitable, Quincy residents planned a rally to keep it open. The rally was attended by Gov. Dukakis, Senator Edward Kennedy and Congressmen Gerry Studds and Brian Donnelly on a rainy day in front of City Hall.

•Quincy switched from paper ballots to punch card voting during the September primaries. Returns were in by 10:15 p.m., seven hours earlier than they normally would have been with paper ballots.

•The two mayoral candidates, Francis McCauley and Joanne Condon, found themselves facing late campaign developments when McCauley defended real estate transactions and Condon was accused of delinquent auto excise taxes. McCauley rode to a third term victory with 64 percent of the vote. Condon said she had no knowledge of owing taxes and McCauley would eventually be cleared by an ethics committee.

•The Old City Hall building was renamed the James R. McIntyre Government Center, after a proposition was made to do so by longtime political foe Joseph LaRaia.

•The North Quincy High School Red Raiders finished the season with a 3-7 record. Quincy was 0-10, the first winless Quincy team ever.

•Daniel Raymondi succeeded James Collins as Norfolk County Treasurer after Collins pleaded guilty to 69 counts of larceny, forgery and state tax evasion.

•Deaths in 1985 included: Dr. M. Grace Hussey, 71, city health commissioner; former Ziegfeld Girl Nancy Farrelly, 75; George Belezos, 102, believed to be the oldest person to receive a pacemaker; Hattiemay Thomas, 95, retired Quincy City Clerk; Margaret DeAngelo, 69, writer for The Patriot Ledger.

WELCOME HOME--Quincy born actress Ruth Gordon waves to the crowd Nov. 10, 1984 at the amphitheatre in Merrymount named for her. With her is Louise LaRaia, wife of former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, who proposed the amphitheatre. It was Ruth Gordon Day and, sadly, the final visit home for her. She died in 1985.

•Quincy patients rallied in support of Dr. Archie Keigan of Braintree whose medical license was suspended by the state for "improperly prescribing drugs to 13 people addicted to narcotics in 1980 and for not filing required reports and records on cases."

•Local officials hailed Gov. Michael Dukakis' decision to site a new Suffolk County jail in Boston rather than on Quincy-owned Moon Island.

•Quincy's first five-alarm fire in 24 years destroyed the Mutual Building, better known as the Kincaide Building, in downtown Quincy. The suspicious fire caused $4 million in damage. The Quincy Sun was formerly located there.

•Shipyard workers voted to approve a $100,000 feasibility study concerning a possible worker buy-out of the yard.

•Plans for two major construction projects, the $8 million renovation of the Quincy Police Station, and an eight-story building on the site of the former Kincaide Building were announced.

•The 36-month long project for the $57 million replacement facility at Quincy City Hospital was started.

•The City Council voted 7-2 to override McCauley's veto of a council order that increased square feet per dwelling unit in PUD areas from 250 to 1,000.

•Construction increased more than $84 million from 1985, created 10,000 new jobs and millions inn new tax revenues.

•The "Save Our Quincy" petition drive was launched with a goal of 16,000 signatures in an effort to curb development density and change present building ordinances.

•A cyanide scare at a Quincy drug store turned out to be a false alarm when aspirin tablets thought to be laced with the poison were found coated with a common buffer.

•A giant parade with five bands, 800 marchers and costumed characters climaxed Houghs Neck's summer-long 350th celebration.

•After 10 years of telethons and other events, the Quincy Sun-Jerry Lewis Labor Day Pledge Center and telethon committee reached and passed the $1 million mark.

•A joint venture bid for the 102-year-old Quincy Shipyard was by Massachusetts Shipbuilders Inc., an employee buyout group, and a private investment firm. They planned to build a $100 million power plant.

•A 208-page report criticized the Quincy Police Department for such things as lack of strong leadership and use of favoritism in assignments. Chief Francis Finn said the department would take actions to comply with the study's recommendations.

•Snug Harbor Court was renamed in memory of the late City Councillor Jim Crowley and a section of land in Squantum was dedicated in honor of the late Quincy Police Sgt. Michael Barry.

•A portion of Willard St. in West Quincy, termed one of the city's busiest and most dangerous roads, was turned over by Quincy officials to the MDC which promised an extensive traffic reinforcement effort.

•The Registry of Motor Vehicles announced its move from Broad St. to the Quincy Fair building in Quincy Square. It cleared the way for a homeless shelter at the old Registry building on Broad St.

•The City Council unanimously approved final design plans for the renovation and addition to the police station, to be completed in 1989.

•A record $96 million budget was presented to the City Council by Mayor McCauley.

•Herb Fontaine of WJDA was honored by the City Council for his 32 years of service covering council meetings and other Quincy news events.

•The MWRA announced its consideration of the General Dynamics shipyard as a transfer station for sludge composting and burning.

•A substance abuse testing plan was included in a three-year contract with the city ratified by the Quincy Police Betterment Association. It was the first time the city had included such a plan in negotiations with city unions.

•Actress June Lockhart, of "Lassie" fame, received the coveted Golden Paw Award from the Quincy Animal League in a visit to City Hall.

•A $10.1 million surplus was announced by Mayor Francis McCauley. The money was ticketed for improving schools, a new bookmobile and 11 marked police cruisers.

•In one of the closest elections in recent years, Mayor McCauley held off a strong challenge by former Mayor Joseph LaRaia to win a fourth term by a slim 474-vote margin. Voter turnout was 52 percent.

•A Thanksgiving morning automobile crash took the lives of Richard Miller Jr., William B. Marston and Timothy Tobin and severely injured Matthew Tobin, who also died several days later from injuries sustained in the accident. All were 22.

•The city entered into an agreement with the MWRA for an interim sludge facility at GD until at least 1995, announced McCauley.

•Deaths included: John T. Williams, 70, former business liaison officer for Quincy District Court and a founder of the court's "Earn It" program, which was lauded by President Reagan; Hazel Olson, former leader of Hazel Price's all-women orchestra.

City Marks Centennial

•Quincy celebrated its city centennial. The city, originally part of the northern section of Braintree, became an independent town in 1791 and was officially incorporated as a city in 1888.

•Councillor-at-Large Patricia Toland became the first woman elected Quincy City Council president.

•Mayor Francis McCauley, in his inaugural address, said he would "reluctantly" seek establishment of a sewer user fee, strict control over smoking in restaurants, and an ordinance which would place responsibility on property owners in Quincy to keep their property and adjacent areas clean.

•Budget requests from city department heads for fiscal 1989 were up $16,736,744 from the 1988 budget approved by the City Council.

•Mayor McCauley proposed a home rule petition for a four-year mayoral term be put on the ballot with the presidential election. The City Council eventually gave it the green light.

•The walls came down on the 49-year landmark the Bargain Center to make way for President's Place.

•The Super Tuesday presidential primary marked the first time Quincy's wards and precincts were made equal by population.

•Plans for revitalization of Quincy, as foretold by the Downtown and Economic Development Committee, included a proposed designated revitalization zone in Quincy Sq. and a Quincy Tourism Association study to show how tourism could be increased.

•More parking tickets were issued this fiscal year than in any of the previous five.

•The city filed suit against General Dynamics, alleging the firm violated the tax agreement entered in 1983, where Quincy would pay GD due to overassessment. Mayor McCauley said the city was entitled to a rebate of 75 percent of the interest rate.

•Carl Valenti retired as fire chief and was succeeded by Thomas F. Gorman Jr. as acting chief.

•The City Council adamantly opposed a methadone clinic in Quincy, citing possible drug problems. Methadone is a synthetic substitute for heroin used to weed addicts off the drug.

•Gov. Dukakis filed legislation which would allow the MWRA to transfer 75 acres at General Dynamics to former shipbuilders who want to use the site for building ships.

•Although Gov. Dukakis vetoed $1.2 million in state aid to Quincy, McCauley said the city would weather the cuts.

•Quincy's Auxiliary Police took flak from the Quincy Police Association, who said there was no room for them in the city. The association said auxiliary police were ill-equipped to handle crisis situations.

•A massive onslaught of rain caused severe flooding in West Quincy and Wollaston and heavy pollution of beaches.

•Rep. Robert Cerasoli and Mayor McCauley found themselves at odds about the proposed four-year mayoral term and the returning of the position of executive secretary of forestry and park to a mayor's appointment from civil service.

•The Quincy Sun turned 20 years old.

•The City Council passed a $250,000 appropriation paving the way for a $1.1. million street and sidewalk repair and reconstruction project throughout Quincy.

•In the wake of a fatal automobile accident, Mayor Francis McCauley made a request from brighter lights along a stretch of Quincy Ave. McCauley was asked to make the request by Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro.

•Cardinal Bernard Law celebrated a Mass at St. John's Church commemorating the church's 125th anniversary.

•Stephen Tobin won the State Representative seat in the Second Norfolk District by a large margin over Republican Richard Harris. Tobin replaced Tom Brownell, who received a judgeship earlier in the year.

In other elections, incumbent State Rep. Robert Cerasoli turned back a challenge by John McDuff in the Third Norfolk District; Senator Paul Harold was re-elected after running unopposed; and Mary Collins of Quincy, who also ran unopposed, was elected Norfolk County Commissioner.

•Deaths included Judge Paul C. Reardon, 78, who was first appointed Superior Court Chief Justice at age 45; and Robert "Quackie" Lingoes, an 18-year-old stabbing victim from Germantown.

Budding Political Stars In 1974-75 City Council

The 1974-75 City Council had several budding political stars.

Out of it came three mayors, a state senator, a sheriff and a judge.

Members included:

Arthur Tobin, councillor-at-large, who became mayor and senator.

Joseph LaRaia, councillor-at-large, who became mayor.

James Sheets (Ward 4), who was elected state representative and then mayor.

Clifford Marshall (Ward 2), who became Norfolk County sheriff.

Warren Powers (Ward 5), who became an assistant district attorney and this year was appointed associate justice at Quincy District Court.

Other members of that council were:

John Quinn, at-large; Leo Kelly, Ward 1; John Lydon, Ward 3 and Dennis Harrington, Ward 6.

Personal Service

Customers at the Hannon Tire Co. in Wollaston really got personal service in 1968.

Often the man mounting tires for them was the owner, Walter Hannon, who was also Ward 5 City Councillor and state representative. He thought nothing of pitching in and working right along with his employees.

Sheets Is Elected Mayor

•Mayor Francis X. McCauley announced he would not seek a fifth term as mayor during his mid-term address in January. McCauley, who cited personal and political reasons, concluded the address with one final word: "Sayonara."

•Mary Collins of Quincy was sworn into a four-year term as Norfolk County Commissioner by Mayor Francis McCauley and Councillor Patricia Toland, becoming the first woman ever to serve in that position.

•The mayoral candidate field began taking shape when businessman Peter O'Connell, former Councillor and Mayor Joseph LaRaia, and Councillors Stephen McGrath and James Sheets all announced their candidacy by the end of February.

•Despite opposition from city officials and residents, the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) voted to locate a permanent sludge treatment plant at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

•The Police Department faced a $250,000 shortfall in its personal services budget. Chief Francis Finn and Mayor McCauley assured city councillors that a public safety crisis did not exist in the city.

•Eight city councillors and about 100 residents went on record in favor of revised local preference hiring bill. Councillor Timothy Cahill was the only councillor to speak against the bill.

•Deputy Fire Chief Paul O'Connell was sworn in as the city's new fire chief, becoming the fourth chief in the last seven years. At age 38, he was one of the youngest fire chiefs in city history.

•Mayor McCauley announced that a city-wide paper recycling program would begin May 1 and save the city an estimated $100,000 in rubbish hauling costs the first year.

•Project DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education), an innovative drug and alcohol abuse prevention strategy, began in the Quincy public school system.

•McCauley said he would wait and see whether the proposed sludge plant in Quincy was approved by the state Department of Environmental Affairs before deciding to fight the proposal in court.

•Citing the need to stop the spread of AIDS, as well as helping heroin addicts, an 18-month agreement for a methadone maintenance program was being negotiated by Mayor McCauley and several state health agencies.

•McCauley and Councillor Cahill coordinated the city's "Adopt-An-Island" program.

•McCauley vetoed the local job hiring preference bill, saying it was restrictive and "un-American."

•A bill requiring the MWRA to locate its headquarters at the General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy was vetoed by Gov. Michael Dukakis, a staunch supporter of a Roxbury-based headquarters.

•Due to decreasing health care reimbursements and changing insurance regulations, officials announced that Quincy Hospital would be laying off some 200 positions in virtually all levels of operation.

In other hospital news, QH received state approval to open a 15-bed drug and alcohol treatment unit on the sixth floor of the hospital's west wing.

•Mayor McCauley announced the city had a budget surplus of $8.2 million, the fourth year in a row the city had posted a major surplus.

•Because of budget restrictions brought on by a $3.4 million cut in state local aid, the city's fire department lost Engine 6 in Houghs Neck and its three-men complement.

•The race for mayor was narrowed to two after Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets and businessman Peter O'Connell both received more votes then Councillor Stephen McGrath and former Councillor and Mayor Joseph LaRaia in September's preliminary election.

•More than 200 members and guests gathered at United First Parish Church, "Church of the Presidents," in Quincy Center, for a Service of Celebration in honor of the church's 350th anniversary.

•Quincy, once referred to as "the most racist city in America," was honored with a special gubernatorial citation for its positive response to the recent arrival of large numbers of immigrants and refugees.

•The City Council voted 8-1 to override McCauley's veto of the local job hiring preference bill, the first such council override in 12 years. Only Councillor Cahill voted against the override.

•Sheets overwhelmed O'Connell in the mayoral election, 17,553 votes to 11,454 or 60 to 39 percent. Sheets captured 29 of the city's 30 precincts in the election.

In other races, Councillors Timothy Cahill and Patricia Toland were re-elected and Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney claimed the third at-large seat; Peter Kolson was elected Ward 1 councillor and Thomas Fabrizio Ward 4 councillor. Councillors in Wards 2, 3, 5 and 6 were unopposed and thus re-elected. School Committee members elected were Ronald Mariano, Mary "Jane" Powers and incumbents Mary Collins and Frank Santoro.

•Deaths included Gerard M. Arroyo, 22, who fell to his death at Swingle's Quarry; Joseph P. Guilfoyle, 86, who worked on the country's first atomic bomb project; Kathryn E. Sullivan, 84, first woman assistant court clerk; Gregory P. Toland, 20, son of City Council President Patricia Toland; John Iacovelli, 73, head of Adams Mansion maintenance; Fr. Joseph M. Connolly, 53, formerly of St. John's Church; Stephen E. Hurley, 69, former State Senate postmaster; Vincent Buonfiglio, 82, owner of the Buonfiglio Funeral Home.

Sheets Seeks Federal Funds For Downtown Redevelopment

•In his inauguration address, new Mayor James Sheets pledged to search for solutions to economic problems while improving the quality of life here. He outlined several courses of action, including the need for new revenue sources, a freeze on hiring, rezoning the city and the search for federal funds for a cultural center.

•The Firefighters Union, which had been without a contract for more than two years, ratified a new retroactive pay contract.

•Mayor Sheets unveiled a sewer user fee proposal designed to raise revenue to help balance the city's FY 91 budget.

•Sheets announced in February all city departments would face between three and five percent cuts, provided the City Council pass his $9.5 million sewer user fee.

•Fulfilling a campaign promise, Sheets announced the city had filed two lawsuits against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) in an attempt to reverse the Authority's decision to select the former General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy as the cite for the permanent sludge facility as part of the $6 billion Boston Harbor cleanup project.

•Francis X. Finn retired as 24 years as the city's police department. Capt. Paul Nestor was named acting chief while Sheets mulled over a decision on a permanent replacement.

•The city was expected to lose some 117 workers, most from the school, fire and police departments, largely because of a $4.5 million dollar loss in state aid and rising fixed costs.

•By an 8-1 vote, the City Council approved Sheets' property tax classification for FY90: $10.18 per $1,000 for residential and $22.90 per $1,000 for commercial. Councillor Timothy Cahill voted against the classification, saying it would hurt business.

•WJDA radio personalities Herb Fontaine and Win Bettinson retired. Joseph Catalano of Dedham replaced Fontaine as news director.

•The mayor's mission to beautify, clean-up and promote Quincy Center and historical area began with the creation of a new downtown committee. Cahill was appointed committee chairman.

•Upset by the pending layoff of 31 teachers, some 300 parents, students and other education advocates rallied in protest outside City Hall.

•A suspicious three-alarm fire at the Islamic Center of New England in Quincy Point caused $500,000 in damages.

•Ellen Zane, a member of Quincy Hospital's senior management team since 1987, was named the hospital's new director.

•In an attempt to save the jobs of some city employees, councillors cut $145,343 from the mayor's original budget request of $120,810,449. Although the council cannot raise money, members hoped Sheets would funnel any savings into departments losing employees.

•The Quincy Sun ceased operation of its news on Channel 26 and began a new role providing daily community news updates on Channel 3. The Sun had operated a 24-hour a day news channel since 1982.

•A delegation from Quincy, led by Mayor Sheets, traveled to Washington, D.C. in pursuit of federal funds for the planning and designing of the redevelopment of Downtown Quincy.

•The $652,339 Quincy Center Traffic Improvement project, designed to improve vehicular traffic and pedestrian flow as well as enhance aesthetics to help attract more businesses and tourists, was underway.

•New brown and white signs identifying the Quincy Historic Trail began going up throughout the city.

•For FY90, Tax Collector Dana Childs said the city had 1,150 outstanding tax titles totaling $3.2 million.

•The city's downtown revitalization effort cleared a major hurdle when a $250,000 appropriation for the project was included in the U.S. House of Representatives version of the FY91 federal budget.

•Councillor Michael Cheney proposed an ordinance which would require all members of the Quincy License Board to be residents of the city.

•The city and Browning Ferris Industries launched an expanded recycling program in Quincy.

•Fr. William Downey retired after 20 years as pastor of St. Joseph's Church to take on another assignment.

•The City Council voted 6-1 to oppose the Citizens for Limited Taxation Petition. Councillor Cahill was the only dissenter, saying he wanted to send a message to Beacon Hill that government should be downsized.

•Saying he would rather fight fires than push paper, Fire Chief Paul O'Connell stepped down and returned to his former position as deputy chief. Deputy Chief Thomas Gorman was named acting chief.

•Jordan Marsh closed its distribution center in Squantum, eliminating 754 part and full-time positions.

•Quincy's three incumbent legislators, Sen. Paul Harold, Rep. Michael Morrissey, and Rep. Robert Cerasoli, were re-elected. Although they captured Quincy, Norfolk County Treasurer Daniel Raymondi and County Commissioner David Ahearn were swept away.

Sheets Launches 'Cleaner, Greener'

•Mayor James Sheets pledged in his Mid-Term Address to avoid layoffs and level fund public safety despite what he predicted would be a fiscally grim year. He said would have to make budget cuts in city departments excluding the police, fire and schools. In addition, he said the city's 21 unions would not receive pay raises because "the money is simply not there."

Other recommendations Sheets made were for a full-scale recycling center, a national heritage park and an expanded "Cleaner, Greener" program.

•Reginann Wall, 2, her four-year-old brother, Lawrence Wall, and their aunt, Margarita Cortez, 25, were killed in a three-alarm fire at 85 Mears Ave. in Houghs Neck. With the help of several hundred volunteers, the Cortez home was rebuilt and dedicated in June.

•Frank Anselmo resigned from the School Committee because of a physical disability, then announced he had recovered and wished to return. A joint convention of the City Council and School Committee, however, elected former School Committeewoman Margaret Nigro to fill Anselmo's term through December.

•Sheets announced in February that cuts would have to be made in the police, fire and schools departments, as well as the other city departments because Gov. William Weld slashed $2 million from local aid.

•Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke retired after 32 years of service to the city. City Clerk John Gillis named Joseph Shea his new assistant.

•Former Mayor Francis McCauley was named the new executive director of the State Retirement Board.

•Sheets, hoping to make Quincy a major tourist attraction, began lobbying Washington to drum up support for the city's bid to bring the U.S.S. Lexington home to Quincy, where the ship was built.

•Sheets appointed Marion Fantucchio as the city's new chairman of the Board of Assessors.

•Hoping to persuade the School Committee to reverse its decision on banning prayer at the high school graduations, 2,500 residents signed and sent a pro-God petition to Mayor Sheets. The School Committee, however, would not waver.

•With mixed emotions, the City Council voted 7-2 to implement a quarterly tax billing system.

•Actress Lee Remick, daughter of the late Frank Remick who founded the former Remick's store in downtown Quincy, died after a two-year battle with kidney and lung cancer.

•The City Council voted 8-1 to allow Home Depot to build a retail store in West Quincy.

CITY OFFICIALS celebrate the opening of the new $60 million Quincy Hospital health care facility in October, 1989. From left, Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets, Mayor Francis McCauley, WJDA newsman Herb Fontaine, City Council President Patricia Toland, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, Councillor Tim Cahill, Quincy Hospital Board of Managers Chairperson Trudy Buckley and Sen. Paul Harold. The facility was named the McCauley building in honor of the mayor for his leadership and commitment to the eight-year project.

•Hurricane Bob bore down on Quincy, forcing the evacuation of about 50 residents and leaving thousands without power.

•Acting Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman Jr., a 28-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, was appointed the city's new fire chief by Mayor Sheets in October.

•A nameless Northeast storm pounded the coast with heavy rains, strong winds and tremendous tidal surges. Severe flooding closed about a dozen streets and forced 61 residents to be evacuated.

•Sheets ran unopposed in the November election. Bruce Ayers defeated Thomas Nutley for the Ward 6 councillor's seat and all other ward and at-large councillors were re-elected. Incumbent Stephen Durkin was re-elected to the School Committee, as were newcomers Daniel Raymondi and Linda Stice, and incumbent Mary "Jane" Powers lost her seat. Ronald Mariano was elected state representative in the Third Norfolk District, replacing Cerasoli.

•Ron Adams, a seventh grade arts teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School, was named Massachusetts Department of Education Teacher of the Year.

•The School Committee named Eugene Creedon acting school superintendent.

•The City Council approved a tax classification package proposed by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien over Mayor James Sheets'. It was the first time in recent years the council approved a plan of its own instead of a mayor's.

Compared to Sheets' proposal, homeowners would pay slightly more and businesses a little less under Chretien's plan.

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s.
Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

Our New Year Cover Babies

New Year baby cover photos have been a Quincy Sun tradition down through our 25 years.

Usually the baby selected for the New Year's issue is the first baby born of Quincy parents at Quincy city hospital the previous year.

A couple of exceptions were made when babies were selected because they were just plain cute.

Here are our cover babies:

1970: Susan Lynn Spargo, 10:19 a.m., Jan. 1, 1969.

1971: Anthony Leonard Pecce, 7:43 a.m., Jan. 1, 1970.

1972: Nancy Ann Laitinen, 6:04 a.m., Jan. 1, 1971.

1973: Michael David Kowalski, Jan. 2, 1972.

1974: Joseph Philip Bevilacqua, 8:54 a.m., Jan. 1, 1973.

1976: Steve Bartkus, Jan. 4, 1975.

1977: Douglas Paul Nolan, Jan. 5, 1976.

1978: Jennifer Bush, 11:04 a.m., Jan. 1, 1977.

1980: Stacy Lynn Obert, 11:45 p.m., Jan. 1, 1979.

1981: Stephen Wigmore, 8:15 a.m., Jan. 1, 1980.

1982: Colleen Anne Keenan, Sharon Rd., Wollaston.

1983: David Delany, Sharon Rd., North Quincy.

1985: Ashley Elizabeth Haight, Jan. 3, 1984.

1986: Jeremiah John Sullivan, Jan. 3, 1985.

1987: Russell Hubbard Jr., 7 a.m., 1986.

1987: Catherine Marie Gropp, 7:28 a.m., Jan. 2, 1987.

1989: Mary Ellen Lau, 1:05 a.m., Jan. 1, 1989.

1990: Elena Kate Marinelli, 8:01 p.m, Jan. 3, 1990.

1992: Stephen Mitchell Kozlowski, Jan. 5, 1992.

THE QUINCY SUN's first New Year cover baby was Tabitha Dawn Kimberly Melzard, also known as "Cricket," daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Melzard of Water St. She was born at Quincy City Hospital at 3:42 p.m., Jan. 1, 1968.

A Family Of Firefighters

It was hardly a surprise to anyone when Paul E. O'Connell was sworn in as a firefighter in June 1973.

He represented the fourth generation of the O'Connell family to serve in the Quincy fire department.

His father was Lt. Cornelius O'Connell who joined in 1947. His grandfather was Capt. Timothy O'Connell who was sworn in in 1920. And his great-grandfather was Cornelius O'Connell, who became a call fireman in 1898 and was a member of the first permanent fire department in 1918.

Other firefighting members of the family: Uncle John who joined in 1925, Uncle Edward (1936) and Cousin Thomas (1964).

Paul O'Connell went on to become chief of the Quincy Fire Department in 1989 but then asked to be returned to his rank of deputy chief in 1990.

City Loses Bid For Carrier Lexington

SPORTING A COLONIAL era vest and tri-cornered hat, City Clerk John Gillis portrays Town Clerk Ebenezer Vesey in March 7, 1992 re-enactment of Quincy's first town meeting March 7, 1792.

•Mayor James Sheets warned that the tight economic times of the last two years would apparently continue into 1992 as he projected a $4 million shortfall in FY93 during his second inaugural address.

•Rev. William McCarthy, affectionately known as "the people's priest" and Fr. Bill, celebrated his 40th year as a priest with a Mass and party at St. John's Church.

•The Navy sunk the city's quest for the U.S.S. Lexington by awarding the famous Quincy-built aircraft carrier to Corpus Christi, Texas. Despite the loss of the "Lady Lex," Sheets said the city would still someday locate a maritime museum in Quincy.

•Dr. Robert Ricci stepped down as school superintendent after 4 1/2 years marked by integrity, hard work, vision and accomplishment. Eugene Creedon, a 26-year veteran of the school department, was appointed acting superintendent.

•Brian Donnelly, a 14-year congressman, announced he would not seek re-election in the 11th District, citing family reasons.

•Citing health reasons, Mary Collins resigned from the School Committee after 15 years on the board. She was replaced by retired math teacher Peg King, who had been first runner-up in the fall election.

HEAR YE, HEAR YE! Mayor James Sheets, all decked out in a two-piece black velvet suit and a silver wig, portrayed John Hancock in the 1992 re-enactment of Quincy's first town meeting March 8, 1792. At right is then City Clerk John Gillis who played Town Clerk Ebenezer Vesey.

•A citywide door-to-door census showed Quincy has at least 9,335 residents, a figure 40 percent higher than the federal count compiled in 1990.

•Tommy Gilmartin, a North Quincy High School ballboy for several seasons, died after a courageous fight with cancer.

•A $1.3 million plan to eliminate classroom overcrowding by building an Early Childhood Center in South Quincy and building an addition to the Charles A. Bernazzani School in West Quincy was publicly supported by Mayor James Sheets.

•The School Committee unanimously appointed Eugene Creedon the city's new school superintendent.

•The City Council adopted the mayor's FY93 city budget virtually intact by an 8-1 vote. It was the first budget under the Sheets administration that did not require any layoffs.

•Quincy Athletic Director Martin Finnegan stepped down after 42 years in the school system.

•Following through with their vow to defy a public access ban on Long Island, approximately 1,000 Quincy residents risked police arrest to get to their favorite viewing area for the majestic Tall Ships Parade of Sail.

•Work began on the second half of the $802,000 Quincy Center refurbishing project, which called for the repaving of Hancock St., new concrete sidewalks, black antique street lights and the removal of a number of parking meters.

•A home-rule petition creating the Quincy 2000 public-private partnership was signed into law by Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci at a State House ceremony.

•A plan proposed by Congressman Gerry Studds to establish a National Clean Water Investment Corporation designed to help fund large scale water projects, including the Boston Harbor cleanup, was endorsed by Mayor James Sheets, DPW Commissioner David Colton, and State Rep. Steve Tobin.

•In September, Sen. Paul Harold was defeated for the Democratic nomination in the 10th Congressional District by incumbent Gerry Studds. Rep. Michael Morrissey won the Norfolk District State Senate seat vacated by Harold. There was no GOP state senate representative, making Morrissey an uncontested candidate in the November final.

Michael Bellotti, a Quincy businessman and son of former Atty. General Francis Bellotti, won the Democratic nomination for state representative in the First Norfolk District. Michael Cronin, a Boston University student also making his first run for public office, defeated Susan Gallagher for the Republican nomination in that district.

Incumbent Democrat Ronald Mariano turned back the challenge of George Miller in the Third Norfolk District, assuring Mariano of a return to Beacon Hill since there was no Republican contender.

•One of Wall Street's major credit agencies, Standard and Poors, lowered Quincy's rating one grade from A+ to A. City Auditor Robert Foy said an A rating is still "excellent" and added the lower grade would have no effect on the city.

•Mayor James Sheets approved a home-rule petition proposed by Councillor Timothy Cahill to establish a new board of trustees to govern Quincy College.

•The city renegotiated its rubbish disposal and recycling contract, saving Quincy nearly $1.2 million over FY93 and FY94 and expanding its recycling program.

•City Clerk John Gillis retired after 33 years of service. The City Council elected Joseph Shea, Gillis' assistant clerk, as his replacement.

•Studds and Bellotti both won in the November election. Retired City Clerk John Gillis won a seat on the Norfolk County Commission. Nationally, Quincy agreed with the rest of the country by electing Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Tennessee Sen. Al Gore to the presidency and vice-presidency.

•The state Department of Planning and Capital Operations chose Malden's from among nine proposals, including Quincy's, for the state Department of Education headquarters. Previously, the DOE had been in Quincy.

•North Quincy High School's Red Raiders, dedicating their football season to Tommy Gilmartin, their beloved ballboy who had died earlier in the year, went 10-0 during the regular season, including a 20-0 thrashing of rival Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game. NQHS would go on to defeat Arlington, 14-9, in the Division 1A Super Bowl in December.

•The City Council voted 8-1 to adopt Mayor Sheets' recommended tax rates of $13.46 for homes and $28.79 for businesses. Councillor Timothy Cahill favored slightly higher residential and slightly lower busness rates.

•Deaths included the Rev. Cecil Paul, 57, president of Eastern Nazarene College; Msgr. John Twiss, 93, former pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church; Rev. John J. McMahon, 79, former pastor of St. Mary's Church; former New England Patriot fullback Jim Nance, of acute cardiac arythmia; Baron Hugo, 88, a legend of the "Big Band" era; Sybil J. Mattson, 65, who remained active despite polio and paralysis; Hugo P. Fabrizio, 71, former Quincy assessor and former owner of Flip's Oil Service.

A 'TEA PARTY' demonstration was held at Marina Bay in May in protest against rising MWRA water and sewer rates, one of the bigger issues in the 1990s. Leading 600 protesters in a rallying cry of "No More" are, from left, Mayor James Sheets, Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Rep. Ron Mariano, Council President Charles Phelan, WRKO radio host Jerry Williams, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and Weymouth Selectman Chairman Peg Goudy.

•In his mid-term address, Mayor James Sheets declared the city "economically sound" and listed among his goals expansion of the police and fire departments, development of the city's downtown retail section, creation of a new governance structure of Quincy College and increasing tourism.

Although Sheets' optimism was echoed by most members of the City Council, Councillor Timothy Cahill said Quincy was not "out of the woods yet economically" and criticized Sheets' plans to increase spending in the next fiscal year.

•Charles D'Aprix was appointed executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation.

•Sheets appointed a Quincy College Governance Committee to create a plan that would determine the future governance of the college. The committee was headed up by School Committee member Linda Stice.

•Plans were unveiled to build a Super Stop & Shop at the 10-acre Pneumatic Scale site in North Quincy. City officials expressed the desire to keep Pneumatic Scale within city limits.

•About a dozen residents showed up at City Hall to protest a 700-foot communications tower built near Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy. City officials also voiced opposition to the tower.

•Mayor Sheets and Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Executive Director Douglas MacDonald devised a strategy plan intended to reduce rising sewer rates by cutting MWRA spending.

•Among Mayor Sheets' recommendations for a proposed Hancock parking lot retail development project was one calling for no demolition of abutting buildings.

•Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson suggested the city withhold its MWRA sewer assessment in protest of skyrocketing MWRA rates.

•The City Council unanimously approved a bond issue in excess of $3 million for an Early Childhood Center to be built on the site of the former Lincoln School in South Quincy and a four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani School in West Quincy.

•Former Mayor and City Councillor Joseph LaRaia was reappointed to the City Council after Councillor Patricia Toland stepped down from the council to seek Quincy's assistant city clerk position.

•Despite numbers that indicated rises in both misdemeanor and felony crimes, Police Chief Francis Mullen said the city was "holding its own" in policing and crime fighting.

•City officials said totals for snow and ice removal in Quincy would top $500,000 following a particularly stormy winter. One blizzard in March alone was estimated to cost around $100,000.

•Department of Public Works Manager Lester Gerry told the City Council a DPW proposal for a city-owned street sweeping program could save the city as much as $696,000.

•Twenty-three of the city's 30 voting precincts were realigned in a state-approved redistricting plan for Quincy.

•Citing personal and political reasons, Councillor Timothy Cahill announced he would not oppose Sheets in the mayoral election in the fall.

•Retired City Clerk John Gillis was honored at a dinner tribute at the Bryan VFW Post.

•Patricia Toland was appointed assistant city clerk by the City Council.

•Liquor stores and bars in Quincy opened on Good Friday for the first time in years after the License Board determined it would be illegal to continue the traditional restriction.

•Quincy and Plymouth officials began plans to establish to establish a South Shore Heritage Trail that would include both communities and a number of towns in between.

•School Committee member Stephen Durkin proposed an addition to the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy.

•Library Director Warren Watson proposed a 35,000 square foot addition to the Thomas Crane Library. Soon after that, Mayor Sheets appointed Ann McLaughlin the new library director after Watson announced his retirement plans.

•Quincy school teachers agreed to a new contract calling for four percent pay raises in May.

•City officials, led by Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, held a "Tea Party"--a restaging of the Boston Tea Party--in protest of MWRA sewer and water rates.

•The New England Association of Schools and Colleges ruled that Quincy College must change its governance or risk suspension of its accreditation. The NEASC said the college president should have to answer to a board of trustees and not the Quincy school superintendent.

•Martin Ervin, 23, a political newcomer, announced he would challenge Mayor James Sheets in the fall election but soon changed his mind and dropped out of the running.

•Plans were unveiled for a new Home Quarters home improvement retail store in Braintree, the entrance of which would require building a new road in West Quincy on the Quincy-Braintree line. Residents voiced opposition to the proposal at a public hearing at City Hall.

•The City Council approved a FY94 municipal budget of $128,360,915 after shaving over $329,000 from Mayor James Sheets' proposed budget of $128,689,981.

•Sheets announced plans for a $9 million elderly nursing and health care facility in Quincy Center.

•The city filed a lawsuit against the MWRA because of its water and sewer rates.

•Local census figures showed minorities made up 14 percent of the city's population.

•In an informal vote, the City Council expressed approval of a proposed Quincy College Board of Trustees.

•Police Chief Francis Mullen said plans for beefing up his department, in addition to two mountain bicycles funded by a private donation, included a new K-9 Patrol and mounted police.

•Three rabid raccoons were found in Quincy, the first ever reported cases of rabies in the city's history.

•City and fire officials said that Quincy could hire as many as 18 to 20 firefighters by the end of the year.

•Quincy raised over $21,000 in monetary contributions and 280,000 pounds of food and supplies for the city of Quincy, Ill., one of many communities devastated by flooding in the Midwest.

•School Supt. Eugene Creedon fired Quincy College President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson, saying the new State Education Reform Act gave him authority to do so. Johnson, who had been at odds with Creedon and various members of the School Committee for a number of years, promised to appeal the decision to the state Department of Education.

•Citywide Parents Council President JoAnn Bragg topped the ballot in a preliminary School Committee election in September. Others to be considered for three available School Committee seats in November would include incumbent Ron Mariano, Quincy College administrator Sean Barry, office manager Christine Cedrone, parent Toni Kabilian and Middleboro High School Vice President Ron McCarthy.

•Deaths included Paul J. Gauthier, 11, a Lincoln-Hancock School fourth grader who suffered from multiple handicaps; The Rev. Bruce B. Noyes, 75, who served at St. Chrysostom's Church; Margaret R. O'Malley, 71, former Quincy College teacher and advocate for the retarded; Patrick M. Gullins, 22, shooting victim; Leo J. Hannon, 60, former Quincy political candidate; Carl W. Anderson, 89, former Quincy City Councillor; Rev. Joseph T. Greer, 60, former associate pastor at St. Joseph's Church; James F. "Freddie" Fostello, 81, former shipyard employee and active in St. John's Church; Eileen M. Campbell, 23, struck by a car on Quincy Shore Drive; William J. Papile, 80, former Quincy City Councillor; Dawn E. Brown, 25, shooting victim; Richard D. Allen, 72, former Patriot Ledger vice president; Muriel A. McKenzie, 70, retired Patriot Ledger reporter.

•Last, but not least, The Quincy Sun put out a special issue commemorating its 25th anniversary.

A Quarter Century Of Sports Memories

By TOM SULLIVAN

During my 25 years with The Quincy Sun there have been many outstanding sports events and, sorry to say, we lost several prominent sports personalities.

Among those who left us were two coaching legends, Quincy's Munroe MacLean, who died in 1969, and North Quincy's Jack Donahue, who died in 1984.

MUNROE MACLEAN

JACK DONAHUE

The 1970 Quincy football team, under coach Hank Conroy, finished with the Presidents' only perfect season (9-0-0) and won the Greater Boston League championship.

In 1975 North Quincy's football team, with Dave Burke in his first year as head coach, finished with a 9-1 record, losing only to Brockton, and appeared in its first Super Bowl, losing to Woburn. North won three overtime games, two on field goals by Ed McAleney, and defeated Quincy in the only overtime game in the long series.

Last season North, under Ken McPhee, enjoyed its best season ever, finishing at 11-0, winning the Old Colony League title and defeating Arlington in the Division 1B playoffs (Super Bowl).

The year 1982 marked the 50th anniversary of the Quincy-North football series and Quincy won that game, 26-3.

For several years the Quincy girls' volleyball teams dominated Division 1 and, under coaches Ray Whitehouse and Tom Henderson, won four state championships in the 1980s and went to the state finals on two other occasions.

During the past few years, the North Quincy girls' volleyball teams have taken over in Division 1 and won three state titles, including the past two years, under Coach Jim Rendle.

Sean Donovan became the first North Quincy boys' basketball player to hit the 1,000-point career mark. Several years earlier Nancy Flukes, who later starred at Stonehill College, became the first North player to reach the 1,000-point plateau.

Joe Dudek, who led North Quincy's football team to wins over Quincy in 1980 and 1981, had a fantastic career at Plymouth State College. He broke the great Walter Payton's NCAA touchdown record, was nominated for the Heisman Trophy and was signed by the Denver Broncos of the National Football League.

The North Quincy girls' track and cross-country teams have had an outstanding record under Coach Geoff Hennessy, whose cross-country record during the past six years is 28-6-2. Last fall the North girls won the Old Colony League title and had a 7-1 dual meet record.

The North Quincy hockey teams have had great success and have appeared in several state tournaments. Meanwhile, Bob Sylvia reached his 29th year as Quincy coach and has hinted that the coming season, his 30th as coach, could be his last.

Five Halls of Fame have been organized in recent years, with the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame the first. Then came the Quincy Basketball, North Quincy Basketball and Quincy Hockey and Baseball Halls.

TIM BLACKWELL of the Boston Red Sox presents the 1975 American Legion state championship trophy to Morrisette Legion Coach Ray Cattaneo at Fenway Park Legion Day ceremonies. With Cattaneo is Morrisette player Mike McBride. Morrisette also won the New England championship that year and went on to the American Legion World Series in Rapid City, S.D., losing to Yakima, Wash., which won the series. Morrisette again won the state championship in 1992.

Last year Morrisette again won the state title and was runner-up in the Northeast Regionals. This summer it won its fourth straight Zone 6 championship but was eliminated in the second round of the state playoffs by New Bedford, which won the state and Northeast Regional crowns and played in the World Series in Oregon.

Next season Morrisette celebrates the 50th anniversary of its baseball program.

Morrisette, under coach Dave Perdios, a former Morrisette star, has an outstanding 67-15-3 record during the past three years. Perdios, incidentally, hit the first home run of the 1975 World Series and the ball was sent to the Baseball Hall of Fame.

The North Quincy golf team, under coach Rich Hutchins, last year won the Old Colony League tournament title, North's first golf championship in nearly 60 years.

Mary Pratt, one of New England's premier woman athletes, played in the All-American Women's Baseball League in the Midwest in the 1940s and is in the Baseball Hall of Fame, which recently set aside a section for the women of that league. Earlier Mary had been inducted into the Boston University Athletic Hall of Fame.

I know I have overlooked many outstanding performances by individuals and teams during the past 25 years for which I apologize.

You know, remembering everything that happened in local sports over a quarter century isn't that easy--considering you are 25 years older, too.

What Else Was Going On In 1968

The year 1968 was a blockbuster from a newsstand point.

While we were planning the first issue of The Quincy Sun, major national news stories were breaking almost every day.

At times it seemed like there was too much news because most of it wasn't good news.

Tragedy grabbed center stage and clung to it.

Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated on a Memphis motel balcony in April. Just two months later, Robert Kennedy, who appeared to be on his way to the Democratic Presidential nomination, was gunned down in a Los Angeles walk-through pantry.

The back-to-back tragedies stunned and saddened a nation that was already emotionally hurting from a far away in the jungles of Vietnam--a war that, for the first time in history, was being graphically brought into our living room nightly by television.

As more and more young men came home in flag-draped caskets to Quincy and other hometowns across the nation--more and more people here and throughout the country wondered more and more why we were over there.

It became too much for President Lyndon Johnson. In despair and overwrought, he announced he would not seek re-election.

There were riots at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago where Hubert Humphrey was nominated, a nomination that would no doubt have gone to Robert Kennedy if not for that assassin's bullet. Richard Nixon defeated Humphrey in November.

The USS Pueblo was captured by North Korea in January which could have started another war but, fortunately, didn't. The Pueblo crew was finally released in December.

Jacqueline Kennedy shocked just about everyone by marrying Aristotle Onassis.

And finally, after all the bad news, the year ended on an upswing note: Apollo 8 circled the moon at Christmas time.

To Provide 2,600 Internments

Pine Hill Cemetery Undergoing $393,846 Expansion Project

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A groundbreaking by city officials Tuesday marked the official beginning of an expansion project at Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy, the first such expansion of a city cemetery in 10 years.

The 1.2-acre expansion will provide 1300 burial lots for 2600 internments, according to Park, Forestry and Cemetery Director Ray Cattaneo. The site may be ready for burials by next spring, Cattaneo said.

Officials said the expansion is needed to address the growing concern of adequate burial space in the city. Pine Hill Cemetery is the only cemetery in the city with space available for burials. Quincy's other five burial grounds, Mount Wollaston, Hall Cemetery, Snug Harbor, Sailor's Home and Hancock Cemetery, are full, Cattaneo said.

The $393,846 project, which includes site preparation and engineering costs, should provide gravesites for another seven to ten years, Cattaneo said. The cemetery director commended Mayor James Sheets for giving the space need top priority shortly after taking office in 1990.

"This is a realization of something that was really needed in the City of Quincy," Cattaneo said.

The mayor agreed.

"We're expanding Pine Hill Cemetery so that we can continue to allow people who live in Quincy and want to be buried in Quincy to have a grave site allotted to their family," Sheets said.

"It's a service we've always offered and should continue to offer. It means a lot to families."

Sheets, Cattaneo and other officials said the expansion effort was made possible through the help and cooperation of many groups and individuals, including the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers, the Friends of the Blue Hills Association, MDC and the City Council, particularly Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio whose ward the cemetery is located in.

"This is a fine example of various city departments coming together for a common cause," Cattaneo said.

"This truly has been a team effort. We extend our gratitude to all those involved."

Richard T. Sweeney Jr., chairman of the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers, also thanked those involved. "This expansion will provide affordable burial spaces for Quincy residents.

"There were many obstacles to overcome and at times the work was tedious but we got it done."

Cattaneo extended his appreciation to the

Myles Standish May Be Returned To City

Beechwood School Gets Backing As Kindergarten Center

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A proposal by School Supt. Eugene Creedon to reactivate one former elementary school and to return another to the city is moving forward and has received early support from Mayor James Sheets and three School Committee members.

The School Committee will hold a public hearing Wednesday, Oct. 6 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center to allow residents to voice their opinions on the matter.

Dr. Creedon's two-part recommendation, which was sent to School Committee in July, calls for the former Beechwood Knoll Elementary School on Fenno Street in Wollaston to be reactivated as a kindergarten center to help alleviate overcrowding at the Wollaston, Montclair, and Parker Elementary Schools. Creedon said he would like to see kindergarten classes at the site open in September 1994.

In addition, the superintendent has proposed that the former Myles Standish Elementary School on East Squantum St. in Squantum be returned to the city for whatever use it deems feasible. The decisions regarding the two schools would both require a majority vote of the School Committee in order to be passed.

Creedon said he began research for a long-range plan to do something with the two schools "about a year ago." Both were shut down in the early 1980s because of budget cuts necessitated by Proposition 2 1/2, he said.

Sheets, who serves as chairman of the seven-member School Committee, said Tuesday he was in favor of the superintendent's proposal.

"I support the concept of converting the Beechwood Knoll School into a kindergarten center," he said. "It's the only reasonable way to take the pressure off the lack of classroom space at the Parker, Montclair and Wollaston Schools."

Asked about the Myles Standish site, Sheets said he would like to see it returned to the city for future use.

"It's not large enough to be an effective school building without major renovations, it's not centrally located, and we would have to hire an entire staff (to reactivate it as a school)," he said. "It's just not feasible."

School Committee Vice Chairman Stephen Durkin said he most likely would support Creedon's Beechwood proposal.

"My hunch is, I'm inclined to vote favorably only because we have overcrowding problems," said Durkin. "We should do whatever we can to relieve that."

He added, however, that the Beechwood kindergarten center is a "fairly short-term solution," and said that he feels an addition being built onto the Parker School, something he has proposed in the past, would be "a better solution" in the long run.

Durkin also said he would "keep an open mind" about the Myles Standish School issue. Both Sheets and Durkin said they would like the School Committee to vote on both matters within the next month.

School Committee member Daniel Raymondi said he is "leaning towards the support of the superintendent's recommendation" on both issues, but did not want to comment further until after the public hearing.

"In order to give the public hearing some integrity, we should wait for the public input," said Raymondi.

School Committee member Ronald Mariano said he would "listen to the arguments pro and con," regarding the Beechwood Knoll School, but added that "it appears it may be necessary" to convert the site into a kindergarten center.

"If we need it (the

Hearing Here Saturday On Clinton Health Reform

Quincy residents will have an opportunity to comment on President Clinton's proposed health reform package at a public hearing here Saturday.

The Federal Committee of the U.S. Senate Labor and Health Care, will conduct the hearing beginning at 10:30 a.m. in the City Council Chamber.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, Cong. Gerry Studds and Cong. Barney Frank will be present at the meeting. Cong. Edward Markey may also attend.

Similar health care hearings will be held in several cities across the country.

The testimony will be carried live on cable.

The hearing, expected to last 2 1/2 hours, is open to the public.

MBTA Unions Picket Over Privatization Plan

By JENNIFER DOMINICCI

Approximately 75 MBTA union members were out in full force picketing City Hall Monday afternoon, despite the inclement weather.

They brandished signs voicing their displeasure with Governor Weld's plan for privatization, claiming such an action would raise costs.

"Weld proposes to increase the cost of bus fares, and to decrease the service, cutting back on many routes. Not only will it be bad for the elderly, but the average person won't be able to afford the new transportation service," said John Dutra, representative for the Painter's District Council 35.

Union representatives said the rally was held to stir public awareness of the proposed plan.

"We want to inform the public that this is not a money saver. This plan affects anyone who works for the state," said Ralph Harriman, business representative for the painters.

If the proposed plan is approved many workers fear that they'll lose their jobs.

"I've been with the company 20 years. I may be laid off or transferred, who knows," said Peter Zetes, a machinist from District 264.

Weld claims that present employees won't be laid off and replaced.

Others disagree, saying that the administration is looking to make money, and that laborers' jobs are not one of their top priorities.

"Privatization is a money making scam. This governor is anti-worker. He's made several attempts to save money and has failed," said Dutra.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, sympathized with the workers.

"These people came straight from work, on their own time. Some with spouses and children, all in a sincere, concerned effort."

Mayor Sheets, who has voiced opposition to privatization in the past, reiterated his position Tuesday.

"I don't support privatization," he said. "It's confrontational, no one knows how effective it would really be, and it affects major services, and I'm against it for those three reasons."

If the proposed plan is approved, some question that if private routes cease to be profitable, the carrier would be in the position to drop it.

Opponents question, where will these private companies draw the line? If they're allowed to drop one or two routes simply because they're not making enough money, how can they be perceived as a public service, if the public will suffer as a result of their action?

Mader added, "This is public transportation. The needs of the public come first. As far as the MBTA is concerned, we are not in favor of privatization."

Mader, who represents Quincy on the MBTA Advisory Board, said the issue would be discussed either at the next advisory board meeting or the one after.

Security Guards Installed At Four QHA Senior Housing Complexes

Security guards have been installed at four Quincy Housing Authority senior citizen complexes following the recent sexual assault and robbery of an elderly resident of one of the facilities.

QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said Tuesday that the guards, who were hired through the South Shore Security Co. in Quincy on a temporary basis, went on duty at the buildings last Friday. He added that formal bids were being sent out to hire permanent security personnel.

The City Council last week appropriated $50,000 from the city's federally-funded UDAG (Urban Development Action Grant) Monarch III account to add to $30,000 from the QHA budget to hire four guards, one apiece at to work from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily at O'Brien Towers on Bicknell St. in Germantown, the site of the attack, and three other QHA senior complexes.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said there are still no suspects in the case.

"We're still interviewing people and following leads, and we've been working with the state police," said Mullen. "We'll keep plugging away. These things take time."

The attack at O'Brien Towers occurred Sept. 17 just after 4:30 a.m. Police said a white male with dark hair sexually assaulted a 76-year-old woman in her apartment and then robbed her.

The woman, who told police her attacker was naked and held a pillow over her head, was taken to Quincy Hospital for non-life threatening injuries.

The City Council and Comer are offering a $1,000 reward for any information leading to the conviction of the perpetrator of the crime.

Mullen told the Council on Aging last week that the Quincy Police Department has done a door-to-door investigation at O'Brien Towers and conducted fingerprinting and other crime-solving tests at the site.

He added, however, that such crimes cannot be solved overnight.

"That's the way it is in the police business--it takes time," said Mullen. "Crimes can't be solved in a half-hour like they are on TV. Some people understand that, and some people don't."

Mullen also noted that in addition to security guards, video security systems and better lighting are needed at the sites to make them safer. He added that residents should also keep their eyes and eyes open to suspicious activities as kind of a neighborhood watch policy.

"We recommend a nosy neighbor," said Mullen.

Leaf Collection Oct. 25

Department of Public Works Program Manager Michael Wheelwright announces this year's schedule for fall leaf collection.

Leaves will be picked up curbside every work day from Monday, Oct. 25 until Friday, Dec. 3 in appropriate containers placed to one side of recycling bins and trash barrels on regularly scheduled pickup days.

Appropriate containers include:

- Large paper sacks designed for leaves, which are available at Super Stop & Shop, Star Market and Shaw's Market.
- Clear plastic bags.
- Barrels and reusable containers.

Leaf and yard waste drop off for Quincy residents will also continue at the Corporation Yard, 55 Sea St., Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

In 1989, 3,000 tons of leaves and yard waste was collected; in 1990, 4,200 tons; in 1991, 2,900 tons and in 1992, 3,500, according to Wheelwright. He added that it is anticipated that six weeks will provide residents enough weekend and weekday time to clear their yards.

MBTA Early Morning Work On Red Line Tracks In Wollaston

The MBTA's Maintenance of Right of Way Division has informed the city that it will perform required track maintenance work on the MBTA Red Line tracks in the vicinity of the St. Ann's Rd. tunnel in Wollaston perhaps beginning as early as this week.

Over the objections of Mayor James Sheets and City Council President Charles Phelan, regarding the working hours of the crew, the work will be performed for an approximate three week period between 1 and 5 a.m.

The MBTA insists that the track maintenance work can only be performed when no trains are running and that is the 1 to 5 a.m. time period. Sheets and Phelan have insisted that all possible noise precautions be taken by the MBTA work crews.

Citizens who encounter problems should call MBTA customer relations at 722-5215.

T Passes At Senior Drop-In Center Dec. 9

MBTA Senior and Access Passes will be available Wednesday, Dec. 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Quincy Senior Drop-In Center, 24 High School Ave.

For more information call Brian Buckley at 376-1244.

Shaw's Public Hearing Resumes Oct. 4

The City Council and Planning Board will continue a recessed public hearing regarding a proposal from Shaw's Supermarkets to open a new store at the site of the old Boston Gear Works, 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The hearing, which was recessed July 26, will resume Monday, Oct. 4 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

All interested residents are invited to attend.

Medically Speaking

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

WEIGHTY ISSUES OF MEDICAL CARE

People who are overweight face a health hazard that is rarely discussed but extremely serious: lack of proper medical attention. Due partly to self-consciousness, people who are overweight often avoid seeking the medical care they need. Regular examinations and critical periodic checks such as Pap smears and blood pressure tests are put off, either for fear of being criticized about their excess weight or out of sheer embarrassment. The best way out of such a dilemma is to speak frankly with your doctor. Bring up the subject of weight at the outset, and share your feelings about your body size and dieting. Together, you should be able to come up with a variety of ways to take care of yourself with confidence and peace of mind.

P.S. No matter what you weigh, keep an open, honest relationship with your doctor. Guilt or shame are not healthy for anyone.

Never let shame over your body size or lifestyle interfere with getting the health care you deserve, including regular check-ups. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Harold Mayoral Candidate?

There may not be a mayor's race this year but that's not stopping speculation about one.

The one due up in 1995.

And, there might just be a surprise in that picture: Paul Harold.

When you think of prospective mayoral candidates, the names of Councillors at-large Tim Cahill and Michael Cheney usually come popping up first. Followed, not far behind by School Committeeman—and one time mayoral contender—Daniel Raymondi.

HAROLD

Others like Councillors Larry Chretien (Ward 3) and Charles Phelan (Ward 5 and Council President) have mayoral thoughts—if not dreams—now and then. And Ward 6's Bruce Ayers, the council's newest member, is being considered future mayoral timber.

Cahill and Cheney make no bones about the fact they would like to be mayor. Cahill almost ran this year.

One or the other—or both—might run two years from now. And find themselves smack up against Harold.

Harold, at this time, isn't saying he will run but he isn't saying he won't.

But he does say: "I'm thinking about it. A number of people have urged me to run. I would give it a serious look."

Harold, always a top vote-getter, as a city councillor and state senator, would certainly be a formidable mayoral contender.

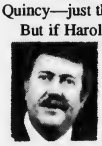
Harold polled 12,951 votes to Studd's 5,256 in Quincy—just three votes shy of a 7,700 vote margin.

But if Harold is not the political surprise in 1995, Mayor James Sheets might just be.



SHEETS

Many observers are assuming Sheets will not seek a fourth term two years from now. But that might not be so.

Many think he will wind up as the president of Quincy College. But sources around him don't really think he wants that job.

And the same sources don't think he will be ready for political retirement after completing his third term in 1995.

"He has a lot of things he wants to see finished," says one. "And it may take a fourth term to do it."

Harold definitely would not run against Sheets. They are good friends.

Sheets this year will be the first mayor in the city's history to be re-elected twice without opposition.

As a fourth term candidate in 1995, he no doubt would have a challenger or two. Probably Cahill or Cheney or both.

But if Sheets decides to step down in 1995, Cahill and/or Cheney could very well have Harold to contend with.

Harold, incidentally, will be leaving next week for Cork City, Ireland where he will be American Studies Professor at University College Cork.

He will teach there for one term and be back for Christmas—in plenty of time for a political campaign.

CLAIRE MC GILLICUDDY of Taylor St., Wollaston enjoyed our 25th anniversary commemorative issue last week. Except for one little thing.

Miss Massachusetts was there that day but not in this picture. Claire was there as Wollaston's "Queen For The Day." Complete with crown and royal regalia.

Looking at the picture though, we can see how our photographer could easily have mistakened Claire for Miss Massachusetts.

GEORGE BURKE has always been associated with Wollaston's Ward 5. He grew up there and got his political start there, being elected Ward 5 councillor and going on to councillor at-large and district attorney.

BURKE

CHRETIEN

So on preliminary election day when he went to vote at the Wollaston Baptist Church he got a little surprise when he was greeted outside by Councillor Larry Chretien.

"Hi, George," Chretien said. "I'm your new ward councillor."

Burke's house is now in Chretien's Ward 3.

AND SPEAKING OF the new ward and precinct lines, they have Albert Blake of 25 Bigelow St. shaking his head a little.

Blake, who has lived at that address for over 25 years, notes that it was Ward 1 when he moved there. Then it became Ward 2. Then Ward 3. And now it's back in Ward 2.

"I've had four ward changes since I've been in that house," he says, "and the house hasn't moved an inch."

MILESTONE: Former School Committeeman Frank Anselmo, one of the city's most colorful and outspoken political figures, just turned a pretty young 95.

ANSELMO

At age 92 in 1991 he was one of the oldest—if not the oldest—elective office holders in the country. That year he resigned because he wasn't feeling well but he bounced back and changed his mind only to fail in a re-election bid.

He is still tuned to the political scene.

JO ANN BRAGG, who topped the nine-candidate field for School Committee in the preliminary election, has a fundraiser Friday from 7 to 11 p.m. at Raffael's, Enterprise Drive, North Quincy. Tickets are $20 per person.

TONI KABILIAN, who landed one of the six nominations for School Committee, has a fundraiser set for Thursday, Oct. 7 from 7:30 to 11 p.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post, Miller St., West Quincy. Tickets are $15 and will be available at the door.

HERE'S ONE: Michael Jovanovic, a retired college professor and often political candidate apparently believes in graphics when he's trying to make a point. Live graphics.

Javanovic, a staunch supporter of fired Quincy College president Clayton Johnson turned up at last week's School Committee meeting carrying a rooster.

"When Dr. Johnson was here," he declared, "Quincy had something to crow about."

And with that, he wheeled and marched out with the rooster.

The rooster didn't crow. But the audience howled.

$16.9 Million Contract Awarded For Town Brook Tunnel Project

Construction of a 12-foot diameter concrete-lined tunnel to carry flood flows from Town Brook beneath sections of downtown Quincy will be accomplished under the terms of a $16.9 million contract recently awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The work, which will be accomplished by a joint venture of Kajima/Marra-Majestic of Pasadena, Calif., will begin later this fall and take about two years to complete.

The contract calls for the construction of a 12-foot-diameter, 4,000-foot-long tunnel some 140 to 180 feet beneath the city using a tunnel boring machine. Once the outlet shaft near Pond St. is excavated, the boring machine will be placed and begin the "moling" out of the tunnel.

Also part of the project is an intake structure, including an overflow weir, grit basin and shaft, which will be built near School St. Tunnel features include an aeration system and two pumping stations with monitoring systems to maintain water quality in the area.

The tunnel is the second of three phases of work to provide flood protection to Quincy and Braintree. Phase one of the $40 million project involved channel improvements along Town River and the construction of a large concrete box culvert to channel the river under the Southern Artery. This $3.3 million effort is nearly complete.

The final phase, reconstruction of the old Quincy Dam, will begin once the tunnel has been completed and will cost an estimated $8 million and will include measures to improve the dam's safety. The entire project is slated for completion is August, 1997.

A New Era Of Racial Understanding In Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Tuesday, Sept. 21, 1993 marked the beginning of a new era of racial understanding for the City of Quincy as the city's Human Rights Commission held its very first meeting at City Hall. As someone who grew up across the Neponset River in the City of Boston, I remember the reputation Quincy had for being rather intolerant of minorities. I never saw any proof of that charge during my many visits to family relatives living in this city but the rumors were always there circulating in the air.

I moved to Quincy from Charlestown in 1984. Over the years Charlestown, like Quincy, has suffered the same racial rumors. Since 1987 I have lived in North Quincy and I have seen first-hand how Quincy since has been handling the changing demographics in both the Wollaston and North Quincy area. New immigrant groups from China and Southeast Asia have chosen our city as their new home. The changes taking place have been done with very few problems. Apparently, the people of Quincy are much more tolerant than persistent rumors give them credit.

However, I know very few African-Americans from nearby Boston neighborhoods who would ever consider a Quincy move because they still believe Quincy doesn't want them. As middle-class black flight from Boston picks up, the South Shore is the goal of many but Quincy is bypassed for other perceived more tolerant South Shore communities.

Personally, after living here since 1984, I think Quincy is a very open city and it is far from intolerant. City officials are doing everything possible to create a racially tolerant atmosphere. City neighborhoods have had some problems but they are minor compared to what has happened elsewhere.

I'm starting to believe Quincy suffers the same fate Charlestown or South Boston. People quickly believe a community is racially intolerant and the charge sticks like unwanted glue. I'm sure while I was believing Quincy was intolerant from my Boston home, there were folks here saying the same thing about Boston or Charlestown. Two peoples knowing very little about the other accept the rumors as accurate without demanding proof.

I'm not here saying Quincy is home only to saints, just as Charlestown isn't, but things are getting better all the time. Quincy's newly-created Human Rights Commission is an attempt to make the new demographics changing the city's neighborhoods work as peacefully as possible. My only hope is that the commission be more than just a collector of data or dispute mediators. I believe education of our children should be their number one priority. I would hope that the commission feels a mandate to reach out to out young people in the city's public, private and parochial schools. We need to reach children and educate them as to the ugliness of racism.

I grew up in Roxbury during the 50s and 60s and often saw racial intolerance first-hand. Once I was assaulted by a group of black kids, my only crime being I wasn't black. Back in 1965, I met Martin Luther King Jr. for a few moments at a Roxbury street corner. Our eyes met for a moment or two and we smiled at one another. We recognized our brotherhood. I was taught to hate racism and pray for the racist. I don't laugh at racial slurs and I don't make racial statements. As a kid growing up I saw that most folks understand these simple ideas. There will always be a minority who treat others on the basis of race but actions speak louder than words. If you're opposed to racism but condone it, you're just as guilty.

No one has a right to harrass anyone else for any reason or at any time. People are born to love one another. Children have to be taught how to hate; it's a learned trait. Racism is, sadly, passed on from generation to generation but hate is hardly a family value.

Here we are in the last moments of the 20th century and many of us have still failed to see racism as an evil in need of eradication from all areas of society. Racism is an ugly, distorted view of life and it is sad to see kids acting out someone else's hatreds. I pray to God for enlightenment by society.

Six Quincy Teachers Enrolled In UMass Science Workshop

Six Quincy teachers are among 38 area educators participating in a UMass Boston workshop designed to enhance the level of chemistry and biology being taught in local schools.

Local teachers enrolled in the workshop are:

William Billikas and Patricia Lynch of Broad Meadows Middle School; Sally Bohl of Montclair Elementary School; Thoms Natola of Merrymount Elementary School; and Susannah Gordon and Helen Pugsley-Koolian of North Quincy High School.

The teachers attended a three-week institute at UMass Boston recently, and throughout the current academic year are taking part in a series of follow-up seminars to review and measure the effectiveness of their curriculum activities.

Support for the workshop comes from a $394,000 National Science Foundation Grant. The workshop included lectures and laboratory work that offered strategies for introducing students to such scientific topics as genetics, molecular biology, nuclear power, fossil fuels and the region's water supply.

Community Focus Group Meeting On Elder Needs

The Quincy Council on Aging in association with South Shore Elder Services will host a community focus group on local elders needs Thursday, Oct. 21 at 5 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall annex.

The meeting will begin with refreshments followed by a discussion of the needs of Quincy elderly. Anyone planning to attend the meeting must call the Quincy Council of Aging at 376-1242 to make reservations.

The meeting is intended to identify major needs-concerns-service barriers for the elderly in the community, and to begin developing strategies to meet those needs.

Organizers hope the meeting will increase awareness of the roles of the SSES as the regional area on aging, and the Quincy Council on Aging as the community focal point for elder services in the community.

The meeting is open to the public. Participants will include Quincy elders and their families, caregivers, elder services providers, selectmen, legislators and local Quincy community and business leaders.

Ross Blasts School Dept.'s Overspending

Sept. 30-Oct. 6
60 Years Ago

School Supt. James N. Muir disclosed that the School Department;s $1.1 million operating budget will be exhausted by Dec. 1 and Mayor Charles A. Ross angrily accused the School Committee of breaking faith with the city, the state, "and thousands of school children."

"When the committee undermines the credit of the city by violating its agreement with the state, proposing to curtail the education of Quincy children and halt the payroll of faithful school workers, it's time for the city act," said the mayor.

School Committeemen Dr. Daniel B. Reardon and Joseph J. Kendrick assured parents that the teachers will "carry on" whether or not there is money to pay their salaries. Kendrick said it was possible that the money could be obtained from the federal government through the National Recovery Administration which has a fund to provide for reachers' salaries on occasions where cities and towns fall behind in their payments.

Meanwhile, the Quincy Parents Teachers' Council, representing 5,000 members of the 10 PTAs in the city, was formed during a meeting at Adams Academy and given power to act on behalf of all the associations during school emergencies.

WORK FOR JOBLESS

The State Emergency Finance Board announced that construction projects in Quincy totalling $498,200 have been approved under the National Industrial Recovery Act with 30 per cent of the funding from federal grants and the remainder borrowed from the federal treasury.

The projects, aimed at putting the jobless to work, included $339,200 to construct new sewers to Squantum, Adams Shore and Houghs Neck and $159,000 for culverts and drains in the area of Adams St., Town Brook and Furnace Brook Parkway.

Meanwhile, 15 welfare recipients went to work at the Squantum Naval Air Station at no wages for a two-week period under a federal grant of $100,000 to the city which obliged Quincy to lend welfare recipients to work on federal projects.

Houghs Neck Congregational Sunday School To Celebrate Church's 100th Anniversary

The new Sunday School year at Houghs Neck Congregational Church will begin a year of celebration on "Super Sunday" Oct. 3.

In preparation of the church's 100th anniversary in 1994, the Sunday School will learn about the background, the groups that make it work and the people who make it special. Fun projects and activities with their teachers and friends are planned for the year on the theme "Let's Celebrate a Special Church on its 100th."

Registration, a cook-out brunch and a mystery ride will follow the 10:30 a.m. service Sunday. Transportation will be provided by parents and teachers and permissions must be given to Gloria Brummitt, superintendent, at 328-5890.

Teachers and helpers for the early childhood department (age 2 1/2 through grade 1 and meets 8:30 to 10 a.m. Sundays) are:

Heidi Forti, Judy Hall, Stephanie Szabo, Peg McDonald, Janet Morris, Donna Robbins, Susan Carr and Gloria Brummitt.

Teachers and helpers for intermediate (grades 2 through 8, meets 10 to 11:30 a.m.) are:

Claudia Szabo, Joyce Flibotte, Diane Haskins, Barbara Houston, Cheryl Catrambone and Gloria Brummitt, workshop leader.

Teachers and helpers for senior department (grades 9-12, meets at 6 p.m.) are:

Ada Freeman, Ralph Freeman and Alicia Corea.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Why do some banks only give home equity loans to people who DON'T really need them?

Don't worry. It doesn't make sense to us, either. That's why we've developed a home equity loan program that's a little easier, for people who may not otherwise qualify. We take a more flexible look at your job and payment histories. We offer terms from 1 to 15 years with payments as low as $50 a month. And there's no appraisal necessary on amounts up to $15,000*. So if you're looking for a loan between $5,000 and $25,000, and don't know if you'd qualify for a home equity loan at other banks, talk to us at Fleet. Stop by your local branch office today.

Request For Earlier Hours At Convenience Store Placed On File

By JENNIFER DOMINICCI

The License Board has placed the proposal from Dairy Mart, 200 Sea St. to open at 6:30 on file until the parties involved can resolve the issue.

The store now opens at 7 a.m.

Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson informed the board that residents were concerned about such an early opening and were opposed to any change in the store's hours.

Di That Ton, the manager of the store, stated that approximately 150 of his patrons had requested an earlier opening.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey suggested that Ton meet with Kolson to discuss both sides of the issue.

The board was in agreement and made a motion that Ton and Kolson should meet.

Ton thanked the board for their suggestion, but declined, stating that he'd rather not meet with Kolson.

City Clerk Joseph Shea informed Ton that he could return before the board at a later time.

Seniors Can Save On Cable Television, General Manager Says

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Seniors citizens can still save money on their cable television bills despite recent rate changes, according to a top Continental Cablevision official.

In order to do so, however, they have to own a second cable box.

Continental General Manager Steve Farquhar explained to the Council on Aging last week that the new cable regulations issued by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), which went into effect Sept. 1, prohibit Continental from continuing its senior citizen discount which it voluntarily began offering in 1984.

Continental is no longer allowed to charge other customers more to offset the cost of the senior discount because the new regulations call for the same rates to be charged to all residential customers, Farquhar said.

Prompted by a question from Council on Aging member Frank Kearns, however, Farquhar added that despite that fact that seniors will now pay as much as $4.99 more for a monthly bill without the special discount, there is still a way to offset that cost.

Under the new regulations, Continental now offers a second cable box at no charge to customers. Since a second box used to cost $7.95, Farquhar said that savings offsets the loss of the senior discount to any senior who has two "cableized" televisions.

One Quincy senior at the meeting, who asked that her name not be used for this story, asked Farquhar why Continental has raised its rates so greatly. She said at one time, her monthly bill was around $8.95, and today she pays $23.25.

Farquhar admitted that prices at Continental have raised gradually since the company first began operating in Quincy in 1981, but added that 15 channels have been added to its cable lineup since then. He added that these are "not just channels for the sake of extra channels," but "quality channels" such as Discovery, A & E (Arts and Entertainment), CNN, and others.

"We pay these channels for their services to us," said Farquhar. "That's the big reason our prices have gone up."

Regarding the new FCC-regulated rates, Farquhar said the media has misled many people into thinking the overall cost of their bills would decrease. Although some have seen decreases, depending on exactly what cable services they purchase, Farquhar said the majority have seen prices go up.

"We (Continental) think that about 45 percent of our customers have seen a decrease, and about 55 percent have seen an increase," he said.

$32,108 Council On Aging Grant

Elder Affairs has awarded a $32,018 grant to the Quincy Council on Aging to help meet its needs, announces Rep. Mike Bellotti.

"The councils and their senior centers serve as a vital community resource for the 1.1 million seniors in the state and are a key link between the needs of the elderly and available resources," Bellotti said.

The grant was a result of efforts by Sen. Michael Morrissey, and Representatives Ron Mariano, Steve Tobin and Bellotti.

Harold To Teach At College In Ireland

Former state senator Paul Harold has been named the American studies professor at University College Cork, Ireland in the faculties of law and public administration for the term beginning Oct. 6.

University College Cork is one of Ireland's three national universities. The others are located in Dublin and Galway.

University president Michael Mortell said that Harold will provide a valuable insight into American political systems for the students and faculty at Cork.

PAUL HAROLD

Mortell said Harold will lecture in the school of law and conduct two seminars for fourth year students in local government and public administration.

While in Cork, Harold will also make preliminary plans for the 150th anniversary of the Boston-Cork famine relief project. The anniversary commemorates the relief given by the people of Massachusetts during the great famine of 1845.

QCBPA Auction Oct. 7 With Over $5,000 In Items

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association is sponsoring an auction with over $5,000 in items to bid on Thursday, Oct. 7.

The event will be held at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center at 7 p.m.

It will be preceded by a social hour starting at 6 p.m. with free hors d'oeuvres from Cafe Lazzarino and the Pilgrim Restaurant.

Auctioneer will be Dan Flynn of Daniel F. Flynn & Company.

One of the items to be auctioned is a lunch with Mayor James Sheets in his office at City Hall.

Another is a ride into Quincy from the Charlestown Navy Yard aboard the USS Salem on the day the cruiser arrives from Philadelphia. The winner will also receive a print of the ship. The two-in-one prize, valued at $1,100, is being donated by the U.S. Navy Shipbuilding Museum at the Quincy Shipyard.

Many other items donated by members of the QCBPA will also be auctioned off.

Hearing Continued On Cafe's Request To Extend Business Hours

The License Board postponed a hearing of Massimo's Caffe, 12 Blanchard Rd., regarding the proposed extension of business hours.

Currently, the store operates Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. and is closed on Sundays.

The owner, Massimo Ranalli, would like to extend his hours on Friday and Saturday from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., and to open on Sundays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Ward 2 Councilor Ted DeCristafaro wanted to ensure that all residents were aware of the hearing and given the chance to attend so that they may voice their opinions on the issue.

City Clerk Joseph Shea motioned that the hearing be continued next week in order that all parties involved could be present.

Troop 1 To Participate In Boy Scout Popcorn Drive

Troop 1 of Quincy will take part in the Boston Minuteman Council of the Boy Scouts of America's annual fundraising effort by selling popcorn door-to-door.

The drive in Quincy will take place during the month of October.

Proceeds of the popcorn sales are divided equally among the manufacturer (Weaver), the Boston Minuteman Council of the Boy Scouts and the local troops. The Quincy boy scouts will use the proceeds to fund activities such as SADD, training exercises and community cleanups.

Quincy residents will have the opportunity to purchase popcorn treats such as a 28-ounce holiday tin of carmel popcorn for $12 or a smaller one for $6, a 15-pack of microwave butter light or butter flavor for $10, a 3-pound bucket for $5, and a 5-pack of microwave butter flavor for $5.

For more information, call Shirley Carbonneau at 472-0881.

additional space), then we have to take it (the Beechwood building)," he said.

Mariano added that "it doesn't appear it's really feasible" for the School Committee to hold onto the Myles Standish building and said he, also, is "leaning towards" the decision of giving the authority over the site back to the city.

Creedon said that currently there are about 130 to 140 kindergarten students at the Wollaston School from the old Massachusetts Fields-Beechwood Knoll Schools district, as well as about 100 at the Parker School and 20 at the Montclair School who would benefit from the Beechwood School being converted into a kindergarten center.

The site, which is currently rented by the Beechwood Community Life Center for $1 a year, contains 10 classrooms, three more than would be needed to accommodate the kindergarten students, according to Creedon.

Creedon said, however, that he is continuing to study the feasibility of ultimately reactivating the building as a full-fledged elementary school for Grades K-5. At least six additional rooms would have to be added to the facility in order for that to happen, he added.

Regarding funding for the kindergarten center, Creedon said "we would have to anticipate it in the school budget and utilize any other funding mechanism possible." The city could also apply to the state Department of Education for a 63 percent reimbursement on the project, he said.

Sheets said he would not consider bonding for any future public school projects until a "long-term master plan" for the city's schools is worked out.

"I'm not comfortable spending any more money until I know where we're going," said Sheets, who added that the city has bonded about $5.2 million in school projects in the last 18 months, including an addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy, an Early Childhood Center in South Quincy, and other renovations.

The Myles Standish School, which has been the site of the Quincy Elks Lodge for a number of years, is another matter altogether, according to Creedon. With the Elks recently breaking ground at a new site in West Quincy, the School Department will lose the approximately $1,000 a month the social organization pays for rent. All rent from tenants at the site must go toward the upkeep of the building and cannot be used for any other school needs, including textbooks, Creedon added.

The building is in dire need of renovations, according to Creedon, and the School Department does not have the money to keep the building open once the Elks move out.

Durkin said if the School Committee chooses to keep the Myles Standish site, it would have to decide what the future use of the building would be. If the committee decides to relinquish control of the site to the city, he said, "then we've washed our hands of it."

Sheets said one possibility would be for the city to take the building off the hands of the School Committee and move the members of the Beechwood Community Life Center there.

"Obviously we're looking at the possibility of the Beechwood Center going to Myles Standish," said Sheets. "The center has some great programs and we need to maintain them."

All three School Committee members also expressed similar sentiments, saying if the Beechwood Knoll School opens for kindergarten classes next September, the center should be given enough advance notice that it will have time to relocate to another site.

Sheets said if a kindergarten center were opened at the site, the Beechwood Center would probably not have to move until sometime next summer.

Pine Hill Cemetery Expansion To Add 2600 Graves

(Cont'd from Page 1)

Cemetery Board of Managers for their work and diligence. Besides Sweeney, board members attending the ceremony were Robert LaFleur, vice chairman; Paul Mauriello, secretary; Peter Gacicia, Arthur Wahlberg and Earl Eaves, who recently retired from the board after eight years.

Arloa Webber, another board member, was unable to attend.

The contractor for the project, John McCourt Company of South Boston, has begun removing brush, stumps and large boulders from the new section. After the site is cleared, rock and fill will be replaced by gravel suitable for gravesites.

Cattaneo said he hopes the site will be cleared by November. If so, grass will be planted this fall and the site should be ready for new graves next spring.

Larry Keats, of H.W. Moore Associates of Boston, is the site engineer.

The new section, referred to as section 7, is located 105 feet from Chickatabot Rd. Trees and brush near the road will remain, providing a natural buffer for the site.

The city purchased the land for the Pine Hill Cemetery in 1962 from the Metropolitan District Commission.

Development of the cemetery began four years later in 1966.

As the city's only cemetery with land available for expansion, Cattaneo said another 10 acres could be developed for gravesites at Pine Hill Cemetery. That would provide burials for Quincy residents for approximately the next 50 years, Cattaneo said.

Tuition Remains Low At Eastern Nazarene College

Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston is maintaining its position as one of the lowest cost private four-year institutions in Massachusetts.

Four-year colleges and universities in the state have an average tuition of $13,688, with room and board at $5,578 for a total yearly bill of $19,396. Comparatively at ENC, tuition for the year is $8,270 with room and board at $3,400 for a total of $12,165.

ENC spokesman Cliff Hersey said the network of Nazarene colleges in the US (eight) have traditionally had comparatively low tuition costs because they are annually supported by regional Nazarene churches. Income from this support accounts for12% of the college's operating budget, and is added to endowment funds and scholarships which not only keep overall tuition low, but helps individual students afford college.

"The support we receive from our churches is like having a 30 million dollar endowment," Hersey said. "For a small college like ours, that means we can make college more affordable for our students."

Eastern Nazarene College is committed to its Christian perspective and mission. Students attend chapel services three times a week, live in gender separate dorms, and take a core of courses which includes some religious studies.

"We make no apologies for our approach," said Hersey. "This kind of college exists to serve the community with a distinctly Christian perspective."

The college has over 30 separate denominations represented among its small traditional undergraduate population. Students may choose from over 50 undergraduate programs, taught in the liberal arts tradition. All students share in the benefits of reduced tuition provided by the sponsoring institution.

Voter Registration Drive At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital was scheduled to host a voter registration drive for the upcoming local fall elections Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the main lobby of the hospital.

All community residents were invited to register.

In order to vote in the Nov. 2 election, you must be a citizen of the U.S., be 18 years old by election day and be registered to vote. Anyone who has recently moved from another city or town must re-register.

Quincy residents can sign an affidavit which includes name, address and date of birth. Those living outside of Quincy should bring a driver's license or a piece of identification showing address, and registration will be mailed to your home town's voting registration office.

Those who cannot attend the Quincy Hospital and live in Quincy can register in person at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Deadline to register for the Nov. 2 election is Oct. 13.

OBITUARIES

Elizabeth A. Campbell, 59

President Of Young World Dance Studio

A funeral Mass for Elizabeth A. (Carline) Campbell, 59, of Quincy, was celebrated Sept. 22 in St. Ann's Church.

Mrs. Campbell died Sept. 17 at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston after a long battle with cancer.

Known as "Miss Bette," she was owner and operator of Young World Dance Studio in Quincy and president of the Greater Brockton Dance Teachers Association.

She was dedicated to the youth of the South Shore not only as a dance teacher but also as a personal friend and confidant to many of her students. She was also proud of the fact that she successfully taught the blind and deaf to dance.

Born in Boston, she lived in Billerica before moving to Quincy 34 years ago. She was a graduate of St. Charles High School in Woburn.

She is survived by her husband, Raymond W. Campbell; two brothers, Charles J. Carline Jr. of Seabrook, N.H. and Joseph G. Carline of Wareham; two sisters, Eleanor F. Andrews of Windham, N.H. and Patricia M. DiBiase of Tewksbury; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the Wellness Community of Greater Boston, 1320 Centre St., Suite 305, Newton Center, MA 02159.

Theodore N. Parsons, 90

Worked 40 Years For Bethlehem Steel

A memorial graveside service for Theodore N. Parsons, 90, of Quincy, was held Tuesday in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Mr. Parsons died Aug. 11 at home after a brief illness.

A retired cost estimator for Bethlehem Steel, he worked 40 years for the company.

He was chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee, as associate member of the Selective Service Advisory Board in Quincy and was a Massachusetts State Ballot Law commissioner under former Gov. Christian A. Herter.

A member of the Rural Masonic Lodge in Quincy, he was a 32nd Degree Mason, a former member of Aleppo Temple of Boston, a member of the Scottish Rite Bodies of Boston, the Scottish Rite Club of Sarasota, Fla., and a charter member of the Sahib Temple in Sarasota.

Husband of the late Alma G. (Landry) Parsons, he is survived by a son, Donald R. Parsons of Braintree; two daughters, Norma L. Peterson of Sarasota, Fla. and Ruth A. Knowles of Quincy; a brother, Carleton H. Parsons of Quincy; two sisters, Alice Dorothy Parsons and Jane Stewart, both of Fredericksburg, Va.; eight grandchildren, and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were by the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

Donations may be made to the Senior Citizens Center Memorial Fund, 1000 Southern Artery, Quincy, MA 02169.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Our best lessons are sometimes taught to us by our failures. The best opportunities frequently come to us not in the sunny days of success but after fate has given us what first appears to be some very heavy chastisement. Yes, failure can be the most stimulating of all teachers, provided that we are willing to learn.

We like this quotation by Wilferd A. Peterson: "He who hopes to avoid all failure and misfortune is trying to live in a fairyland; the wise man realistically accepts failures as a part of life and builds a philosophy to meet them and make the most of them . . . He learns from the scientist who said, "At best, research is about 99% failure and 1% success and the 1% is the only thing that counts."

Remember, everybody, but everybody, makes mistakes. In order to master your own, put them behind after having learned from them . . .

George R. Alcott, 67

Sealer Of Weights And Measures; Quincy Elks Past Exalted Ruler

A funeral Mass for George R. Alcott, 67, of Quincy, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Star of the Sea Church.

Mr. Alcott died Sept. 26 at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton after a brief illness.

He was a sealer of weights and measures in Quincy for 27 years before retiring three years ago. He previously held the same position for the town of Braintree and was past president of the Massachusetts Weights and Measures Association.

Past exalted ruler of the Quincy Elks Lodge, he was also its secretary for 20 years. A life member of the Elks, he had been active in the lodge for 45 years.

Raiders Face Test At Plymouth Friday

By TOM SULLIVAN

A year ago sophomore Sean Nee was called upon when the North Quincy football team suffered injuries to several backs and he answered the call by rushing for 600 yards despite missing three games.

In this year's opener against Stoughton Nee was held to 56 yards as the Raiders' offensive line had a rough night, but last Friday night at Veterans Stadium Nee had a game to remember as he rushed for 215 yards to lead North (1-1) to a 40-16 victory over Falmouth (1-1) in its Old Colony League opener.

This Friday night North faces a severe test when it travels to Plymouth to face the Blue Eagles, a 27-7 winner over Taunton last week after losing to Brockton, 21-7. Plymouth is favored to win the league title won last year by North Quincy's unbeaten Div. 1B Super Bowl champions.

"Nee was just terrific," said North coach Ken McPhee. "But a lot of the credit tonight belongs to our offensive line, which was improved 100 percent over our first game. I knew it would improve. The offense is young and had a lot of pressure on it against Stoughton, but they pressure is off and they were outstanding tonight." McPhee pointed to the work of Jason Picardi, Dave Pacino, Justin Dilks, Dave Carney, Sean Halpin and Brian Raftery.

While North had an impressive 384 yards on the ground, the North defense, led by Pacino, who had 10 unassisted tackles, held Falmouth to 121 yards rushing, including a 51-yard touchdown run by Chris MacDonald.

Dan Duncan threw only six passes for North, completing two for 25 yards. Falmouth's quarterbacks were five for 12 for 51 yards.

"I feel this is a tainted win as I hated to scored 40 points on them," said McPhee. "I have never had a team score 40 points, but by the same token, you can't tell the kids not to play."

Keith Martinson had 60 yards rushing, including a 48-yard touchdown; Mike McGregor had 55 yards rushing, including a 51-yard TD run, and Derek Epps carried three times for 32 yards, including a nine yard scoring run.

McPhee unveiled a new kicker, Nigerian Ogldie Azuonwe, who kicked two extra points.

Martinson recovered a fumbled punt on Falmouth's 38 to set up the first score. Nee raced around the left side for 38 yards and the score, after apparently being stopped far up the field. Azuonwe kicked the point.

Another Falmouth fumble on the ensuing kickoff was recovered by North's Martin Shields on the Falmouth 33. On the second play of the second quarter, following runs of 17 and 15 yards by Nee, Duncan scored from the one on a quarterback sneak.

Next it was McGregor's turn. Following a Falmouth punt, McGregor broke down the right sidelines for 51 yards and a score. Nee's rush for the two points was nullified by a penalty and Duncan then passed to Raftery (6-5, 260 pounds), who took the ball out of the hands of a Falmouth defender for the two points and a 21-0 halftime lead.

There was no scoring in the third quarter and in the fourth quarter 21 points were scored in 1:46.

Two plays later Falmouth's MacDonald broke loose for a 51-yard touchdown run and Joe Kelley passed to Eric Ayers for the twp-point conversion.

North came right back and, on the second play from scrimmage, following a 44-yard run by Nee, Epps scored from the nine and Azuonwe kicked his second point.

Martinson scored North's final touchdown on a 41-yard run. With time running out Brain Sullivan hit Wes Glover with an 1-yard touchdown pass for Falmouth and Ryan McGuire rushed for the final two points of the game.

Quincy City Councillor Joseph LaRaia's brother, Bob, is a Falmouth assistant coach.

Cross Country

North Girls Win, Boys Lose At Plymouth

The North Quincy cross-country teams opened their seasons last week at Plymouth with the girls winning, 22-34, while the boys lost to the Blue Eagles, expected to be the best in the state this year, 15-48.

Erin Duggan of North was the individual girl's winner, followed by Laura Blaikie, third; Kate McNamara, fifth; Erica Doherty, sixth; Mel Gaziano, seventh, and Kelly Duggan, 10th.

The first north boys' finisher was Eric Torvi in sixth place, while Steve Cannon placed 16th.

The North freshmen squads faced Weymouth, but the young Wildcats were too strong and won both meets.

The boys were shut out, 15-40, with Billy Graney North's top finisher in sixth place, Jimmy Wan seventh, Peter Connolly eighth, Bill O'Connell ninth, Ted McGillicuddy 10th and Billy Nelson 15th.

Several North runners turned in outstanding performances in the second annual Baystate Invitational meet at Franklin Park.

The varsity girls engaged in a barn-burner with Newton North, Woburn and Tewksbury, finishing a close fourth.

The freshmen girls finished fourth and the freshmen boys ninth.

North medalists were Kerry Ginty, seventh in freshman girl two-mile; Chrissy Herman seventh in jayvee girls 2 1/2 miles; Colleen Cotter, 12th in jayvee girls 2 1/2 miles; Erin Duggan, ninth in varsity girls three miles, and Torvi, 10th in varsity boys three miles.

"We'll be there when it counts," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "We were just feeling our way around and we're not in great racing shape yet. The state meet on Nov. 13 is a long way off and we will be ready for it."

The North teams will be at Barstable Friday and will host Silver Lake next Tuesday.

North Jayvees Win 12-10 Squeaker

The North Quincy junior varsity football team opened its season with a come-from-behind 12-10 victory over Stoughton.

Stoughton took the lead early when the North quarterback was sacked in the end zone for a safety.

The Black knights made it 10-10 with a touchdown pass and the two-point conversion as they beat the North secondary for the only time.

The secondary of Co-Capt. Jamie Karvelis, Eric Zimmerman, Robbie Callow, Kenny Burke and Keith Kabilian was outstanding the rest of the way.

At the start of the second half Co-Capt and quarterback Sean Dolbeare hit Zimmerman with a 75-yard touchdown pass.

With time running out Karvel took a handoff and raced 80 yards for the winning touchdown.

Quincy Girls Win, Boys Bow At Taunton

The Quincy girls' and boys' cross-country teams opened their seasons against Taunton last week with the girls winning, 24-31, and the boys impressive in losing, 23-32.

The girls were led by Liz Sawan, who won in 17:41. Suzanne Civitarese placed second, freshman Kathryn Lencki fourth, Amy Nickles eighth, sophomore Maryann Ashworth ninth and Lauralee Summer 11th. Also running were Laura Molina, Kristina Evans and Dawn O'Mara.

On the boys' side junior Jim Lencki won in 14:21. Junior Doug Gallagher was sixth, junior Damon Vlaco seventh and freshman Matt Langille eighth. Also running well were junior Brian Gallahue, 10th; junior Rich Bergeron, 12th; sophomore John Duffy, 11th; and Hubert Lam, 13th. Joe Sweeney, David Sawan, Harold Mortel, Mike McIvor and Joe Kelly also ran well.

"I am very pleased with these groups' outstanding work habits and dedication," said coach John Franceschini. "We are very young and these kids hold a bright future for us."

Presidents Host Taunton Friday Night

By TOM SULLIVAN

Failing to capitalize on several good chances, the Quincy football team, after leading, 14-0, lost a 27-14 decision to Bridgewater-Raynham last Saturday at Bridgewater and the Presidents (1-1) hope to rebound this Friday night when they host Taunton (1-1) in a 7 o'clock game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Taunton, a 6-0 winner over Quincy a year ago, defeated Durfee in its opener but lost to Plymouth, favored to win the Old Colony League title, last week.

"We got off to a great start against Bridgewater-Raynham but we had numerous opportunities after that but couldn't capitalize," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer. "They gave our offense many chances as we recovered three fumbles (Mike Feeley, Matt Strauchon and Bill Dunn) and had an intercepted pass. We received a real tough break at the end of the first half when Terry Bowman ran a kickoff back 97 yards for an apparent score which would have put us in front, 21-14, but it was called back because of an illegal block."

Quincy relied mainly on its passing game and Mike Bartlett was 13-for-31 for 178 yards and both touchdowns.

Jason Sova had a fine game and had five pass receptions.

Mike Elder had 37 yards rushing, Sam Brown 39 and Bowman 27.

"Our defense was on the field for a long time and did a good job, except for a couple of breakdowns," Raymer said. He praised Paul Colleary, who had 12 tackles, Bill Dunn, Feeley, John Green, Jason Bennett, Straughon, Ashley Davis, Kevin Carey, Tim Dowling, who had his third interception in two games, Jon Gangi and Steve Provost.

Raymer also had good words for the offensive line, singling out Dave D'Olympio, Peter Kolson, Feeley, who had another outstanding two-way game; Butch Palaza and Jeff Burrell.

"Tom Malvesti had another tremendous game for us," Raymer said. "This is his first year playing since playing freshman ball and he has had two fines games for us."

Quincy scored early when Feeley recovered a fumble on the B-R 47 and Bartlett hit Elder with a 30-yard scoring pass. Elder kicked the extra point.

Early in the second quarter, Strauchon recovered a fumble on the B-R 21 and Bartlett passed to Bowman for the score and Elder again kicked the point.

The Presidents appeared to be on their way to another score which would have broken the game wide open, but B-R's Jeff DiMarzio intercepted a pass a midfield with 3:33 left in the half.

The Trojans scored their first TD on a five-yard pass from DiMarzio to Matt Pauline. The biggest play on the drive came on a third and eight on Quincy's 49. DiMarzio dropped back to pass, rolled to his left and raced 25 yards to Quincy's 24.

The Presidents, starting on their 13, tried to run out the clock but were stopped cold and punted to their 47 with 44 seconds left in the half.

Pauline scored from the four and Rich Ennis kicked his second extra point to tie the game. With 11 seconds left, Bowman took the kickoff, went up the middle and broke the left side and galloped 97 yards for an apparent score, only to have an illegal block nullify the play.

In the third quarter Quincy drove to the B-R six-yard line but was stopped and a field goal attempt missed.

The Trojans put the game away when Pauline scored his third touchdown from the one in the third quarter and John Ferrari scored from the 11 in the final quarter.

Hockey

St. Moritz Devils Bow To Kingston

The St. Moritz Devils' Squirt minor league hockey team opened its season by losing to the South Shore Kings, 2-1, in a game played at the Kings' home ice in Needham.

After a scoreless first period in which the Devils' goalie, Kevin Ryan, was outstanding and Mark Mulhern, Robbie Johnson, Corey Rosenfield and Nick Sarno played well, the Kings scored early in the second period but the Devils' John Segalla scored to tie the game. Mike Aylward assisted. Just before the period ended the Kings scored the winning goal.

St. Moritz traveled to Marlboro to face the strong Minuteman Flames and lost, 5-1.

Aylward scored the only Devils' goal with Tom Egan assisting.

SECOND THOUGHTS

Many households have a second car that is used to make short car pooling trips and run errands. Because these cars are used on relatively minor drives, car owners are sometimes likely to figure that their servicing needs are also minor. The fact is, however, that using a car mostly for frequent, short trips may well put it in the "severe service" category. That is to say that its maintenance needs are greater than cars that generally undertake highway driving. Because short drives do not allow engines to warm up completely or subject them to fluctuating operating temperatures, they may be at risk for rapid wear and excessive buildup of unwanted combustion by-products. For this reason, second cars may need more attention than the primary family car.

HINT: Every now and again, take a second car out on the highway on a long drive to "stretch its legs."

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is very proud of our technicians and of the equipment they have on hand to properly service your cars. At 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) we are also very proud of the wonderful reputation we have earned by satisfying your friends and neighbors. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. October is National Car Care Month. It has been designated as such to educate motorists about the importance of maintaining their cars in an effort to improve air quality, highway safety, and fuel conservation.

Quincy Youth Soccer

By DICK SHEA

Last Sunday's Quincy Youth Soccer League games were rained out. Following are the results of the Saturday games:

Under14 Girls: Quincy Adams defeated Fire Extinguisher, 5-2, behind Tara Salvaggi's hat trick. Siobhan O'Conner and Kate Koch had the other goals and Jessica DiBona, Danielle Dundan, O'Connor and Lauren Koch had assists. Mary Chenette, Natalie Dyment and Kelly McVeigh had fine games. Elizabeth Lynch and Becky Mackey scored for Extinguisher, Rema Ashmanskas and Kathleen Burke had assists and goalie Kristen Bowes, Erin O'Brien and Marisa Ross played well.

Kerry Duffy scored four goals to lead That's Italian over Flower Loft, 6-4. Betsy Stone and Jill O'Connell had assists and goalie Meredith Rugg played well. Dorothy Cronin scored twice and Kate Williamson and Leanne Martin one each for Flower Loft. Barbara Ryan had two assists and Martin one.

Under 14 boys: J.B. D'Allesandro topped Hohman Oil, 9-5, as Russ Corner had a hat trick, Brian Doyle and Matt Norton two goals apiece and Kevin Walsh and Robbie Bell one each. Corner had two assists and Norton, Walsh and Bell one each and Alex King and Irvin Diaz had strong games. Steve Wilson had two goals and Mike Mulvey, Joe Watson and Matt Lebo one each for Hohman. Jim Barrett, John Barron, Wilson and Lebo had assists and Joe Flores, John Sullivan and Mark Miller played well.

USA Realty blasted Deware Funeral Home, 10-5, as Josh Eschelle had a hat trick and Jamie Parisi, Matt Flynn, Colin Shea, Paul Lutts, Eddie Smith, Billy Norris and Jason Lumaghini a goal each. Chad Fitzpatrick had two assists and Lutts, Mike Powers, Owen Nestor, Shea, Smith and Parisi one each. Chris Petit had a fine game. Billy Walker and Mark Stanton had two goals each and Matt Graham one for Deware. Stanton and Walker had two assists each and Graham one. Chris Curry, Mike Turner and Mike Cremin played well.

The George Burke Club toppled South Shore Building Trades, 11-7, as Jim Finn had four goals, Mike Shaw three, Jim Hasson two and Scott Staiti and Tony Monaco one apiece. Bard Hairizai had three assists and Matt Kisiel, Tommy Mann, Shaw and Finn one each. Goalie Jose Diaz played well. T.J. Miller and Joe Miller had hat tricks and Nathan DeRosario a goal for South Shore. Patrick Kenney had two assists and Mike Hastings, Joe Miller and DeRosario one each. Sean Burke, Justin Graeber and Shaun Walsh had fine games.

Under 14 Boys Tie Sharon

The Quincy Youth Soccer League under 14 boys travel team tied Sharon, 2-2, with Brian Doyle and Mike Shaw scoring the Quincy goals and Joe Miller and Eddie Smith having assists.

Matt Lebo, Matt Norton and Steve Wilson had fine games.

Softball

Washington C Champ

Washington Tap won its first playoff championship in the C Division of the Quincy Men's Softball League by defeating Noll Electric, four games to two in the finals.

The Tap, which finished at 29-10 (10-2 in the playoffs), was up, two games to none, but Noll came back to tie the series at two apiece.

The Tap, whose trademark all season was to group eight or more hits together, did that in the next two games to win the championship.

Paul Moriarty, Rob Cannella, Bob St. John, Mike Lane, Dan Savoie, Jim Slattery, Gary Sheridan and Scott St. John played well, while John Carroll pitched well for Noll.

In the A Division Malachy's II, which finished first at 22-7 in the regular season, defeated Gold's Gym in two straight games and currently leads the Fowler House, two games to none, in the semifinals.

Malachy's II pounded Fowler House, 19-10 and 20-6, in the first two games of the semifinals.

Steve Touma sparked Malachy's II with some strong pitching and clutch hitting. Will McHugh has been red hot, belting three home runs and making some outstanding catches.

Don Cooper, Dennis Kelly, George Grass and Frank Miceli have also played well in both games.

For Fowler House Scott Davidson have a three-run homer and Larry Taglieri has five hits and some great catches in left field. Bruce Tobin has continued his torrid hitting with four hits and Steve Constas has been outstanding defensively. Bob Burns and pitcher Jim Buhl have been standouts.

Fowler House advanced when it was awarded two forfeit wins over Jim Hines Plumbing, due to rule violations. Hines defeated Fowler House but league director John Powers awarded forfeits to Fowler House.

Malachy's I, which finished just behind Malachy's II with a 21-8 record, has come back to tie Par Flanagan's (20-9) at one game apiece.

Pat Flanagan's won the first game, 9-0, as Mike Cochrane pitched the shutout. Gerry Cochrane blasted a three-run homer and Mark Tobin had two hits.

Malachy's I came back to win the second game, 10-6.

Malachy's I had defeated Washington Tap A in two straight games to advance to the semifinals.

Pat Flanagan's was taken to a third and deciding game by Cronin's Pub and won, 4-3, on Gerry Cochrane's grand slam homer.

In the B Division the winner of The Tap-Washington Tap series (both teams are sponsored by Washington Tap owners Mike and Marylou Minichiello, who sponsor seven softball teams overall) and the winner of the Billy Jack's-Beau's Place series will meet for the playoff title.

Beau's defeated Liberty Lounge, 6-4 and 6-5, to advance to the semifinals vs. Billy Jack's.

In Game 1 Beau's topped Billy Jack's, 8-5. George Bouchard had the two hits as did Rob Glynn and Steve Guguen and John Spencer one each. Steve Spencer was the winning pitcher.

For Billy Jack's Rich Susi had two hits and Mark and Matt Donovan a double and single respectively.

Beau's finished second behind Washington Tap with a 20-9 record and Billy's was third at 16-13.

Washington Tap (23-6) defeated Brigham and Women's Hospital, 19-3 and 6-0, to advance to the semifinals against The Tap (9-20).

Mike Ainsley, Brian Salley and Dave Hutchins had a big series with four hits each. Matt Marks (12-3) and Larry McGul (14-3) pitched well for The Tap.

Washington Tap leads The Tap, one game to none, in the semifinals. Trailing, 4-3, in the bottom of the sixth, Washington Tap sent 14 men to the plate and scored nine times to win, 12-6.

Matt Ostiguy had two hits in the inning, Joe Godfrey had a double, Charlie Hicks had three hits as did Dave Hutchins, Brian Salley had a triple and Mike Ash had two hits, including a long home run. Mike Bates, Ainsley, Joe Prendiville, Bill Bourikas and Bob Ierardi had hits in the big inning.

For The Tap Paul Noonan had three hits and Chris Brian and Dennis Croke each had one.

The Tap had advanced by defeating the Alumni Cafe, two games to one, in a mild upset.

Rendle, Hayduk Shine At Bucknell

Former North Quincy stars Heather Rendle and Brenda Hayduk are among the key performers for the Bucknell University women's volleyball team.

Rendle, with eight kills, and Hayduk, a sophomore setter, excelled in the Bisons' opening day 3-0 win (15-9, 15-7, 15-12) over St. Francis. Hayduk suffered a sprained ankle during the match.

10 Champions Crowned In City Tennis Tournament

City champions in 10 divisions were crowned at the Quincy Recreation Department 23rd annual tennis championships.

The tournament, co-sponsored by Continental Cablevision, appears capable of many more years of success as new players and long-time regulars split this year's awards which were presented by Recreation Director Barry Welch and Tournament John Franceschini.

The Traftons again proved to be the first family of Quincy tennis as Pamela Trafton captured her fourth straight women's singles title, teamed with her father, Peter, for the William F. Ryan Cup and mixed doubles title, while Wendy captured the 16 and under championship.

Lenny Ciavarro also captured two championships by winning both the men's single and the Lionel "Shine" Buckley Bowl, then winning the men's 35 over championship in three sets.

Newcomers to the tournament, Aileen Smith Eleey teamed with her mother Isabelle to win the women's doubles and with husband peter to be a finalist in the mixed doubles.

The tournament was conducted nights and weekends at the Russell Park tennis courts and lasted 10 days. Long matches dominated the finals played on Sunday.

The men's singles saw a great match between seasonal veteran Leonard Ciavarro and upcoming star Paul Carty. The match went three hard fought sets with Ciavarro's baseline game being the difference in the 4-6, 6-2, 6-0 win.

Carty then teamed up with partner Marc Scanlon in the men's doubles to gain go three sets of super doubles action and win 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, over former champions Al McDonald and John Franceschini.

The fight for the William F. Ryan Cup (mixed doubles championship) may of ben the match of the tournament. Defending champions Peter Trafton and daughter Pam were taken to a third set by the husband and wife team of Eileen and Peter Eleey before winning by a 2-6, 6-3, 6-3 score. The match featured great serves, great volleys and great groundstrokes.

Pam Trafton went on to show her dominance in the women's singles by defeating a new face in the Quincy Tennis Tournament and a fine player, Janet Diesel, 6-0, 6-3. Pam continues to show why she is the finest high school player in the state.

The boys' 16 and under single category was highlighted by two brothers fighting it out for the championship. Geoffrey Meade took his older brother Christopher three sets and almost three hours before becoming champion.

In the girls' 16 and under division Wendy Trafton is planning to follow the family tradition of champions. She won her first by defeating another fine young player, Elizabeth Ryan, 6-1, 6-1.

In making the presentation of awards, Welch praised the sponsorship of Continental Cablevision which for the second year has helped to insure the continuation of the popular event for Quincy residents of all ages.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God. Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3x). Say this prayer for 3 consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. B.A.M. 9/30

Mariano Says State Should Keep Tight Rein On Spending

Although the state has ended the fiscal year with a $67 million surplus, Rep. Ron Mariano says a tight rein should remain on state spending.

The sizeable amount of unexpended revenue was realized after budget analysts closed the books on all funding accounts several weeks after the fiscal year ended in June. When the final checks were cut, the Commonwealth had a surplus in unexpended revenue.

"We have the responsibility to set spending levels and it's always nice to end the budget year with a cushion," Mariano said. "Our prudent approach will no doubt send another positive sign to Wall Street as well."

Mariano said a significant amount of the surplus would be placed in the state's "rainy day" fund which is reserved for emergency spending. For the past several years the legislature has built up the emergency account. It is presently at its highest level ever as it has more than a quarter of a billion dollars.

Still, Mariano said the state should exercise fiscal caution.

"While we have ended another year with a surplus, the legislature must not lose sight of the fact that a tight rein must be kept on spending.

"We must continue to prioritize the funding of essential programs while at the same time keep an eye on the Commonwealth's 'balance sheet.'"

'Modern Patriot, Community Friend'

City Council Chamber Plaque Honors Gillis

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Retired City Clerk John Gillis was honored as a friend to the community and a "modern patriot" Monday night in Quincy City Hall.

Gillis, who stepped down last year after more than three decades of service to the city, received a tribute of great distinction when a bronze plaque bearing his likeness was unveiled during the City Council's regularly-scheduled meeting in the City Council Chambers.

The event was attended by many of Gillis' family members, friends, and former co-workers as well as a number past and present city and state officials. An undoubtedly surprised and pleased crowd of people in attendance for an unrelated public hearing were also able to witness the unveiling.

Mayor James Sheets described Gillis as a caring person who deserved the honor that "very few people" have experienced before.

[Only four others have previously been recognized with plaques in the City Council Chamber: Boston Globe reporter Timothy Collins, Patriot Ledger reporter Fred Hunt, and City Solicitor Harry Pavan, who were all honored posthumously; and retired WJDA News Director Herb Fontaine].

"You're remembered more for who you are and what you are than what you've done," said Sheets. "John Gillis, you are a special person and you have lived in a special city, and your spirit of service has been in line with that of our forefathers. And that's what you are, you're a modern patriot."

City Clerk Joseph Shea, who succeeded Gillis, introduced members of Gillis' family in attendance and said he thought it was appropriate the plaque will hang on the wall behind the city clerk's chair in the council chamber where Gillis sat for so many years.

He also joked about the number of testimonials Gillis has received since stepping down as city clerk.

"This is the 10th party in the year since you've retired," Shea said with a smile.

Gillis, who was nearly overcome with emotion, called out to many of his friends in the chamber by name and said he was delighted with the honor.

"These parties are great," said Gillis. "Being city clerk was the greatest job anybody could ever have, and I enjoyed coming to work every day. Nobody can replace the fond memories I have. But it was time to go, and I have a great replacement in Joe Shea."

The plaque, which bears the city seal in addition to Gillis' likeness, reads as follows:

"John M. Gillis: City Clerk, 1959-1992; Assistant City Clerk, 1957-1959. A Proud Son of Quincy; A Dedicated, Beloved Public Servant; A True Friend Indeed to All in Need. October 1993."

55 Against, 24 For At Public Hearing

Opposition, Backing For Supermarket

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The date was different, but the message from most North Quincy and Wollaston residents was the same: a new Shaw's Supermarket is not wanted on the site of the old Boston Gear Works.

Members of the City Council and Planning Board reconvened a public hearing on the matter Monday night in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall to allow both residents and Shaw's officials to discuss the pros and cons of the issue. The hearing had been recessed July 26.

Council President Charles Phelan said that four neighborhood meetings have also been held regarding the Shaw's proposal to build a new store at the site, 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St. on the North Quincy-Wollaston line. The company, which already has a supermarket on Quincy Ave. just south of Quincy Center, requires a special granting permit from the City Council to do so.

Atty. Robert Fleming said July 26 that Shaw's plans to use 86,000 square feet at the site, including 56,000 for the new supermarket and 30,000 for "another user" such as a women's clothing store, drug store, or another kind of retail store. The 160,000 square foot Boston Gear facility will be demolished, he said.

The plan calls for the store to be accessible only on Hancock St., and trucks would load at the rear of the store, he added.

Because the Boston Gear Works site is on the border of the two neighborhoods, it encompasses part of Phelan's ward (Ward 5) and that of Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

Shaw's had more support Monday night than it did July 26. Fourteen people spoke in favor of the proposal and 10 were recorded in favor, as opposed to one who spoke in favor and 12 recorded at the previous public hearing.

As was the case with the first public hearing, however, the numbers were clearly on the side of the opponents of the proposal. Nineteen people spoke in opposition Monday night and 36 were recorded as being against the new store, and a petition signed by another 500 North Quincy and Wollaston residents was also presented to the council.

The format Monday night was exactly the same as that of the July 26 hearing. Fleming, as well as officials from Shaw's and other companies involved with the proposal, presented an outline of the project and stressed what they saw as the benefits of the store's presence. Among those were updated traffic signals, road and sidewalk repairs, 200 construction jobs, 250 full-time and part-time positions at the supermarket, and an increase in the tax base.

Among those who spoke in favor were representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the South Shore Building Trades, who said the jobs resulting from the store would be a

Korean War Memorial Proposed

Those who gave their lives in the Korean War will not be forgotten in the City of Quincy.

City Council President Charles Phelan and Ward 2 Councillor Ted Decristofaro introduced a resolution Monday night to create a committee which would working towards building a city monument in memory of the 54,247 men and women who lost their lives in the war.

DeCristofaro urged other councillors to support the resolution, and Phelan noted that several area veterans have expressed interest in the council forming such a committee.

"It's certainly a forgotten war," said Phelan.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia agreed.

"It's a war that somehow has slipped through the cracks," he said.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers also expressed support of the resolution.

Palmer Street Restoration Project To Start Up Again

The second phase of the Palmer Street restoration project is expected to begin in approximately one week, announces Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson.

Kolson said the phase two will utilize "cold planning" or the stripping of asphalt. Extensive sidewalk work, street restoration and drainage improvement along with new curbstone will be done.

It will not be the type of major excavation work done in the first phase, Kolson said.

The councillor said arrangements have been made with public works, the police department and all other agencies to affect a smooth operation with the least amount of delays.

The construction is expected to continue for 60 days.

"We appreciate your patience as we move forward with the project so that we may improve public safety on your streets as well as improving pedestrian traffic," Kolson said in a letter to his constituents.

Residents may view the project plans at the Adams Shore Library Wednesday, Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m.

$1,700 For Police Travel

The City Council Monday night appropriated $1,700 to the police department for out-of-state travel purposes.

The funds will be taken from "receipts received during 1994 in addition to the police budget," according to City Auditor Robert Foy.

The money was appropriated for Police Chief Francis Mullen's trip to St. Louis, Mo., to attend the 100th IACP (International Association of Chiefs of Police) Annual Conference later this month.

AMONG THE REPRESENTATIVES from business and labor who testified at Saturday's hearing at City Hall on President Clinton's health care reform plan were Frank Toland, left, chairman of the Massachusetts AFL-CIO, and Werner Schuele of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts. U.S. SENATE COMMITTEE on Labor and Human Resources chaired by Sen. Edward Kennedy (center) along with Dr. Philip Lee, assistant secretary for Health and Human Services and representative for the Clinton Administration, and Cong. Gerry Studds, a member of the House Subcommittee on Health, listen to testimony from speakers commenting on the president's proposed health care reform package during a hearing Saturday at City Hall.

Clinton Health Care Reform Gains Support At City Hearing

By GENE McCARTHY

President Clinton's proposed health care reform plan received strong support from private citizens, medical professionals and business representatives at a public hearing Saturday at Quincy City Hall.

Approximately 90 people attended the two and a half hour hearing, the first congressional hearing outside of Washington D.C. on the president's plans for health care reform.

Individuals addressing the legislators, ranging from small business owners and medical specialists to a private citizen who spoke of his own experiences with the current medical system, were met with sustained applause at the end of their presentations.

Sen. Edward Kennedy and Cong. Gerry Studds joined Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services Dr. Philip Lee in presiding over the public hearing.

In all, 10 speakers testified at the hearing. Each said the present health care system is in desperate need of reform and agreed that the difficulties currently plaguing the American health care system could only be rectified by the introduction of universal health coverage.

Of the 10 individuals who gave testimony, 7 represented business and medical groups. These individuals outlined in detail their concerns over the new health legislation.

Ellen Zane, director and chief executive officer of Quincy Hospital, applauded the president's initiative but asked lawmakers to develop fair contracting standards for managed care networkers.

"Public hospitals should compete on their own merit based on pre-established quality and efficiency criteria. But once quality and efficiency has been established," Zane said, "we must assist our public hospitals in assuring their inclusion in such networks.

"Our hope is that the long-standing commitment of public hospitals such as Quincy Hospital will not be overlooked as you craft your legislation," Zane told the panel. "Specifically, we are looking to you to ensure that municipal hospitals are not disadvantaged when managed care networks are formed."

Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet Community Health Center, Inc. and president of the Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers, expressed similar concerns.

"At our community health centers in Quincy and Hull last year 35 percent of our clients were without insurance at some point during the year, an additional 25 percent changed insurance to more managed care plans including Medicaid managed care," Hafer said.

"We praise a system that will share risk and cost, but fear a system that might pit the needs of the elderly and low income against the uninsured."

Lee said every effort would be made to protect the status of municipal hospitals and community health centers under President Clinton's Health Care Reform Plan.

Representatives of the business community voiced their own concerns about the fees and costs that both small and large businesses would face under the new forms of employee benefits and medical coverage.

George Grillo, a small businessman from Hingham, said he favors the plan since it would allow his currently non-insured employees a chance to get medical coverage.

Speaking of his own experiences in seeking medical coverage, Grillo said his own pre-existing medical condition made it very difficult for him to receive adequate medical coverage.

"Searching for health coverage is enough to give someone a pre-existing condition," quipped Grillo.

Elsie Frank, president of the Massachusetts Association of Older Americans, said she is concerned over about the future of Medicare in the Clinton reform package. Dr. Lee told Frank that although Medicare cost containment was high on Clinton's list of goals, cost containment would not result in a decrease of services to older Americans, but would be created by cutting payments to doctors.

The most dramatic testimony of the morning came from South Dartmouth resident Clifford Towne. An

3 Sergeants Promoted To Police Lieutenant

Three Quincy police officers, who collectively have served 65 years and became sergeants on the same day six years ago, were promoted to lieutenant Monday during a City Hall ceremony attended by approximately 100 friends and family.

Robert Crowley, Thomas Malvesti and William Stenmon were sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea as Mayor James Sheets and Chief Francis Mullen looked on. With the new appointments, the department now has 14 lieutenants on the 197-member force.

Mullen has tentatively named Stenmon full-time training coordinator, a job formerly performed by a captain with numerous other responsibilities.

Malvesti is expected to remain in charge of the community service unit he took over five years ago and Crowley will like remain in charge of the special operations unit he has supervised the last 18 months.

Sheets said the promotions are part of the city's ongoing effort to address what he perceives as his number one concern: crime.

"We have to try to make it so terribly uncomfortable for the criminal element in this city they'll go somewhere else. These are top quality police officers who have done the job.

I can assure you that they are men of character, dedication and commitment," the mayor said.

Crowley, a 21-year veteran; Malvesti, a 22-year veteran; and Stenmon, a 23-year veteran, were appointed to the rank of sergeant July 6, 1987.

As lieutenants, the three Quincy residents will earn $47,565 per year, according to Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger.

Crowley, 46, joined the department in 1972. He worked with the drug control and organized crime unit for 15 years before becoming a patrol supervisor six years ago. He runs the special operations unit which addresses ongoing crime problems in the city.

Malvesti, 45, became a patrolman in 1971. He served as a detective for eight years with the community service unit, then was named its supervisor five years ago.

The community service unit handles domestic and they've shown me nothing but dedication.

"To run a police department you have to have a team and these individuals are team players," the chief said.

District Attorney Bill Delahunt, who worked with the three men as the police department's legal advisor before his present position, praised their professionalism.

"Their work has been outstanding," he said. violence, juvenile cases, abuse of the elderly, child abuse, sexual assaults, drug education, crime prevention and violence prevention.

Stenmon, 47, joined the force in 1970. He was a patrolman for several years before joining the community service unit as a detective. He most recently served as a patrol supervisor. As lieutenant, he will handle all the department's training programs.

Mullen said he was delighted with the new appointments.

"It's a great choice. I've known these men and worked with these men

Public Hearing On 2 Schools

The School Committee was scheduled to hold a public hearing last night (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, on proposed plans for the closed Beechwood Knoll and Myles Standish Elementary Schools.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon has recommended reopening the Beechwood Knoll School as a kindergarten center and returning the Myles Standish School to the city.

The Quincy Sun ran a front-page story on the proposal last week.

Free House Numbers Offered By Mayor, QNHS

Free house numbers are being offered to Quincy residents through a program sponsored by the Mayor's Office and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services.

Residents may pick up a coupon for numbers at any of the following community centers: Beechwood, Squantum, Adams Shore, Houghs Neck, Ward 2 and Atlantic. Coupons may be redeemed at any Curry Hardware location.

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization serving the city of Quincy since 1981. Services include home improvement loans, grants, financial and construction counseling.

This program is funded in cooperation with Quincy Savings Bank. More information is available through the neighborhood community centers by calling 770-2227.

Emergency Management Seeking Shelter Volunteers

Quincy's Emergency Management Agency is seeking volunteers to staff the city's emergency shelters as shelter managers.

Volunteers would be needed in times of natural and man-made disasters or emergencies. Anyone interested would be trained in this capacity.

For more information or to volunteer, call 376-1234.

BONE CANCER: A RARE BREED

Cancers that begin in the bone, called primary bone cancers or sarcomas, are relatively rare diseases. Still, every year about 2,000 people in the U.S. are diagnosed with one or another of the different varieties. of the three major types of bone cancer, osteosarcoma is the most common. A disease usually found in young people, it often begins at the ends of bones, where new tissue forms. Ewing's sarcoma is another type that tends to occur in youths 10 to 25 years old, affecting the middle part of large bones such as the long bones of the thigh or upper arm. Chondrosarcoma is the type of bone cancer most common among adults, marked by tumors that form in the rubbery cartilage around the joints.

P.S. Most lumps that form on bones are not cancerous. X-rays and blood tests may be recommended to form a diagnosis.

Any cancer is most easily treated when diagnosed early, and the best way to help insure this is to notify your physician immediately if you notice suspicious changes in your body. For more information on the early signs of cancer or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our new office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St, Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Quincy, Ill. Remembers

The people in Quincy, Ill. apparently will long remember what their sister city here did to help them during the ravaging floods this summer.

JAY ASHER

A radio equipment manufacturer representative from Quincy, Ill. happened to be there ad spotted Asher's name tag.

He went over to Asher to tell him how grateful he and the other residents of Quincy, Ill. were to the people of our Quincy for the donations of supplies and money and for their concerns.

"We will always remember you," he said.

He then gave Asher a personal example of how bad things were out there during the floods.

"My house was standing there one minute," he said. "And just minutes later, it was completely gone."

Incidentally, WJDA recently marked its 46th anniversary. The station, founded by Jay's father James D. Asher and Joseph Tobin, went on the air Sept. 13, 1947. The call letters WJDA, in case you didn't know, are Jay's father's initials.

JIM ASHER

The station wouldn't last. the skeptics predicted.) That sounds familiar). But it did and is a true community asset today.

Congratulations to you, Jay, Roy Lind, John Nicolson, Joe Catalano and the rest of the gang at WJDA.

CITY CLERK Joe Shea is still sporting that beard which reminds you of Raymond Burr in the role of Ironsides.

SHEA Without

SHEA With

The beard is getting thicker and thicker and there is some suspicion around City Hall that he's using Turfbuilder.

Joe insists that the reaction to the shrubbery is 50-50: half say "keep it," half say "shave it."

The negative vote may be picking up. Four visitors in his office the other day were polled on the question. And Jack Beaton. Bill Draicchio, George Parker and Bon Storella were unanimous: "Shave it!"

But Joe isn't ready to part with it.

Instead, he points out that Harrison Keith, one of his predecessors as city clerk had a bushy beard. And went on to be elected mayor in 1899.

Hmmm!

SEAN BARRY, who finished a strong third in the School Committee preliminary election, has two sets of campaign bumper stickers.

BARRY

One is traditional: Sean Barry, School Committee, white on blue. The other, black letters on orange background declare: "I'm For Barry."

The latter are recycled, Barry muses.

They originally were Barry Goldwater's in his campaign for President against Lyndon Johnson in 1964.

Barry (Sean) likes to collect political memorabilia. He came across 50 of the Goldwater stickers some time ago and put them away.

This year he decided to dust them off and put them to good use.

Third Phase Of Quincy Center Improvement Project Underway

The third phase of the Quincy Center street and sidewalk improvements from McIntyre Mall to Dimmock St. began Tuesday and work is expected to continue up until Thanksgiving, according to City Engineer Fred Mirza.

"The bulk of the work, if all goes according to plan, should be completed by Thanksgiving. The remainder of the project, including the installation of the new light poles, will be done in the spring," Mirza said.

The work will include road and sidewalk reconstruction, installation of historic lighting poles and electrical distribution system, installation of traffic interconnect and fire alarm systems and landscaping.

Sidewalk reconstruction and conduit installation will begin on or about Oct. 12.

Construction crews will work from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. except when excavating and paving the road surface which will take place during evening hours.

Work on the sidewalks will be done in sections with each section taking roughly two weeks to complete.

Parking will be allowed on the side, away from the ongoing construction along Hancock St.

No construction vehicles will be parked overnight along Hancock St., Mirza said.

Residents will be given advance notice if any side streets are to be temporarily closed.

Mirza said accessibility to local businesses will be maintained at all times.

For more information regarding construction operations, call Mirza at 376-1934.

National Fire Safety Week

Now is a good time to check your smoke detector batteries.

Your safety is my concern.

State Representative

Mike Bellotti

'Get Out, Stay Out' Theme Of Fire Prevention Week

The Quincy Fire Department is observing Fire Prevention Week on the theme, "Get Out!, Stay Out! Your Fire Safe Response."

Deputy Chief Paul Cuddy said this year's theme was chose because "unfortunately, many people are still not aware of how dangerous fire really is.

"When a fire starts burning, it quickly makes your home a deadly place: the oxygen level rapidly drops, the fire produces smoke containing poisonous gases, the temperature in the room rises to over 1000 degrees Fahrenheit in minutes, and the smoke becomes so thick you can't see your hand in front of you.

"The way to survive a fire is to get quickly and stay out," Cuddy said.

"It's a proven fact that this strategy does save lives," the deputy chief added.

In order to make the most of it, however, the Quincy Fire Department offers the following suggestions:

•Install smoke detectors which provide an early warning of fire. Test detectors monthly and change the batteries every year.

•Make an escape plan from your home, know two ways out of every room, get out fast and have all family members meet at a meeting place, call the fire department from a neighbor's house, and perhaps most importance, practice your plan.

•Once you have safely escaped a fire, never go back inside for any reason. Only firefighters are properly trained and equipped to rescue people who are trapped.

In conjunction with Fire Prevention Week, the Quincy Fire Department announces two new programs being offered in order to educate Quincy citizens on matters of fire safety.

First, a speaker's bureau is being formed consisting of Quincy firefighters who are volunteering their time to make safety presentations to groups in the city.

Second, the Quincy Fire Department has joined forces with the American Red Cross to educate senior citizens about fire safety. This program, "Fire Safety for Older Americans," will be made available to all seniors' groups in the city.

For more information on either of these programs, contact Deputy Chief Paul Cuddy at 376-1027.

Comments On Our 25th Anniversary Issue

While I certainly very much enjoyed the 25th anniversary issue of The Quincy Sun, marvelling in Quincy's rich history, I was somewhat dismayed to find no mention of the 150th anniversary of St. Mary's Parish, West Quincy, celebrated in 1990.

Not only is St. Mary's the first Catholic church in Quincy, settled by Italian and Irish immigrants, it is the oldest Catholic church on the South Shore! Hopefully, we will find at least an honorable mention in your next anniversary issue.

[We're sorry about that, Father. Don't know how we overlooked it.]

Enjoyed your 25th issue, especially my daughter Pattie's name as one of the three beauties at age 4. She is now 29, a wife, mother and nurse.

Your 25th anniversary edition published on Sept. 23 was synonymous of the excellent quality work you and your staff are noted for.

The phrase "dedication to community service" is scattered throughout your newspaper; however, your devotion and fidelity towards the City of Quincy, its events and the citizens of this great city, goes beyond what is normally expected of a local paper.

Congratulations to another "great publishing job." You and your staff are to be commended.

Trailer Camp Permit Request Causes Row

Oct. 7-13
45 Years Ago

Mel-Thomas Rockwell, professor of philosophy at Eastern Nazarene College, lashed out at those officials who promised veterans everything while they were at the front and then denied then even a roof ever their heads when they returned home from the wars.

Prof. Rockwell spoke at a public hearing on a trailer camp permit sought by Albert F. Hermes of 247 Sea St., Merrymount, so that two young veterans, both ENC students, and their wives could live temporarily on his land in their trailers.

"This is a disgrace and a shame to the Americanism and the patriotism of the people of Merrymount," said Prof. Rockwell, noting the opposition to the trailer permit raised by some nearby Merrymount residents.

"If it had not been for these men, there would be Germans located in trailer camps here and they should not have taken the trouble to come to the officials to get permits, either.

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash took the matter under advisement pending a personal inspection of the site.

FIGHT TO SAVE ELM

The Forestry Department was fighting to save the city's oldest tree, an elm 21 feet in circumference in front of the home of Laughlin H. Cameron, 103 Bigelow St., Quincy Center, which was showing the symptoms of Dutch elm disease.

The tree, which was estimated to be between 336 and 672 years old, stood on the front lawn of the house that used to be the home of Ethelbert Nevin, composer of "The Rosary," and the late banker Clarence Burgin when he was first married.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements.and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Rev. Gene Langevin Resigning As Pastor Of Squantum First Church

Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, who has been pastor of the First Church of Squantum for 15 years, has announced his resignation citing personal and health reasons.

The resignation was accepted by the church at a business meeting last week.

Dr. Langevin had asked the church to relieve him of his pastoral duties in a letter that he had sent to the congregation last month.

The pastor said the reasons he wanted to leave included his need for more time to do some personal writing, his desire to spend more time on the ministry of "The Way Up," a youth program he founded nearly 30 years ago for working with unchurched kids, and his personal need for hip surgery which might incapacitate him for several months.

REV. GENE LANGEVIN

After voting to accept the pastor's resignation, which will become effective at the end of this year, the members of the church voted to extended the use of the parsonage to Dr. Langevin and his family rent-free for the first six months of 1994.

"It is intended as a thank-you to you and your family for all of your years of faithful service here," church moderator Joan Hansen told the pastor about the congregation's gift.

Dr. Langevin has been pastor of the Squantum church since September, 1978. As agreed at the congregational meeting, he will continue to be available to the church until Dec. 31. In the meantime, either he or guest ministers will fill the pulpit.

A pastoral search committee will decide on a successor at a later date.

The pastor's youth program, The Way Up, has already moved to the building of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston. Sponsored by churches, church groups and individuals throughout the state, The Way Up provides work experiences, counseling, art projects, home visits, advocacy, youth groups and worship services for teen-agers in the community. The group serves both girls and boys between 12 and 17.

On Sunday, Dr. Langevin preached on the subject, "Who Is a Member of This Church?" The congregation observed World Communion Sunday by celebrating the Lord's Supper.

Organist Mary Ruth Scott and pianist Janet Williamson accompanied the congregational singing.

Jack and Ruth Westerbeke were the greeters. Earl Taylor and Roberta Sheehan were the ushers. Joan Hansen was in charge of the Fellowship Hour.

Sunday morning worship service begins at 10:30 a.m.

USS Salem Decals At Stop And Shop

The Stop and Shop Supermarket Company is helping to bring home the U.S.S. Salem by supporting the U.S. Naval And Shipbuilding Museum to be built at The Fore River Shipyard, Quincy Point.

Specially designed decals featuring the U.S.S. Salem are available at the checkout aisles of the two Quincy Super Stop and Shops, Newport Ave. and Southern Artery, and the Super Stop and Shop on Grove St., in Braintree.

The commemorative decals cost $1. All proceeds will be donated to the U.S Naval Shipbuilding Museum slated to open in 1994.

In addition, Stop and Shop will match shoppers donations up to $25,000. To date, 1200 decals have been purchased.

Why do some banks only give home equity loans to people who DON'T really need them?

Don't worry. It doesn't make sense to us, either. That's why we've developed a home equity loan program that's a little easier, for people who may not otherwise qualify. We take a more flexible look at your job and payment histories. We offer terms from 1 to 15 years with payments as low as $50 a month. And there's no appraisal necessary on amounts up to $15,000. So if you're looking for a loan between $5,000 and $25,000, and don't know if you'd qualify for a home equity loan at other banks, talk to us at Fleet. Stop by your local branch office today.

*For example, for a 15 year, $10,000 loan made on 9/1/93, the APR would be 8.95%. You would make 180 monthly payments of $101.43. Hazard insurance is also required. This offer is good only for new Equiloan accounts and cannot be used to pay off existing Fleet debt.

All QHA's 639 Apartments To Be Deleaded

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said this week all of the QHA's 639 apartments for families will be deleaded within the next six to eight months.

Lead paint has been discovered in 32 of the Germantown apartments that were tested for lead, according to Comer and other QHA and city health officials.

Comer said since all of the apartments inspected so far have tested positive for low levels of lead, he sees no need for further testing.

"My plan is to delead the whole authority," he said. "Every one of my units will be deleaded, I can tell you that."

Peter Kolson, the city's Ward 1 councillor and a QHA employee, said the lead has been found only on windowsills, doors and closets.

"Nothing in walls or ceilings," said Kolson.

Comer said the 32 apartments have been tested by Dennison Environmental Services, a private company hired by the QHA. Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said 15 of those apartments were also inspected by the health department. All have tested positive in the "sporadic" areas such as those Kolson described, she said.

Apartments have been inspected, and children tested for lead poisoning, since the accidental discovery two months ago of lead paint in the QHA's Snug Harbor complex in Germantown, officials revealed last week.

Health officials discovered the problem while visiting an apartment at the complex on an unrelated matter. When peeling paint was discovered at the apartment, it was tested and discovered to be lead-based.

Because young children are most likely to eat leaded paint, the health department is recommending that all area children age 6 and under be screened for lead poisoning. Out of the 639 QHA apartments for families, 176 have children under age 6 living in them.

Gallahue said of 15 children tested by the health department, none have tested positive for lead poisoning.

In addition to screening children and testing apartments, soil around the complexes will also be tested for lead poisoning, she noted.

Since the initial lead testing began, the QHA has notified residents of the problem and health officials have met with parents to discuss testing for lead poisoning, Gallahue said.

Children can be tested for lead poisoning at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., the third Tuesday of every month, the Manet Health Center in Germantown, and other local health clinics.

Meanwhile, any family that resides in an apartment that needs to be deleaded will be placed in a substitute apartment until deleading is complete, Kolson said. The average time period for deleading is about "two days per unit," depending on the size of the apartment, he noted.

Comer said he could not guess how much it will cost to delead all of the apartments.

"I don't want to speculate," he said.

Comer added that he has discovered that a youngster living in one of the units tested positive for lead poisoning in 1973, but although the health department at the time investigated the incident, it did not "follow through to make sure the job was complete.

"I'm irate that it was not done to the satisfaction of the law," said Comer.

"I'm now going to do what was not done 20 years ago."

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS presents a citation proclaiming Crime Prevention Month in Quincy to the city's crime dog, McGruff, and Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna. The city will observe Crime Prevention Month with a number of activities in October.

Activities Planned For Crime Prevention Month

Quincy will observe Crime Prevention Month with a series of activities in October, announces Chief Francis Mullen.

A public safety seminar called, "Are You Safe," will be presented Wednesday, Oct. 13, Oct. 20 and Oct. 27 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the Quincy Police Academy, second floor of police headquarters.

The program will focus on personal and property crime, including street crime, home security, safety while driving, responding to strangers at the door, and rape prevention, as well as community responses to violence and drug trafficking.

A free rape prevention clinic will be held Tuesday, Oct. 12 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Masters of Self Defense Center, 11 Revere Rd., Quincy.

A short presentation will be given by Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna. Students will be shown how to defend themselves against attack.

The program will be followed by a free week of women's self defense course.

A free self defense program for children ages four and up will be held Saturday, Oct. 16 from 1 to 2:30 p.m. at Masters of Self Defense, Revere Rd.

The program will be followed by two weeks of free instruction in self defense (six lessons) at the Center.

Also, throughout the month the Crime Prevention Unit will set up displays at various supermarkets in Quincy.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

PERSONALITY TIP: Let's start today to change our lives by doing something different or something thoughtful for others each day. Look for a smile and return it. You'll never know how far this one little gesture may travel.

Some people have personalities that spread greeting all over the place. The smile they give us as we pass them on the street, the wave of the hand as their car passes our house. The way they walk into a group-say something with a smile, pat somebody on the back . . .

Granted, sometimes a backslapper can become a nuisance. The guy that's always grinning can make himself tiresome. But the person who has the art of dispensing greetings and making everybody feel cheerful if only for a few moments is a person we never get tired of meeting.

Some people don't take life seriously enough, and some people take it too seriously. But if we can dispel a little of the world's gloom, we re making ourselves useful and beloved. We sure could use more of that wide grin!

James A. Shannon, 79

Worked With Alcoholics, Young Lawyers; Was Quincy Bar Assn. 'Man Of The Year'

A funeral Mass for James A. Shannon, 79, of Quincy, formerly of Braintree, was celebrated Monday in St. Ann's Church.

Mr. Shannon died Sept. 30 at Quincy Hospital.

A practicing attorney since 1947, he was named the Quincy Bar Association's Man of the Year in 1981 and was honored at the association's annual dinner.

He had a reputation for his knowledge of legal procedures and he often got calls from other attorneys with questions.

Many young lawyers began working in his office, and those who did were charged small rents because he knew that people just out of law school did not have a lot of money.

He was very active in Alcoholics Anonymous and in Lawyers Concerned for Lawyers, an organization that helps attorneys with substance abuse problems.

Mr. Shannon also did legal work for people with alcohol problems in the past and had even taken them to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and had taken calls in the middle of the night to pick up people in trouble with alcohol problems.

He was president of his 1928 junior high school class and of his graduating class at Chelsea Senior High School in 1932. He later was chairman of the Braintree Republican Town Committee, an organizer of the Braintree Republican Headquarters for the campaigns of 1956 and 1958 and a delegate to the Republican Pre-Primary Convention in Worcester in 1958, 1960 and 1962.

He ran unsuccessfully for governor's councilor in 1960 and for state representative in 1962. He was active in coordinating campaigns for Gov. John A. Volpe and for Elliot L. Richardson in the Braintree-Quincy area.

A 1937 graduate of the Northeastern University School of Law, he took post-graduate courses in problems and legislation and in local government.

During World War II, he was a rifle platoon leader in the 70th Infantry Division and fought in the battle for southern France. He was a captain at the time of his release from the Army.

Mr. Shannon worked for a time as trial counsel for Maryland Casualty Insurance Co. in Boston and from 1947 to 1952 was veterans services investigator and legal adviser for the City of Quincy. At the same time, he established his own law practice in Quincy. He was a former special assistant district attorney for Norfolk County Superior Court.

He was legal counsel to Local 1139 Municipal Employees AFL-CIO.

He was a past president of the Quincy Bar Association, a past vice president of the Braintree High School PTA and past post advocate for the George F. Bryan VFW Post in Quincy.

He is survived by his wife, Irene (Kagoy) Shannon; a son, Robert McGovern of Whitman; a daughter, Judy Stickney of Rhode Island; and a sister, Alice Cox of Braintree. He was the father of the late Roy McGovern.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Lydon Funeral Home, 644 Hancock St.

Presidents Host Plymouth Eyeing Third Win

By PETER ZOIA

A determined Quincy team won their second game of the season with an easy victory over visiting Taunton 25 to 6 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Four different President players chalked up touchdowns, Mike Elder on a 15 yard run, Jason Sova on a 28 yard pass from Mike Bartlett, Terry Bowman on a five yard sprint, and Sam Brown with a 14-yard jaunt.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Presidents began to roll, even though they had chances in the opening period but couldn't score.

Two quick scores came within 22 seconds in the second period. Elders' run came early putting Quincy in the lead, 6 to 0. A Taunton fumble was then recovered by Brian Taylor giving Quincy a good spot on Taunton's 28. Losing no time, Bartlett hit Sova for another score putting Quincy ahead 12 to 0 at halftime.

On the Presidents' first drive on a five yard pitchout from Bartlett to Bowman.

Taunton played ragged ball, fumbling on its own 35 allowing Jason Bennett to recover for Quincy. Working their way to Taunton's 14, Brown rambled in for the final President touchdown. Elder added the extra point by a kick.

Quincy had an outstanding night defensively also as the visitors seldom got in scoring position.

With seconds remaining, Ed Holt electrified the crowd by scampering 95 yards for Tauntons' only score.

Fumbles by Taunton stagnated any chance of scoring. Quincy played an alert brand of football in nailing down their second win with one loss.

Coach Jack Raymer was elated over the win. He noted that although early in the game mistakes were made, the team regrouped and played sound football the remainder of the fray.

He praised the passing by Bartlett especially on the scoring throw to Sova.

Raymer was able to use many reserves in the last period.

The Presidents' will seek their third win as they host Plymouth Friday at Veterans Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m.

Youth Football

Apaches, Panthers Win

The North Quincy Apaches extended their record to 3-0 by defeating the West Quincy Elks, 12-0, last Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Following a scoreless first half, the Apaches scored on their first offensive possession of the third quarter. Led by quarterback Jim Finn, the team put together an impressive scoring drive. The strong running of Pat Egan and Chris Bregoli eventually led to a four-yard touchdown run by Manny Vasquez.

In the fourth quarter, the Apaches put together another drive which ended in a 20-yard touchdown score by Finn around the left end.

Dan Toland, Fred Elfman, Finn and Egan led the Apaches defensively as the team shut down all potential scoring threats by the Elks. The game was the Apaches' third shutout of an opponent this season.

After a week off due to rain, the Panthers improved to 2-1 in the Quincy Youth Football League with a 14-0 victory over the Houghs Neck Manets.

The Panthers were led in the first half by the solid two-way play of Carmen Lorenzano.

James Bennett scored the first Panthers TD, but the try for the conversion failed and the Panthers took the 6-0 lead into the intermission.

In the second half, Steve Roberts scored midway through the third quarter on a 30-yard run, giving the Panters a 12-0 cushion. Quarterback Carmen Lorenzano rolled untouched into the end zone for the two-point play.

Mark Miller and Andrew Sheridan stood out defensively for the winners. The Panthers will meet the West Quincy Elks Sunday, while the Apaches face the Manets in the second half of the doubleheader.

Plymouth 22, North Quincy 21

Raiders Look For Rebound At Barnstable

If you were a spectator at the Plymouth/North Quincy game at Plymouth, you got your money's worth.

Plymouth prevailed 22 to 21 but not without a scare with 4:06 remaining.

Coach Ken McPhee of the Red Raiders went for the win after a 21-yard touchdown pass from Dan Duncan to Brain Raftery came within one point of tieing the game. North was stopped on the one yard line going for a two-pointer.

The first quarter was scoreless with neither team threatening. Plymouth got on the score board first with a well executed screen pass that was good for 31 yards to the North 11. It took just three plays for the first score of the game when quarterback Mark Fitzsimmons rammed in from the one. The conversion kick by Justin Miller was good and Plymouth led 7 to 0.

Fine running by Derick Epps on the kick-off return put North on Plymouth's 42. A Duncan to George Wirtz pass for 31 yards brought North to the 11. Duncan hit Nathan Gott with another pass to the three setting up a field goal by Kevin Ross that made the score 7 to 3.

North received a break when the kick-off bounced off a Plymouth player and the Raiders recovered on the home team's 30, with 5:08 remaining in the half.

North's Keith Deshler suffered an elbow injury and was hospitalized. This was the second severe injury of the game as star running back Shawn Nee had to leave the game because of an ankle injury, and was unable to return.

Duncan connected with Epps on a 26-yard pass after an offside penalty put them back on Plymouth's 35, resting the ball on the Plymouth eight were Epps skirted around his own right side for six points, putting North up 9 to 7.

Late in this second quarter, Duncan threw Wirtz for 20 yards, and 13 yards to the 15. Duncan on a quarterback sneak went to the six, a gain of nine yards where Mike McGregor ambled to the one. Duncan then put North in the lead with a throw to Wirtz, making it the Raiders 15, Plymouth 7.

Plymouth roared back with a 52-yard pass play, Brendon McDavitt to Damon Gesce, making it 15 to 13. A shovel pass on the conversion by Jim Shea made it 15 all at half-time.

The third quarter was scoreless although North reached Plymouth's 20. Here a penalty and four incomplete passes ended the threat.

Plymouth retaliated with a 33 yard pass completion to North's 39. Starting the final frame they took to the ground where McDavitt on a keeper made a good run from the 15 to score. The kick by Miller was good, making it 22 to 15, Plymouth.

North then filled the air with passes. Epps caught a 25 yarded, Wirtz completed two in a row for a total of 12 yards. Duncan got nine more yards on a run up in the middle. Plymouth was penalized for a late hit putting North on the 29.

McGregor got eight yards to the 21 and Duncan then found Raftery alone in the middle for a score. Raftery dove for the score with tacklers hanging on to him.

McPhee, winner of last years' Super Bowl, went for all the marbles, ordering a two point running play that just fell short.

"It was a great game, " he said. "We came about two inches short of winning. I'm proud of every single player. I told the boys not to be embarrassed and to hold their heads high. We lost Shawn Nee early in the game. Also Keith Deshler and Martin Shields were knocked out of the game. We play to win, not to tie."

This Friday night North travels to Barnstable, looking to get back in the win column.

Cross Country

NQ Girls Split, Boys Drop Two

The North Quincy Cross-Country team took on both Cape schools in Old Colony League action last week.

The boys dropped both decisions, while the girls split. North hosted Falmouth at Pageant field last Tuesday. North's Eric Torvi bested the field cruising the 3.1 mile loop in 19:05, but Falmouth took the next five spots to secure a 20-40 win. Sophomores Steve Cannon and Terrence Roche also placed in the top 10 with Brian O'Donnell and Eric Yu closing out the scoring for the Raiders.

The girls took on a Falmouth team which was the consensus league champs and were just edged 27-28. Erin Duggan, on a roll so far, took third beating Falmouth's talented Sara Corriea, last years League Champion. Patty Gohring of Falmouth took first for the Clippers breaking Suzanne Lewis' course record of 20:48 with a 20:38. Gohring boasts a 5:09 mile, second went to the Clippers Sara Majka who boasts a 5:02 mile. A host of Raiders closed out the scoring with Laura Blaikie fifth, Mel Gaziano sixth, Erica Doherty seventh, Katie McNamara eighth and Kelly Duggan ninth. Falmouth took 10th and 11th to clinch the victory.

Despite the loss Coach Geoff Hennessy was pleased.

"Falmouth has the best three runners in the league - bar none. So when you break that group up you're doing something. If a team takes 1-2-3, and has two other finishers, its an automatic win. We did what we had to do, everyone did their job. In a big multi-team meet Falmouth will have their troubles."

In fact Falmouth can only hope to tie for the league as they lost to Silver Lake 25-30 recently when Corriea was out sick and the Clippers' lack of depth hurt them.

Last Friday North traveled to Barnstable, splitting the decision. the boys lost 22-35 although much improved. Torvi won again, with Steve Cannon fifth and Terrence Roche sixth, Brian O'Donnell ninth and Eric Yu 12th.

The girls won a real seat-squirmer 26-31 over a much improved Barnstable squad. Both teams traded leads, but Michelle Giddungs hurt the Cape Codders chance of victory, falling with a sprained ankle on the tough 2.9 mile course and failed to finish. Erin Duggan also fell hitting her head and cutting her leg, but got back up to finish third. Barnstable's Heather McLane won with NQ's Laura Blaikie second.

Other scorers for North were Mel Graziano sixth, Katie McNamara seventh, Erica Doherty eighth and Kelly Duggan ninth.

"We dodged a bullet this time" said Hennessy. "The Mark of a good team is that when your ace goes down, someone else steps up to take her place, and Laura Blaikie did that for us. She's been less than thrilled with her racing of late and this was just what she needed."

North depth was evident as the Raider's number six runner Kelly Duggan beat the number four for Barnstable.

North hosts Silver Lake on Tuesday Oct. 5, and the Freshmen host Xaverian Boys and Notre Dame Academy Girls on Thursday, Oct. 7. The Freshmen-Sophomore group also runs in the Apponequet Warrior Invitational at Lakeville on Saturday.

The varsity girls record is 2-1 with Weymouth (3-0) the only unbeaten team. The boys fall 0-3.

Cross Country

Quincy Girls Edge Bridgewater-Raynham

The Quincy girls cross-country team raised their record to 2-1 with a hard-fought 27-28 win over Bridgewater-Raynham.

Liz Sawan continued to have a great season taking first place, followed by ever-improving freshman Kathryn Lencki placing second. Sophomore Amy Nicklas and Maryanne Ashworth battled the last quarter mile to finished sixth and eighth place respectively. Senior Lauralee Summer rounded out the scoring by placing 10th.

Earlier in the week the girls lost 22-35 to a strong Weymouth team. Sawan (second), Lencki (fourth), Ashworth (eighth), Nicklas (ninth) and Summer (12th) all scored for Quincy in a great effort.

Although the boys' team is 0-3, Coach John Franceschini said he is very proud of their steady improvement. Junior James Lencki is leaving his mark on the Old Colony League in every race he runs, placing second to B-R standout Brian Hughes, while placing first at Weymouth against a strong field during the 20-41 loss.

Junior Doug Gallagher continues to be Quincy's number two runner and steadily improving, along with juniors Damon Blaco, Brian Gallahue, Rich Bergeron and sophomores Hubert Lam, John Duffy and Mike McIvor. Freshman Matt Langille is also a bright spot in Quincy's future.

Quincy will be at Plymouth tomorrow (Friday).

Hockey

St. Moritz Devils Bow To Eagles

The St. Moritz Devils' Squirt minor league team lost last Sunday, 3-2, to the Boston College Eagles.

Although they had a number of good shots on goal, including one in particular by Joe Carr, the Devils couldn't capitalize and trailed, 1-0, after the first period. Obi Aduba scored for the Eagles.

Aduba scored again in the second period, but goalie Kevin Regan played tough and kept the Eagles close as Mike Aylward scored for the Devils, making the score 2-1 after two.

In the third period, Aduba scored another goal for a hat trick but the Devils' defense prevented any further scoring. The Devils again pulled to within one with a minute left in the game when defenseman Mark Mulhern scored to make the score 3-2.

At the final faceoff, the Devils had a great change to tie the game at the end of regulation when Aylward backhanded the puck to wing Nick Sarno who passed in front of the net to wing John Segalla, but Segalla's last shot attempt failed and the Eagles held on for the win.

Opposition, Backing For N.Q. Supermarket

plus to the community. Some residents, like Larry Black of 547 Newport Ave., felt Shaw's would be a better alternative than most companies that would want to use the site.

"What really scares me is the possibility of what could be built there," said Black. "I'm stuck (in traffic) on Hancock Street every day, and this could help the traffic situation.

"This developer is also committed to using the local labor force," said Black, who said he worked as a pipefitter.

Ruth Keeley of 17 Winthrop Ave. said she was at first "skeptical" about the Shaw's proposal, but added that "I've done my homework" and after attending the neighborhood meetings, she was convinced that Shaw's has the community's best interests in mind.

"They say they'll respond to our needs, and at this point, I have to believe them," she said.

Opponents, however, said that an increase in traffic, pollution, noise and existing drainage problems at the site, as well as the impact on local small businesses, would outweigh any benefits from the store.

"I speak for the employees of Wollaston Market," said Frank Keenan of the store at 651 Hancock St. "We would be hurt by another large supermarket. Small business is the backbone of this country.

"I also see traffic doubling and an increase in pollution and noise level," added Keenan, who urged the council to seek other alternatives for the site.

Marie McHugh of 6 Marlboro St. said that while Shaw's had done a good job putting together its proposal, the community simply wasn't interested in another large supermarket at the site.

"We really don't want a supermarket," said McHugh. "What is it you (Shaw's) people don't understand about the word 'no'?"

McHugh also referred to comments Councillor Michael Cheney has made in the past regarding the fact that the traffic signals and roads at the site could be improved by the city without any help from Shaw's.

Arlene Tenney of 55 Albion Rd. questioned Shaw's plan to remove several parking spots to divide a part of Hancock St. parallel to the site into four lanes.

"There's parking on both sides of Hancock St., so where are these four lanes going to be?" said Tenney. "It's kind of like putting a size 5 shoe on a size 9 foot."

Phelan said the Planning Board will discuss the proposal further at an upcoming meeting and will make a recommendation to the City Council on the matter in the near future, probably in mid-November. He added that the council would then have 90 days to vote either for or against the proposal.

LaRaia Wants Explanation On Hospital Budget Delay

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia Monday night called for a Quincy Hospital official to be brought before the City Council to explain why the council has not yet seen the hospital's FY94 budget.

LaRaia said that according to statute, the hospital is supposed to submit a copy of the budget to the council at least 60 days before the beginning of its new fiscal year. The hospital's new fiscal year begins Oct. 1, unlike the new fiscal year for the city budget which begins July 1.

"I was disturbed that there was no budget available," said LaRaia. "It's professional courtesy that the budget should be made available when it's due according to statute."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, chairman of the council's Public Health and Hospital Committee, said he would see about what he could do about getting a hospital representative to appear before the council as soon as possible.

City Auditor Robert Foy said after the meeting that the hospital has submitted a summary of the budget, but not the budget itself. He added that since the hospital's board of managers, and not the City Council, approves the hospital budget, the hospital is technically not required to submit it to the council at all.

"It's more of a courtesy," said Foy.

Fr. Bill's Place Wishing Well Campaign Starts Friday

Fr. Bill's Place 1993 Wishing Well Campaign will get underway in Braintree Friday and make stops in Hingham and Quincy later in the month.

The Wishing Well Campaign is a penny drive which raises money for worthwhile programs at the Quincy-based homeless shelter.

Last year, the drive raised approximately $3,000, according to shelter Executive Director Joe Finn.

"We would really like to exceed last year's goal but we would also be happy to repeat last year's goal," Finn said. "It's more of a penny drive. Some people will give us dollar bills but we're really hoping people bring those pennies.

"This campaign is meant to be a painless way of contributing to a charity. We are asking people in the communities we serve to consider bring their pennies and spare change to the wishing well and to donate them to our cause," Finn said.

Fr. Bill's Place, which opened in 1988, serves 17 communities. They are Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Randolph, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Canton, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Pembroke, Duxbury, Dedham, Westwood, Norwood and Hull.

The Wishing Well Campaign will begin Friday, Oct. 8 and Saturday, Oct. 9 at the Hilltop Market Place in Braintree.

On Friday, Oct. 15 and Saturday, Oct. 16 the campaign will set up outside Purity Supreme at Lincoln St. (Route 3A) in Hingham.

The last stop will be at Shaw's on Quincy Ave., Quincy, on Friday, Oct. 22 and Saturday, Oct. 23.

The Wishing Well will be the three sites from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. each of those three days. Pennies may be brought to the shelter at any time.

Contributions will go toward the shelter's operation. "We have to raise 40 percent of our own budget," Finn said. "A lot of the revenues that come in are already restricted.

"We'll use the penny drive proceeds where it's deemed best," Finn added.

Support For Clinton Health Care Plan

emotional Towne described how the current system has forced him to spend more than $200,000 on prescription drugs and medical bills the last eight years.

"I tried to get help from the state, but I make too much and they told me the only way I could get help for my wife was to leave her. But after 48 years, I just couldn't do that.

"I'd rather kick the bucket then get a divorce. So my wife and I talked it over and decided that when we couldn't pay for the drugs any more that we just have to stop taking prescription drugs. We'd rather pass away together-or at least as close together as we can.

"I've come here to make a plea: please don't sit on this health care plan! If you sit on it too long, it will be too late to do my wife and I any good."

Towne's testimony stirred the legislators presiding over the meeting.

"We have just witnessed something intolerable which is occuring everyday in this country," said Studds. "As far as I'm concerned we don't need to hear any further testimony."

License Board Briefs

•Granted a request from Daniel J. Quirk, 540 Southern Artery, to obtain an auction permit for 55 Broad St.

•Granted a request from the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., (Chairman I. Tait) to conduct a flea market Saturday, Oct. 16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

•Granted a request from the Quincy Crisis Center, 98 Phillips St. (June Newman) to conduct a yard sale Saturday, Oct. 9 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 55 Sea St.

WHISTLING A DIFFERENT TUNE

In the days before the widespread introduction of electronic ignitions, it was easy to tell when a car needed a tune-up. As the working parts of "point" ignition systems wore out, cars become increasingly more difficult to start or they idled roughly. Then, it was a matter of replacing worn parts as part of a tune-up. Today, however, the replacement of points with computer chips and the use of newer generation distributors eliminate much of the warning that once alerted car owners to the need of a tune-up. An electronic ignition makes the tune-up a matter of regular preventive maintenance, during which the ignition system is checked and various parts are replaced. To keep a car in good working order, it should be scheduled for tune-ups at regular intervals.

HINT: To stop trouble before it starts, have a car tuned every year or 12.000 miles, whichever comes first.

Let the professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO check over every system in your car. Your car is probably one of your most expensive possessions, so doesn't it make sense to have it serviced by the best technicians around. Come by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Request To Extend Cafe Hours Withdrawn

A continued hearing regarding the proposed extension of business hours of Massimo's Caffe, 12 Blanchard Rd., Quincy Center, resulted in the owner, Massimo Ranalli, withdrawing his original request at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

Ranalli came to the board seeking to extend his operating hours on Friday and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., to 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., including a Sunday opening of 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

He assured the board that their fears were unnecessary.

"Traffic is not a problem. We have a mature crowd that's not going to bother anybody."

Kenny More, a restaurant consultant representing Ranalli, informed the board that he had a petition of 250 signatures supporting the proposed extension of business hours.

Ward 2 Councilor Ted DeCristafaro rebutted Ranalli's argument, stating that the residents of the area were opposed.

Guido Pettinelli, of 40 Hardwick Rd., felt that Ranalli was "not concerned with the safety of the general public."

Pettinelli went on to say that he had nothing against the owners of the cafe, but that there was "no reason to extend these hours."

City Clerk Joseph Shea listened to both sides and addressed Ranalli.

"You have to win over some of your neighbors."

Shea informed the board that he hadn't received any complaint's regarding Massimo's Caffe.

Pettinelli and Ranalli exchanged words and tempers rose, before the board motioned to place the item on file and adjourn the meeting.

Mrs. Ranalli protested, "It's not fair, I have a lot of money invested in this-I have kids to raise. It's not fair that I'm expected to control this traffic."

DeCristafaro added, "I have tried my best to solve these (traffic) problems and I can't do it alone."

Shea concluded, "I have to take into consideration that more time is needed. The streets are only so wide, the buildings on top of each other, it won't change."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman commented on Ranalli.

"He's a hard worker, a good person, that's all I can say."

When asked how he felt about Tuesday's meeting, Ranalli commented, "We just received our license two months ago. It's a matter of time-a legal matter, before this goes through. We're just testing the waters."

Jack 'N' Jill Child Care Center 50th Anniversary Celebration

Jack 'n' Jill Child Care Center, 39 Station St., West Quincy, will celebrate its 50th anniversary with a party Saturday, Oct. 9 from 8 p.m. to midnight at the George F. Bryan Post, Quincy.

The party will be a reunion for those who attended Jack 'n' Jill. Among those who will attended are Harriett Drew, who founded the kindergarten and child care center in 1943, and her son, Dana.

Harriett, now 77, credits persistence, a love of children, and a need to survive as a single mother for her success.

Harriett's husband, Dana, was injured in the war and later hospitalized. To make ends meet, Harriett decided to care for children in her home.

The first year, 86 people responded to a newspaper ad for the center and she enrolled 40 children.

In 1984, Harriett retired and Dana took over the business. He renovated the center and increased the space. From 35 children, the center now has the capacity for 102 full-time children. It employs more than 25 full and part-time teachers and aids.

Changes continue to take place at Jack 'n' Jill. A new playground and equipment was added this year.

MDC Acquires 43.8 Acres For 'Passive Recreation'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Metropolitan District Commission has acquired 43.8 acres of land in West Quincy for what will likely be "passive recreation" purposes, according to an MDC spokesperson.

MDC Public Information Director Ronda Bartlett, speaking on behalf of MDC Director Brian Broderick, said as The Sun went to press Tuesday that the land is off Ricciuti Drive "across the road" from the site that includes Swingle's Quarry, which is owned by the City of Quincy.

The land was purchased "within the last two weeks," Bartlett said, from private owners. Names of the owners and financial amounts involved were not readily available, she added.

Bartlett said the land will be preserved as open space and used as an extension of the MDC's 5,800 acre Blue Hills Reservation. Wildlife at the site will also be protected, she said.

Bartlett added that the MDC will likely add nature trails and other changes to the site, but said nothing specific was planned as yet and no timetable has been set.

"We believe it will be used for passive recreation," she said.

The Blue Hill Reservation is adjoined by the 894 acre Fowl Meadows Reservation, Bartlett noted, and the two combined comprise the largest preserved open space within 35 miles of Boston.

Chretien Order Would Rezone Pneumatic Scale Site

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien introduced an order which would rezone Industrial B land bordering Pneumatic Scale on Newport Ave. in North Quincy to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

PUD, which makes the City Council the special permit granting authority over any business interested in a particular site, is considered to be a better voice for residents since officials elected by the people have the final word in what business ends up on the location.

A recent proposal by Stop & Shop to build a new store at the site is "still on the table," according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Coincidentally, Chretien introduced the order on a night when a public hearing was held on a similar proposal by Shaw's to open a new store on the site of the old Boston Gear Works on the North Quincy-Wollaston line. That land is currently special permit-zoned, according to Shea, which also allows the council the final word.

Quincy, Boston At Odds Over Moon Island

City In Court To Stop Gun Range Expansion

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A preliminary hearing will be held today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham to determine the future of the Moon Island gun range expansion project.

The project is a joint effort by the City of Boston and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency. Quincy officials have claimed workers on the project defied a recent cease and desist order to stop work on the gun range expansion. Moon Island is owned by the City of Boston but lies within Quincy city limits.

Mayor James Sheets said the city obtained a temporary restraining order from the court during a brief hearing last Friday which will prevent any further work at the site until today's hearing. No legal representation for Boston was present Friday, Sheets noted, but they will be there today.

The mayor said Tuesday that if the court rules in Quincy's favor today, a preliminary injunction will temporarily further prevent any future work at the site. However, a date will also be set for a future trial which will determine whether a permanent injunction is necessary.

Sheets added that he is uncertain what action the city would take if the court were to rule in Boston's favor.

The mayor said at a press conference last Friday that action on Moon Island was necessitated by Boston's "continual lack of cooperation and obvious disregard for the constituents of Squantum" and their concerns about the issue.

The press conference was held just hours after a group of about 20 residents demonstrated at the Moon Island gate in an attempt to block heavy equipment from entering the island.

Sheets cited Boston's defiance of a Sept. 16 cease and desist order from the Quincy Conservation Commission, which ordered that all work at the site be halted, as a major example of Boston's failure to cooperate. The mayor displayed aerial photos taken last Thursday by William Johnson of the Seaside Environmental Alliance, a coalition of Squantum residents, which he said showed that work was continuing despite the cease and desist order.

The mayor said Johnson was not commissioned by the city to take the photos.

"He took them on his own," he said.

In addition to the restraining order, the mayor said last Friday the city is considering filing a lawsuit to seek "financial damages" for alleged pollution of Boston Harbor by storm water runoff from the defoliated construction site. Sheets said Tuesday, however, that the city will wait and see how the court rules today before deciding on whether to pursue that course of action.

Sheets said some of Johnson's photos show that stormwater runoff, contaminated with lead from the previous rifle range at the site, has polluted the harbor.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who attended the press conference, said the

Sprinklers Must Be In Rooming Houses Jan. 1

Sprinklers must be installed in all Quincy rooming houses that house six or more people by Jan. 1, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said Tuesday.

Gorman told other members of the Quincy License Board that a law first proposed in 1988 will begin to be enforced by the first of the year.

The chief said the bill which became the law was originally introduced by then-State Rep. Michael Morrissey, now a state senator. Gorman added that a five-year grace period was put on the law by the state legislature to allow landlords to comply.

"Adding the sprinklers is like putting a firefighter in each of the buildings," said Gorman.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey agreed.

"It's a very good proposal," he said. "All it does is save lives."

Gorman said landlords were informed of the law when it was first passed and a reminder will be sent out this week. He added that 29 of the 49 rooming houses in the city have already complied with the law, and not all those remaining house six or more people.

Quincy Man's Father Wins Nobel Prize

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The father of a Quincy businessman has been awarded the Nobel Prize in Economics.

Robert W. Fogel, 66, a professor of economics at the University of Chicago and father of Steve's Beale Street Diner owner Steve Fogel, received the good news Tuesday in Chicago via a phone call from Sweden at 4:30 a.m. (5:30 a.m. Boston time).

His son said he was initially disturbed when his own phone rang just minutes later.

Health Dept. Flu Clinics Start Oct. 19

The Quincy Health Department has scheduled flu clinics from Tuesday, Oct. 19 through Thursday, Nov. 18, announces Public Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

Flu vaccine will only be given to Quincy residents 18 years and older. All others are advised to consult their family physicians.

Shut-ins should call the Quincy Health Department at 376-1275 to arrange for a house visit by the public health nurse.

This year's flu shot contains the strains A/Texas, A/Beijing and B/Panama to provide immunity against the types of flu which have been circulating in the past year and are considered the most likely to occur in the United States this winter.

Because influenza vaccine contains only non-infectious viruses it cannot cause influenza.

Annual vaccination against influenza is recommended for:

•Adults and children with long-term heart or lung problems.

•Residents of nursing homes and residents of other chronic care facilities who are over 18 years of age and have chronic medical conditions.

•Healthy people over 65 years of age.

•People of any age who during the past year have regularly seen a doctor or have been admitted to a hospital for treatment for kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, anemia (low blood) or severe asthma.

•People who have a type of cancer or immunological disorder (or use certain type medicines) that lower the body's normal resistance to infections after checking with their physician.

•Children and teenagers (6 months to 18 years) on long term treatment with aspirin who, if they catch the flu, may be at risk of getting Reye Syndrome.

•Health care workers or others providing care to high risk persons.

•Anyone who wishes to reduce his or her chances of catching the flu.

Persons who would not be given the flu shot include those with an allergy to eggs or egg products that cause dangerous reactions if they eat eggs. Also people with allergies to Amikacin, Gentamycin, Streptomycin and Trobramycin or any other components of the vaccine should consult a physician before receiving the vaccine.

Anyone who has ever been paralyzed with Gullian-Barre Syndrome, as well as women who might be or are pregnant should seek advice from physician about special risks that might exist in their cases.

Persons who are ill and have a fever should delay vaccination until the fever and other temporary symptoms have gone.

Toy Drive Underway For Quincy, Ill. Children

A new chapter in the Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort began Tuesday in the form of Project Santa, a toy drive for children of the flood-ravaged area.

The drive was begun by Girl Scout Troop 4142 at St. Mary's Church in West Quincy, who decided that residents of Illinois should be afforded the opportunity to rebuild their homes without having to worry about buying Christmas gifts for their children.

The project has received approval from Mayor James Sheets and Quincy, Ill. Mayor Chuck Scholz and is being assisted by troop leaders Linda Dyment and Barbara Gargan and other adult volunteers. However, it is the seven Girl Scouts in the troop that have organized the toy drive.

The girls are collecting toys appropriate for newborns to age 12. Only new toys in their original, unopened packages will be accepted.

Toys can be dropped off on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., and Saturdays and Sundays from 9 to 5 p.m. at the entrance of Osco Drug, 132 Granite St.

The drive will run through Nov. 1. A "wrapping party" with all of the junior and cadette Girl Scouts in the city will be held Nov. 12 at St. Mary's Church.

The project is the latest of the reliefs efforts in the city to aid the people of Quincy, Ill. A drive this past summer to raise food and money for the flood victims collected $23,000 in monetary contributions and 100 tons of food.

Swap Program 'Inundated' With Equipment, Says Ayers

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's Swap Program for handicapped equipment is going better than anyone ever anticipated, according to the chairman of the City Council Handicapped Affairs Committee.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who updated the council on the program at its last meeting, said he has been "inundated" with walkers, wheelchairs and other equipment since he and Commission on Disabilities Chairman Bill Murphy began the program six months ago.

The idea behind the program, said Ayers, is simple: those who wish to discard an older piece of handicapped equipment may donate it to the Swap Program, which will subsequently donate it to another individual or family that doesn't have the money to purchase new equipment.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson commended Ayers for showing "good heart" in initiating the program.

"It was truly a labor of love on the councillor's part," said Kolson.

Donated equipment is currently being collected and stored at Ayers' place of business, Ayers Bros. Handicap Conversion Center Inc. at 440B East Squantum St. For more information on the program, call Ayers at the City Council Office, 376-1341 or Ayers Bros., 328-0102.

Restaurant Request Continued

The matter was continued at the request of the applicants.

The request had been continued from the board's Sept. 21 meeting so that the three applicants, Mark Hamill, Paul Antonuccio and Bernard Sharpe could have all necessary inspections at the site completed. The three represent T.C.B.C. Inc. and the restaurant would be known as Barnaby's.

The License Board also has a policy of reviewing all requests for Common Victualer-All Alcoholic Licenses twice.

The board also received a letter dated Tuesday from Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, in opposition to the request. The letter was the first recorded opposition to Barnaby's.

D'Aprix's letter states that although "the proposed restaurant owners are honorable business people," a restaurant would be "not compatible" with a senior care facility that is to be built near the site by the Welch Health Care Group of Norwell.

City To Help Beechwood Center Find New Home

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he will work with the City Council and Beechwood Community Life Center officials to find a new home for the center.

The mayor added that the center's next headquarters will likely be the Myles Standish Elementary School in Squantum.

Sheets said is important that the city makes it a priority to come to the aid of the center, which lost its home when the School Committee voted last week to reactivate the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston as a kindergarten center in September of next year. The center has leased the school for $1 a year since 1981.

The action was taken upon the request of School Supt. Eugene Creedon, who recommended to the committee that the Beechwood School be reactivated to relieve overcrowding at the Wollaston and Montclair Elementary Schools and the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy. The Quincy Sun ran a front-page story on Creedon's recommendation in its Sept. 30 issue.

The superintendent has estimated that it will cost between $400,000 and $500,000 to do so. It is not yet known where the funding for the project will come from.

Sheets has said the community center will not have to move until next summer, and it is not yet definite where Beechwood will go.

However, Sheets said Tuesday he is targeting the Myles Standish School as the center's new home. The School Committee, upon Creedon's recommendation, also voted last week to give control over that building back to the city.

The Quincy Lodge of Elks has for a number of years paid rent to the School Committee for its use of the Myles Standish School. Creedon, however, has noted that the rent must go toward repairs of the site and cannot be used for other educational tools such as textbooks.

Creedon and Sheets have both indicated that economically, it was no longer feasible for the School Committee to have control over the building since it is in a state of major disrepair.

The Elks, however, are building a new headquarters in West Quincy that they plan to move into next year. Sheets said the Beechwood Community Life Center could move into the site after that happens.

Sheets added, however, that he would like renovations done to the building if it officially becomes the center's new headquarters.

"The renovations would take money, and that's where the City Council comes in," said Sheets.

The mayor also said he is not sure at this point where funding for the project would come from.

Medication Misuse Awareness Oct. 15

In recognition of Massachusetts Medication Misuse Awareness in October, a kickoff demonstration will be held Friday, Oct. 15 at the Victor Sawyer Towers nutrition site, 95 Martensen St., Quincy, beginning at noon.

Speakers will be: David Mulligan, commissioner, Massachusetts Department of Public Health; Frank Ollivierre, secretary, Executive Office of Elder Affairs; Mayor James Sheets; and Dr. Abraham Haddad, vice president, Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Sciences.

Health professionals will be available to discuss misuse of prescribed and over the counter medications with elder citizens. The goal of medication awareness month is to reduce the incidence of accidents caused by medication misuse particularly among the elderly who may be taking multiple medications.

Sponsoring the statewide observance are: Massachusetts Department of Public Health; Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Sciences; Marion Merill Dow Laboratories; Massachusetts Health Council; and Massachusetts Pharmacists Association in cooperation with the South Shore Elder Services Inc.

For more information, contact Patty Vancil, program coordinator, Division of Elderly Health, at 727-2013.

John Noonan, chairman of Quincy Council on Aging, is associate planner for the Division of Elderly Health of the state Department of Public Health.

COPING WITH TYPE II DIABETES

There are two basic types of diabetes. Type I, also known as insulin-dependent diabetes, generally begins in youth or young adulthood. Type II, or non-insulin-dependent diabetes, usually appears after age 40 and accounts for 90 percent of the 14 million Americans who live with diabetes. A diagnosis of type II diabetes should be a cause for caution, not alarm. Since diabetes limits the body's ability to use glucose (a form of sugar), controlling the diet is often a key to keeping diabetes in check. A moderately high-fiber, low-fat, low-sodium diet may be recommended. Also, exercise can enhance the body's ability to use glucose, in addition to increasing general health and fitness levels.

P.S. Even if symptoms seem mild, diabetes that is left untreated can result in potentially life-threatening problems.

A diagnosis of type II diabetes may be regarded as the body's message that it is time to change one's lifestyle for the better. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE AT 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our new office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Lightest Turnout In 36 Years?

This year's city election Nov. 2 may go down in the books with a dubious distinction.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is predicting no better than a 32 per cent voter turnout.

SHEA

And, if he is correct, that would be the lightest in a Quincy city election in at least 36 years.

All the way back to 1957 when Quincy, after a stormy marriage to Plan E, returned to the Plan A strong-mayor form of government.

The size of voter turnouts seems to be directly tied to a mayor's race or lack of a mayor's race.

SHEETS

This year, incumbent James Sheets is running unopposed for the second time. He is the first mayor in Quincy's history to get two free rides to re-election.

That's the main reason Shea sees such a small turnout next month.

"A mayor's race is the main event," he says. "And if you don't have it, the crowd doesn't show up."

Quincy political history backs up that observation.

Two years ago Sheets was unopposed for re-election for the first time and only 39 per cent of the registered voters came out. In 1983 Frank McCauley won a second term unopposed with a voter turnout of only 36.4 per cent.

McCAULEY

Way back in 1940 when Thomas Burgin was re-elected without opposition only 15.34 per cent bothered to vote.

BURGIN

But give voters a good mayoral fight and they will be there on election day.

And the bigger the battle, the bigger the turnout.

The 1989 mayor's race between Sheets and Peter O'Connell brought out 60.6 per cent of the voters.

McCauley's win over Joseph LaRaia in 1987 came with a 50.16 per cent turnout.

His victory over Joanne Condon in 1985 was with a 45.4 per cent turnout.

In 1981 when McCauley defeated Dan Raymondi for the open mayor's office, 62.9 per cent of the registered voters cast ballots.

In 1979, incumbent Arthur Tobin had a little known opponent named Abe Itkin but the race was good enough to generate a 52.2 per cent turnout. (Aided by four ward council contests that year.)

The 1977 brawl in which Tobin ousted LaRaia from the mayor's office had a 66.8 per cent turnout.

In the 1975 slugfest between incumbent Walter Hannon and LaRaia, the voter turnout was 71.3 per cent. That was the year LaRaia won on a controversial recount by 483 votes.

Grace Saphir challenged incumbent Hannon in 1973 and although there wasn't much excitement, 53.5 per cent of the voters went to the ballot box.

In 1971 Hannon defeated Joseph Brett with a turnout of 70.5 per cent.

Robert Preble, a virtual political unknown, took on incumbent James McIntyre in 1969 but it was good enough to bring out 52.7 per cent.

Two years before, McIntyre defeated Harold Nannis, who was better known than Preble, with a 54.4 per cent turnout.

McIntyre and LaRaia tangled in 1965 when Amelio Della Chiesa retired and brought out 65 per cent of the voters.

In 1963 Della Chiesa defeated Charles Shea with a 64.2 per cent turnout and turned back Brett in 1961 as 62.9 per cent voted.

In one of the biggest mayoral election attractions in the city's history, Della Chiesa defeated McIntyre in 1959. The red hot race produced a 75.5 per cent turnout.

In 1957 as Quincy returned to Plan A, Della Chiesa defeated Laurence Curtin with 60 per cent of the city's voters going to the polls.

This year's city council and School Committee candidates are going to have to work overtime to get this year's vote out.

WARD 4 is getting the most attention from this year's candidates as the campaigns turn down the home-stretch.

The candidates and political observers think Ward 4 could have the best voter turnout because of the council contest between incumbent Tom Fabrizio and 18-year-old challenger Michael D'Amico.

So the candidates are concentrating in that area.

FORMER MAYOR Frank McCauley is nearing the $30,000 mark in his Jimmy Fund Walk efforts to help youngsters with cancer.

McCauley completed the grueling 26.2 mile route which is the same as the Boston Marathon in 6 hours, 18 minutes.

He raised $2,860 through sponsors and with more to hear from, hopes to hit the $10,000 mark for this year. Last year he raised $9,600.

This year was his fifth walk. The $2,860 in so far brings his five year total to over $26,500. He's looking to pass the $30,000 mark.

Anyone wanting to help him do it, can send a check to him, 210 Manet Ave., Quincy. Make the check out to the Jimmy Fund Walk.

HN Council Honor Awards Night Oct. 23

Catholic and Protestant churches will be honored for 100 years of spiritual guidance to the community at the annual Honor Awards Night of the Houghs Neck Community Council Oct. 23.

Also honored will be Kay Powers, 88, of Bird St., a 55-year resident, the council's 1993 "Distinguished Senior Citizen."

Houghs Neck Congregational Church is celebrating in 1993-94 the 100th anniversary of the building of the People's Union Chapel at 64 Bay View Ave. This later became the Houghs Neck Congregational Church at 310 Manet Ave., built in 1931. The Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea has been pastor since 1947, and the Rev. M. Alicia Corea joined him as associate minister in 1949.

The building of Most Blessed Sacrament Church on Sea St. was completed in 1919, the successor to St. Francis by the Sea on Winthrop St., founded in 1893 as a mission church of St. John the Baptist. Rev. William English is pastor, the Rev. John Carroll, in residence; and Deacon Paul Markey serve the church today.

Powers, who came here from England when she was 16 years old, was married to the late John H. powers, and has lived for 52 years in the same house on Bird St. She is the mother of John B. "Jack" Powers and Edward Powers, both Houghs Neck residents. She has eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The Honor Awards dinner will begin at 5:30 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall. Former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley will be master of ceremonies for the evening.

Jack and Peggy Nigro are chairmen of the event and served on the Honor Awards selection committee along with David DiBona, Robert Szabo, Donald McCarthy, Houghs Neck Community Council president; and Rozann McCarthy. Others assisting are Jean Bragg, Peggy O'Connor and Kathy DiBona.

Tickets should be purchased from Dorothy Laing of 85 Darrow St. before Oct. 18.

Supports Re-Opening Of Beechwood Knoll School

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was unable to attend the School Committee public hearing on Oct. 6th but was able to view the cable presentation.

I feel a responsibility to respond to remarks made by Stephen Moynihan, former business manager of the Quincy Public Schools.

Having served as a Quincy School Committee member, former director of Beechwood Community Life Center and 17 year resident of the Beechwood Knoll neighborhood, I hope these comments will be heard with clarity and more veracity that those of Mr. Moynihan. His remarks about the Beechwood neighborhood do not in any way reflect my personal perspective nor that of the majority of my neighbors.

As a Beechwood parent I and many of my neighbors were devastated by the loss of our "neighborhood" school, yet we pulled together to turn a vacant school building into a very viable and vital community center. Later many of these same parents and neighbors worked diligently on behalf of efforts to re-open the Wollaston School.

We have participated with "full acceptance" by the larger Wollaston School community and many positive and long lasting relationships with other parents, teachers and staff have resulted from this liaison.

Mr. Moynihan does not live in our neighborhood nor does he have children/grandchildren that attend the Wollaston School. He has, perhaps without intent touched upon a very raw nerve.

His comments shall not cast doubts in the minds of School Committee members nor any members of the Wollaston School community of my or my neighbors strong affiliation and support for the Wollaston School.

I support re-opening the Beechwood Knoll School as a kindergarten center and feel that the city should do all in its power to assist in the relocation of the Beechwood Community Life Center. There is a need and room for both to make positive contributions to our community. We should not let this decision divide our neighborhood or our city.

Chelsea Far More Than 'Just A Dog'

Dear Quincy Sun readers:

When Chelsea was diagnosed with terminal liver disease on June 30, 1993, my heart broke and the future looked quite dim. If Chelsea died, part of me would die also. She is the reason for my strength and for the development of our program, Partners for the Disabled. Since 1989, she has become a regular part of many South Shore schools, teaching handicapped awareness to students as well as adults, and being a resource for the disabled and their families.

Chelsea has devoted her life to helping me and others. She desperately needs your help now.

Because of the medical fund which was set up for her and your generosity, she is alive and enjoying quality time. This is because her medication, home-cooked special diet and vitamin supplements have stabilized her condition. There is no cure, but there have been dogs who, because of treatment, have lived one, two, even three years with quality.

I know most of you agree she deserves that chance. She is far more than "just a dog" and those of you who know her and have been working hard to help her already know that. But her fund is getting low and we could face the day soon when there will be no more money, and although she could possibly live happily and comfortably for quite some time, we could be faced with having to put her to sleep before her time. Chelsea is fighting this horrid disease and she wants to live. Please help us!

Every dollar counts. Two, three, five or more is of great help. It all adds up and could help us pay for her medication which costs about $300 per month. I even plan to contact the manufacturers of her medication to see if they might help us keep the cost down. Her blood tests have been pushed up to every three weeks instead of two to cut her monthly cost down. Dr. Jean Duddy of the Angell Memorial Animal Hospital has been wonderful to us.

Everyone who donates gets a personal thank you from Chelsea and me. Some have sent donations but forgot to mention Chelsea and so these go into the human society's fund for other animals, not Chelsea. Again we thank all of you for your continued support. If you've made a donation to Chelsea and forgot to mark it for her, please call Althea Griffin, president of the South Shore Humane Society, to let her know.

We are eternally grateful for your caring and help for giving Chelsea the time she deserves.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Truman, Quincy Skip Each Other At Whistlestop

President Harry S. Truman ignored Quincy on his whistle-stop train tour of New England and Quincy gave him the brush-off, too.

Oct. 14-20
1952
41 Years Ago

The train carrying the President roared though Quincy Depot at 7:42 a.m. bound for Brockton from Boston at a mile-a-minute clip on a campaign swing on behalf of Adlai Stevenson for president against Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The small crowd at the station was made up mostly of commuters waiting for trains to Boston but there were a few people carrying Eisenhower signs and one Quincy couple, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Quilty of 37 Eddy St., with a Stevenson-Truman banner.

"Stevenson's radio and television talks won us over this time," said Mrs. Quilty, who said that she and her husband had been registered Republicans for 29 years. "We feel that he is the man for the common people."

Joseph F.X. Doherty, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, and City Councillor David J. Crowley, the Democratic candidate for Congress, were aboard Truman's Boston to Brockton train.

Doherty announced that Stevenson himself would make a 15-minute whistlestop in Quincy on Monday, Oct. 27, arriving at the depot at 9:30 a.m. en route to Brocton.

Kiwanis Club Installs First Woman President

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy recently held its annual installation of officers at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The event marked the beginning of the club's 70th year and the installation of its first female president.

Sylvia Jenkins, manager of the Quincy Square Branch of Fleet Bank, was installed as president. She previously served as club secretary, vice president and president-elect. Lt. Gov. William Hirst served as installing manager.

Other officers installed were Robert Fitzgerald, president-elect; James Mullaney III, vice president; Aldo Saluti, treasurer; and Thomas King, secretary. The Board of Directors will include Yves Poirier, John Farmer, Fred Costello, Arden Schofield, Joan Schwartz, Richard Malmquist and William Lucey.

Guests included Mayor James Sheets, Sen. Michael Morrissey, representatives of neighboring Rotary and Lions Clubs and members of Jenkin's family including her son, Walter, daughters, Michelle and Pamela Jenkins Robbins and her husband, Wayne.

Morrissey presented outgoing President Charles Simpson with a citation from the State Senate in recognition of his year's accomplishments as presidents. These included fundraising events such as a Youth Hockey Tournament, Golf Tournament and Kiwanis Bowl-for-Kids Day as well as a net increase of 10 new members.

Proceeds from the fundraisers were used to provide scholarships, camperships and assistance to children in need following recommendations by the Quincy Public Schools guidance personnel. Quincy Kiwanians also maintain three traffic islands at Adams and Whitwell Sts. as part of the city's Cleaner, Greener Program.

Event Chairman Yves Poirier, who also served as master of ceremonies, introduced 11 past presidents including Paul Ricciardi, Leo Darr, Elmer Fagerlund, Henry Parker, John Farmer, Richard Sweeney Jr., James Stearns, Robert Bunstein, Harry Jones, Ralph Yohe and himself. He also presented Perfect Attendance pins to 14 members of the club.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Marguerite Neal Wed To Geoffrey Hennessy

Marguerite Neal, daughter of Mrs. Rose Hines of Quincy and the late Mr. George Hines Jr., was recently married to Geoffrey Hennessy. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hennessy of Quincy.

The double ring ceremony was conducted at the Neighborhood Club in Quincy and officiated by Justice of the Peace Gordon Graham. A reception was also held in the Neighborhood Club.

The bridesmaid was Caitlin Neal, daughter of the bride.

Scott Andrews of Quincy, brother-in-law of the bride, served as Best Man.

Ushers were James Neal Jr. and Michael Neal, sons of the bride, both of Quincy.

The bride, a 1990 graduate of Quincy College, is employed by the Marion Manor Nursing Home in South Boston.

The groom, a 1978 graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Boston, is currently attending Bridgewater State College. He is employed by the Westwood Lodge, as track coach for North Quincy High School and at the Quincy Track Club.

Following a wedding trip to Cape Cod, the newlyweds are living in Quincy.

Quincy Art Assn. Open House, Appreciation Day Oct. 24

A celebration for the newly renovated Quincy Art Association building will be held Oct. 24, from 2 to 5 p.m. at 26 High School Ave., Quincy Center.

The "Open house and Appreciation Day" will pay tribute to the city of Quincy, local businesses, public officials, the Quincy Arts Council and members of the association who have contributed labor, services, materials and financial contributions.

Among the business donors are: Granite City Electric of Quincy, Kitchens Unlimited of Weymouth, Curry's Hardware of Braintree, Taso's Lunch of Quincy.

Labor was donated by the city of Quincy Public Works Dept. and the services of the Braintree Alternative Program sponsored by Sheriff Clifford Marshall. Sheriff Marshall's directors Rudy Mossesso and John Chaisson schedule work details for the residents of the programs. The program is offered to communities and non-profit organizations. The residents have transformed the art center into a new home for classes, workshops, meetings and demonstrations. The building has been completely restored and redecorated from roof to cellar. Joanne Dondero was the project manager, assisted by Marilyn Reisberg and Anet Paglierani.

Said Paglierani, "It is like a dream come true. Since our birth in 1965, the association has blossomed into an organization that has enhanced the city with education and aesthetic values for the visual arts. New goals have been set to promote a positive, contemporary image in the community.

MadVac A Happy Addition To Cleaner, Greener Effort

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy's Cleaner, Greener campaign is getting "madder" and city officials couldn't be happier.

The city recently purchased a "MadVac," a compact yet versatile sweeper and debris collector. The vehicle, which resembles a golf cart with a long heavy-duty hose attached to a vacuum head, is the newest addition to the city's cleaning effort.

"This is a welcomed addition to Cleaner, Greener," Mayor James Sheets said after seeing a recent demonstration outside City Hall.

"It really does the work of about four to five men. It allows us to keep the city cleaner much more efficiently and in the long run will save us money."

The high-powered MadVac can pick up all sorts of menacing litter and debris, including bottles, cans, small plastic milk bottles and cigarette butts. It will also be used to clean up glass clippings and leaves.

The MadVac comes with a 45-gallon trash container equipped with a fan to hold trash at the bottom of the container. That way, the collected trash becomes compact. The container is lined with a regular trash bag and is emptied about twice a day.

The MadVac's main cleanup area is the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy business districts. It will also spruce up the Quincy Historic Trail, generally travelling the same route as the tourism trolley which makes its way from the National Park Service Visitors Center to the United First Parish Church, Adams Birthplaces, and Adams Mansion before returning to the visitors center.

The vehicle runs on diesel fuel, gets 30 to 40 miles per gallon, and travels up to 15 miles per hour.

Officials are thrilled with is mobility, versatility and efficiency.

"It's perfect for working in the high traffic areas, like Quincy Square, Wollaston and North Quincy," said Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

"It really does a good job. It does the work of five people."

Items the MadVac cannot pick up, like large soda bottles or milk cartons, are collected by the operator, John Beardsley of Quincy.

Beardsley, 22, a UMass-Amherst graduate, said the MadVac is a 100 percent improvement. "We used to do it (pick up litter) using sticks. This is so much better."

The cleaning vehicle cost $26,000. Officials decided to purchase the MadVac after the city cancelled its street sweeping contract with a private firm. By investing in new cleaning equipment like the MadVac, officials say the city will save $1 million over the next six years.

Besides the MadVac, Quincy also purchased two new street sweepers in June.

DOVE Members To Walk For Women's Safety Sunday

Members of the Quincy-based organization DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) will be among those participating in the Jane Doe Walk for Women's Safety Sunday at noon at the Hatch Shell in Boston.

The DOVE Women's Center provides comprehensive services for battered women in the Quincy area. DOVE is a beneficiary of the walk, which is raising funds for more than 33 battered women's programs throughout Massachusetts.

DOVE's staff and board members, volunteers, students interns, friends and supporters will walk the 10K course that begins at the Hatch Shell and proceeds around the Charles River Esplanade.

Last year, 46 Massachusetts women and children were killed every 11 days in the Commonwealth.

To participate in the walk, call 1-800-JANE DOE.

When Roy and Amy Johnson told us what they were paying to live in their three-room apartment, it didn't make sense to us either. So we took a closer look at Roy and Amy, their payment history, and their life. We saw things in Roy and Amy that other banks failed to see in their numbers. And now Roy and Amy see a future with a home. Their own home. Paying less on their monthly mortgage payment than they used to pay on their rent. If you're like Roy and Amy and would like to see yourself in a home of your own, stop by your local Fleet branch office today. Because sometimes owning your own home isn't a matter of having more money, but spending the money you do have a little differently.

QHS Forms Partnership With College Loan Company

Quincy High School is working with one of the nation's largest college loan agencies to encourage more graduates to attend college or vocational schools.

School officials recently signed a partnership agreement with the Braintree-based New England Education Loan Marketing Corp. (Nellie Mae) to hold workshops, sponsor college visits and offer other support services for students. Officials said that it was the first partnership of its kind for Nellie Mae.

Officials hope that a heightened student awareness of available opportunities will increase the number of QHS students entering vocational programs or colleges after high school graduation.

The company will provide a program budget for QHS as part of the partnership, according to officials. The amount has not yet been determined, they added.

Preliminary plans call for workshops on college and career opportunities to be offered this semester for freshmen and sophomores. Juniors and seniors will receive information on how to select and apply for colleges and financial aid.

Discussions are underway about having QHS students visit private and public colleges around New England. Officials said Nellie Mae would hire buses to take students on the trips.

The company may also offer QHS students internships in about a year that would give them a first-hand look at the business world. In addition, the company hopes to launch a mentor program that would match students with employees.

QHS Principal Lloyd Hill said programs developed from the partnership will serve the diverse needs of the school's 1,200 students, from those who selected their college of choice long ago to those at risk of dropping out of school.

Since 1990, the Nellie Mae Fund for Education has given out about $2 million in grants to public school systems in New England for drop-out prevention programs and other projects for at-risk low-income students, officials said.

A committee made up of Nellie Mae employees and school staff members will plan the programs developed from the partnership.

The agreement followed several months of discussion between Nellie Mae and high school officials.

NQHS Non-Filer Day At NQHS Oct. 29

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is sponsoring a Non-Filer Day at North Quincy High School Oct. 29, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

To receive assistance bring any W-2's, 1099's or other information needed to complete a return. For those who have delayed filing returns because they can't find their W-2's or 1099's, the IRS can help you reconstruct the records.

Gerald R. Esposito, Boston IRS District Director said;

"We recognize there are many reasons why taxpayers have not filed. These reasons include procrastination and fear or inability to pay."

Individuals and businesses who voluntarily reenter the tax system, or enter for the first time, will find IRS eager to help them file the necessary tax returns, he said.

"IRS is not offering an amnesty program, you will receive penalties and interest unless you can prove reasonable cause. However, we will work out installment payments and offers in compromise to help nonfilers who cannot pay their liability in full," Esposito said.

Since last October, more than 155,000 people have called the IRS about filing prior year forms and another 58,000 individuals visited IRS offices to get information and assistance with their returns. Nearly 45 percent of those late filers who have sent in returns received refunds. The IRS reminds late filers that refunds must be claimed within three years from the original due date.

Quincy High School announces its September STAR Award winners.

They are: John Franceschini, physical education teacher; Suzanne Sullivan, senior; Christine Stuart, senior and MaryAnn Ashworth, sophomore.

The winners were selected for their contributions during the summer painting of the MacLean Gymnasium and school cafeteria or setting up the recent Freshman Orientation Day.

Three students and one faculty-staff member are chosen monthly for the STAR Awards.

2 School Bus Driving Instructors Complete Advanced Training Course

Lois Constantino and Maryellen Steen, certified school bus driving instructors for the Quincy Public Schools, have successfully completed a three-day Advance School Bus Driver Training Course given by the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau.

The program, funded by Federal Highway Safety monies, was held recently in Taunton. Speakers included representatives from Northeastern University, Emerson College, the Department of Public Utilities and East Bridgewater Public Schools as well as Duxbury School Supt. Eileen Williams and Sgt. Paul Sullivan of the State Police Safety Compliance Unit.

The instructors are responsible not only for training new drivers, but also for the required yearly training all school bus drivers must complete.

ACID RAIN'S DAMAGING EFFECT

If car owners think that they can get by with only an occasional wash of their cars, they might want to think again. Due to high concentration of emissions from engines and some industrial plants in the atmosphere, "acid rain" can fall from the sky to damage car finishes. Specifically, some chemicals in acid rain can react with the paint to form sulfuric and nitric acids which can cause craters and etching in clear coat finishes. To counter this effect, auto body experts recommend washing and rinsing cars after each rainfall with a ph-balanced car wash. Acid rain damage resembles water spotting, with the exception that acid rain craters have cracks or chips at their base. If caught early, this damage can be polished out. Later on, sanding/compounding/buffing may be required.

HINT: The average acidity of rainfall across the U.S. is a ph of 4.8, about the same as a cup of coffee.

Commitment

A city council candidate can't see into the future. He can't tell what problems tomorrow may bring. And if he tells you he has all the answers, he's not being honest.

The one thing a city council can offer you is commitment -- a sincere dedication to seek workable solutions to the city's problems with a basic integrity and decency that lets you know he honestly cares about your concerns.

When such a dedicated candidate also possesses a long family tradition of service to the city and its people, the potential for excellence in public service is clear.

CHARLES McINTYRE has the desire. He has the integrity. He has a family heritage of public service to Quincy streching back three generations. And he has the committment to serve his city, and serve it well.

A funeral Mass for A. Warren Steward, 66, of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John the Baptist Church.

Mr. Steward died Oct. 8 at home.

He worked for the Quincy Highway Department for 35 years, retiring as a foreman in 1990.

He was past commander of the George F. Bryan VFW Post in Quincy, the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post in Quincy, and the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

An Army veteran of World War II, he also served in the Air Force during the Korean War.

Born in Quincy, he was a lifelong resident.

He is survived by his wife, Grace A. (Fraser) Steward; two brothers, Frederick Steward of Braintree and Charles Steward of Centerville; two sisters, Alice Fredericks of Dorchester and Edna Higgins of Abington; three nieces and three nephews.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We like this saying by Samuel Johnson: "We love to expect, and when expectation is either disappointed or gratified, we want to be again expecting."

If you have children or grandchildren you know how persistently they seek the assurance of a definite time or date for goodies you promise rather vaguely. A camping trip or ball game outing "sometime" is not good enough. They want to know exactly when - and how many days is it?

This is the human joy of anticipation, which is most always a greater joy than consummation, if only because it extends over a longer period. We have heard it said that man is a goal oriented animal. He anticipates, he looks forward, he hopes, he desires.

"Of all the forces that make for a better world, none is so indispensable, none so powerful, as hope. Without hope men are only half alive. With hope they dream and think and work." . . . Charles Sawyer

Dr. Conrad Nobili, 86

Former Quincy Hospital Chief Of Staff; Headed Nobili Allergy Clinic In Quincy

A memorial service for Dr. Conrad Nobili, 86, of Yarmouthport, formerly of Quincy, will be held today (Thursday) at 2 p.m. at Harvard Club of Boston, 374 Commonwealth Ave.

Dr. Nobili died Monday at New England Sinai Hospital in Boston of complications from lung cancer.

He was former chief of staff at Quincy Hospital and head of the Nobili Allergy Clinic in Quincy.

He was among a group of doctors in the allergy clinic at the former Boston Dispensary who tested the drug Trimeton in 1949 for sufferers of hay fever, asthma and other allergies.

He was most proud of his work with the Massachusetts Physicians Art Association. He received first prize in 1951 in the group's national exhibit for his drawing, "Canaletto," a Venetian canal scene, and won second prize in 1950. His opaque watercolor, "Roman Ruins," was displayed in Macy's in New York City in 1951.

Dr. Nobili was the founding leader of South Shore Chapter, Committee to Rescue Italian Art, which raised funds to restore art works damaged by floods in Florence in 1965.

He opened his practice of immunology in Quincy and expanded to Hyannis before consolidating both offices into the Quincy allergy clinic.

He was a teaching fellow at Tufts New England Medical Center and was head of the allergy clinic at Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Born in Cambridge, he lived 55 years in Quincy where he graduated from high school.

An alumnus of Harvard University, he was past president of the Harvard Club of Quincy which gave him a plaque in 1987 as a tribute to his loyalty and support. He was also a member of the Harvard Club of Boston and Cape Cod.

Dr. Nobili received his medical degree from the Faculty of Medicine and Surgery at the University of Rome where he took examinations and qualified to practice medicine in Italy and other countries.

The Italian government gave him the title of Cavalier in 1972 and he received the Medal of Maria Teresa of Austria in 1988.

He interned at Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston and was registered for the practice of medicine in Maine before being appointed an assistant in medicine at Tufts Medical School.

Dr. Nobili was past president of the L'Eco Club in Quincy and the Quincy Chapter of the American Red Cross.

He was a fellow in the Society of American Chest Physicians and the American Academy of Allergists, a member of the American Medical Association, and held memberships and received awards from several international medical organizations.

Husband of the late Nica (Bighini) Nobili, he is survived by a son, Conrad D. Nobili of Marshfield and Eastham; two daughters, Carla N. Melandri of Abington and Paula Nobili of Boston; a sister, Laura N. Olsen of Quincy; and four grandchildren.

Burial will be private.

Visiting hours were scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday) from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

Afghan Showing City's Landmarks At Phase II Jewelry & Gifts

A woven afghan depicting historic landmarks of Quincy should be available for the holiday season at Phase II Jewelry & Gifts, 1361 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Deanna Gazarian, owner of Phase II Jewelry & Gifts, and her sister Karney have contracted to design and manufacture the afghan as a unique way of highlighting some of Quincy's finest landmarks and historic sites. Coincidentally, the store is located on the original site of Quincy's first Town Hall.

When a representative of the company that makes the afghans called on the shop, Gazarian decided to order a custom design showing some of the city's historic sites. Among the sites being depicted will be Quincy City Hall, Thomas Crane Library, Adams Historic Site, Adams Birthplaces, United First Parish "Church of the Presidents", Woodward School for Girls, Dorothy Quincy Homestead, St. John's Catholic Church, and Bethany Congregational Church.

A portion of the purchase price will be donated to one of the aforementioned sites or Quincy Tourism. There will be a discount for prepayment.

The store, which opened 18 years ago, also carries gold and diamonds as well as pottery items inscribed with Quincy and other local towns. Phase II also features Byer's Choice Caroler figures and Lizzi High dolls.

"We are a small store with items from $1 to $10,000 and where customers still get old fashioned service," Gazarian says. "There is no pressure here."

Education Matters Postponed By Finance Committee

The City Council Finance Committee has postponed two matters until a later date.

The committee's meeting last week was to include a presentation by School Supt. Eugene Creedon on the new state Education Reform Act's financial impact on the City of Quincy, as well as consideration of a proposal by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien to create a new local education fund in the city.

Although Creedon spoke briefly on the Education Reform Act, he was interrupted because the City Council had to hold a scheduled public hearing on a proposal by Shaw's Supermarket to open a new store on the North Quincy-Wollaston line. Creedon had to leave the chamber during the lengthy hearing.

Finance Committee Chairman Timothy Cahill said that since the superintendent did not have the proper amount of time to discuss the Education Reform Act's effect on Quincy, and because the matter "is not pressing at this time," the committee would call Creedon back at a future date.

Similarly, Chretien's proposal, which was introduced at the council's meeting Sept. 20, can also be brought up at any future Finance Committee meeting.

Star Share To Benefit Quincy Hospital Oct. 19-21

A Star Share program to help support health care services at Quincy Hospital will be held Tuesday, Oct. 19 through Thursday, Oct. 21 at participating Star Markets including the Granite St. store in Quincy.

During the three-day period, five percent of a shopper's total bill will be donated to the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation. The program is free and participants should sign a special certificate which is presented to a cashier before check out.

Certificates can be obtained by contacting the Quincy Hospital public relations department at 773-6100 ext. 4016.

The program supports the hospital's health care and state-of-the art medical technology. In the coming year, Quincy Hospital will open a new cardiac catherization laboratory in conjunction with Boston University's Medical Center Hospital; expand its geriatric psychiatric program for people over 55; and complete renovations in the emergency department to provide faster, more efficient emergency services.

Besides Quincy, other Star Markets participating in the program are Norwood, East Bridgewater, Waltham, Plymouth, Dorchester or Norwell.

To obtain a Star Share certificate, call 773-6100 ext. 4016.

phone rings at that hour there's a problem with my restaurant," he said. "But then he said 'I got the phone call from Sweden' and I knew what he meant."

Fogel said his father won the prize jointly with Douglass North of Washington University in St. Louis, whom he described as a "family friend for 40 years."

"So we're doubly excited," said Fogel.

The elder Fogel and North won the award for creating a school of thought called "cleometrics," Steve Fogel said. The two were the first to start "quantifying history," he added, when they discovered that you can take economic data of the past, use it as models in computers, and get an accurate picture of any economic area in the past.

As an example, Fogel noted that it was once believed that the development of the first railroad in the United States had a great deal to do with the country's subsequent economic success. Prof. Fogel's work proved, however, that the nation would have been just as successful even if it had only continued to utilize boats.

"It's very interesting work, and he had to go through a lot of painstaking research to develop this school of thought," said Fogel.

Fogel said his father received his undergraduate degree in economics from Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., his master's from Columbia University in New York City and his doctorate from John Hopkins University in Baltimore. He taught at the University of Chicago from 1963 to 1974, moved to Cambridge to teach at Harvard University from 1974 to 1981, and subsequently moved back to Chicago to again teach at the University of Chicago.

The award marks the fourth straight year that the University of Chicago has won the Nobel Prize in Economics, a first for any school in Nobel Prize history, said Fogel.

"No one expected my father to win the award, because no university ever won it four years in a row," said Fogel.

He added that his father has been a guiding force in his life and in his decision to purchase his Wollaston diner 3 1/2 years ago, and said the pride he feels cannot be put into words.

"I'm glad the rest of the world will now know what a truly brilliant man he is," he said. "He's a very, very modest man and I'm sure he'll handle accepting the award very well. He's been a major influence on my own economic philosophy, and he's more than my father--he's also one of my best friends."

In fact, for the past two years the Steve's Beale Street Diner menu has featured a breakfast special known as "The Bob Fogel," named after Prof. Fogel because of his love of steak and eggs.

"It's a steak and eggs special," said Fogel. "Every time he goes into a restaurant, if there's steak and eggs on the menu, then that's what he orders."

And today (Thursday), "The Bob Fogel" will be on sale for only $1 in recognition of his father's accomplishment, he said.

NQ Catholic Women's Club Meeting Tonight

The Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy will meet tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. in the Sacred Heart School Hall, Hancock St., North Quincy.

The event will be chaired by Maureen McNamara and her committee. Special guest Ralph Marple will sing songs from Broadway shows and the meeting will also include some Halloween surprises.

Mary Blake will conduct a business meeting at which plans will be made for a Rummage Sale scheduled for later in the month.

After Heartbreaker Presidents Host Matignon

By TOM SULLIVAN

After losing a 7-6 heartbreaker to pre-season Old Colony League favorite Plymouth, despite what Quincy coach Jack Raymer called "one of the best total efforts of any of my teams," the Quincy football team will face a new opponent, Matignon, Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Matignon brings a 3-1 record to Quincy, having defeated Savio Prep, Don Bosco and Abp. Williams, while losing to Boston Latin.

"We scouted Matignon against Williams and they have an excellent, scrappy team and we will have our hands full," said Raymer. "The 12-0 score was deceiving as Matignon dominated throughout.

Quincy Scoring	TD	PAT	FG	Pts.
Bowman	4	2	0	26
Elder	2	4	0	16
Bartlett	2	0	0	12
Brown	1	0	0	6
Sova	1	0	0	6

"We had our chances to upset Plymouth and it was there for the taking, but we didn't capitalize. If this is the best in the league, then we proved we can play with the best."

Quincy's defense was outstanding as it held the Blue Eagles (3-1 with only a loss to Brockton) to 116 yards rushing and 121 yards passing.

Quincy rushed for 112 yards and Mike Bartlett was 10 for 22 for 203 yards.

Sam Brown had another fine game for the Presidents, rushing for 64 yards, while Mike Elder carried only four times for 23 yards.

Jason Sova had four receptions for 85 yards, Tom Malvesti three for 62 yards and sophomore Mike Sheffer had a big reception for 44 yards.

The defense was led by Mike Feeley, with 10 tackles and four assists; Paul Colleary, eight tackles and four assists, and sophomore Bill Dunn, seven tackles and three assists.

"They were the leaders, but the entire defense was super," was Raymer, who lauded the work of Elder, John Green, Steve Provost, Colleary, Ashley Davis, Dunn, Kevin Carey, Jason Bennett, Tim Dowling and Jon Gangi.

"We still have some work to do with the offensive line, but Dave D'Olympio, Peter Kolson, Feeley, Butch Palazzi, Jeff Burrell, Terry Bowman, Sova and Malvesti all played well," Raymer said. "We moved the ball well and had a balanced attack but just passed up some fine opportunities."

Quincy (2-2) came out fast and on the first play from scrimmage, Bartlett hit Sova on a fly pattern for a 50-yard completion to the Plymouth 20. Bartlett scored six plays later from the two. However, the try for the extra point failed.

Feeley stopped Plymouth's first drive with a fumble recovery, but the Blue Eagles took advantage of their second chance. A pass interference call against Quincy on a fourth-and-2 play at the Presidents' seven gave Plymouth an automatic first down and James Shea scored from the two. Justin Miller kicked the deciding extra point.

Midway through the third quarter Green recovered a fumble and Quincy drove to the Plymouth 11 on Elder's running and passes from Bartlett to Sova and Malvesti.

However, Bowman was hit for an eight-yard loss and Brown for an eight-yard loss as the Presidents were forced to throw incomplete into the end zone on fourth-and-23.

With four minutes left in the game, Bartlett hit Sheffer for 44 yards to the Plymouth 37. An offside penalty on Plymouth put the ball on the 25, but Bartlett was sacked for an eight-yard loss on second down and the Presidents were forced into two incompletions.

Youth Football

Panthers Romp By Apaches, 28-0

The Quincy Point Panthers avenged their only loss of the season with a 28-0 victory over the previously unbeaten North Quincy Apaches Sunday in the Quincy Youth Football League.

After five first quarter turnovers, the Panthers left no question as to the outcome, scoring on the first play of the second quarter as Steve Roberts rushed for his first of three touchdowns, a 40-yard run.

With three minutes left in the half, quarterback Carmen Lorenzano threw a 30-yard pass to Tommy Daley at the Apaches' 11. That set up Roberts' second TD to give the Panthers a 12-0 lead. Lorenzano's pass to Daley added the two-point conversion.

In the third quarter, following an Apache fumble, the Panthers Drove to the Apache 30. Lorenzano passed to Roberts at the three from where Roberts scored his third touchdown.

Lorenzano called his own number for the final TD when he ran 30 yards for the score and hit Daley for the two-point onversion.

Kofi Fraser and Larry Antonellis played outstanding defense for the Panthers.

This Sunday the Panthers will face the West Quincy Elks at 6 and the Apaches will meet the Houghs Neck Manets at 7:30 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Stop & Shop Charity Softball Game Oct. 19

The "Food for Friends" charity softball between the city's two Stop & Shop Supermarkets, Newport Ave. and Southern Artery, will be held Tuesday, Oct. 19 at 6 p.m. at Rotary Field.

The event, which will benefit either the DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) or Father Bill's Place depending on who wins, had been scheduled for Sept. 27 but was rained out.

Tickets are $1 and may be purchased in advance at the Newport Ave. store or at the gate. For more information call Paul McEacheron, Newport store manager or Mike Morad at 328-5325.

Cross Country

North Girls Defeat Silver Lake For First Time

The North Quincy girls' cross-country team defeated Silver Lake for the first time ever, 25-31, last week in an Old Colony League meet to improve its record to 3-1.

The winless North boys didn't fare as well as they lost, 17-47, to a strong Laker team.

The North girls were led by the 1-2 finish of Erin Duggan (21:12) and Laura Blaikie (21:36), who constantly pressured the Lakers' talented Liz Krueger and Tracy Driscoll over North's 3.1 mile loop.

The Lakers' front running tactics proved costly over the hilly and winding course and, with less than half a mile to go, North's Erica Doherty tried to make it a sweep for North, but faded to fifth in 21:44.

All five girls finished under 22 minutes, the highest quality finish over the course.

Mel Gaziano, eighth; Katie McNamara, ninth, and Kelly Duggan, 10th, were the other North scorers. Several other girls ran their personal bests, including Colleen Cotter, Diane McGunigle, Chrissy Herman, Ursula Feurtado and Carrie Jarvic.

Once again North's Eric Torvi was the first finisher for the boys in fifth place (18:32). Steve Cannon was eighth.

"This is Silver Lake's strongest boys team in history," said North coach Geoff Hennessy. "They will be right up there with Plymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham. We are getting better, but we are not as strong as those teams."

North freshman Greg Burke was impressive running a 20:08.

The North boys and girls will host OCL league leader Weymouth next Tuesday at Pageant Field.

North's younger athletes traveled to Apponequet Regional High to compete in the Warrior Invitational Tournament and several turned in outstanding performances.

North will compete in the Brown Invitational in Slater Park, Pawtucket, R.I., Oct. 23.

Raiders Face Weymouth Here Friday Night

After losing two games on the road to the top-rated teams in the Old Colony League, the North Quincy football team (1-3) returns home to face Weymouth Friday night at 7 o'clock at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

After dropping a 22-21 heartbreaker to Plymouth, the Raiders lost at Barnstable, 13-3, last Friday night in a battle of the rival Red Raiders.

Weymouth brings a 2-2 record into Friday's game, having defeated Silver Lake and Taunton and losing to Waltham and Barnstable.

Last season North Quincy defeated Weymouth, 10-7.

"We haven't played a bad game yet," said North coach Ken McPhee. "We played a strong Barnstable team on even terms except for two big plays (45 and 60-yard touchdown passes). And we played Plymouth (pre-season favorites to win the OCL title) even.

"We stopped (Jason) O'Neil, the leading scorer in Division 1, but those two big pass plays beat us. I really think Barnstable (3-0-1) will win the league title. They have an excellent team."

North was forced to play without star running back Shawn Nee (knee injury) for the second game in a row. Derrick Epps took up the slack and carried 15 times for 100 yards.

Quarterback Dan Duncan was nine-for-18 for 114 yards and George Wirtz had another big game with six receptions for 107 yards.

North had 110 yards on the ground and 114 passing, while Barnstable had 95 yards rushing and 121 yards through the air as Mickey Fein was 5-for-10 and both touchdowns.

North again played outstanding defense with Dave Pacino, Justin Dilks, Kevin Ross, Peter Fitzpatrick and Sean Halpin all turning in excellent performances.

Ross put North on the scoreboard first with a 32-yard field goal, his second in two games.

The key play on the drive was a 20-yard run by Epps to the Barnstable 11.

Fein hit Ian McAllister with a 45-yard touchdown pass. A North defender just missed intercepting the ball and McAllister found himself all alone. Scott Rose kicked the extra point.

Later Fein found McAllister wide open down the sidelines and he cut back to the middle of the field and broke and tackle, completing a 60-yard scoring play.

North had a chance to cut the lead to seven points but Ross' second field goal attempt hit the right goal post.

The North Raiders had the ball only three times in the second half as Barnstable's Raiders controlled the play behind running back Joe Kennedy.

"We still have six games left and we will bounce back," said McPhee. "We gave the two top-rated league teams all they could handle."

Softball

Malachy's II Wins Third A Division Title

Malachy's II won its third successive Quincy Men's Softball League A Division championship by defeating Malachy's I, four games to one, in the championship series. The two finished 1-2 in the regular season.

Will McHugh, the series MVP, had a fantastic series with five home runs and 13 RBI. George Grass, Frank Micelli and Rich Kelly combined for 18 home runs.

Steve Tuoma, Tom Handrahan, Dennis Kelly, Don Cooper, Paul Casey, Mike Peterson, Bob Hedlund, Joe Joy and Jack Cavanaugh all played well.

Malachy's II had advanced to the finals by eliminating Fowler House, 6-0, to win the semifinals series, three games to one.

Casey pitched a one-hitter in the final game and McHugh had a three-run homer. Tuoma, Cooper, Grass, Dennis Kelly and Peterson all had strong games. Rock Neary, a four-year veteran, also played well until he was injured.

For Fowler House Jim Buhl pitched well and Bruce Tobin made some outstanding plays as did Larry Taglieri.

Malachy's I advanced to the finals by eliminating Pat Flanagan's, three games to one.

In the Bi Division, Beau's Place leads Washington Tap I, two games to one, in the championship series.

Beau's had advanced to the finals by eliminating Hyde Park Pub, 8-2, to win the semifinals series, three games to two.

Washington Tap I moved into the finals by eliminating The Tap, three games to one, winning the final game, 7-5.

Washington Tap I won the opening game only to have The Tap come back to win the second game, 11-9.

Game three was a see-saw affair with The Tap taking a 14-10 lead into the bottom of the seventh. Washington Tap I rallied for four runs to tie it up with the tying run scoring on Bob Ierardi's infielder's choice. Mike Ainsley slammed his second home run of the game in the eighth to win it. It was his fifth RBI of the game.

In the fourth game The Tap took a 4-3 lead into the seventh but Washington Tap I rallied for four runs as Joe Godfrey, Barry McGue and Ierardi had RBI singles as did Dennis LaCorte.

The Tap still wouldn't quit and loaded the bases but could score only once and fell short, 7-5.

Playing well for The Tap were Dennis, Brian and Chris Croke, Paul Noonan, Joe Manning, Bill Nash, Bob Doyle, Oli Fahey, Jeff Hall and Steve Kearns.

Pagen, Ford Selected All-American Cheerleaders

Kara Pagen and Kathie Ford of Quincy, cheerleaders at Abp. Williams High, have been selected as All-American cheerleaders by the National Cheerleaders Association of Dallas, Texas, and will appear in the Jeep-Eagle Aloha Bowl in Hawaii over the Christmas Holiday.

The two, varsity football and basketball cheerleaders at Williams, were selected from 256 participants at the NCA Camp held at the University of Mass/Dartmouth.

Pagen, a senior and captain of the Williams cheerleaders, is a four-year member of the varsity team. She is an honors student and has been selected to "Who's Who Among America's High School Students."

Ford, a junior, is also a member of the varsity track team and is in her third varsity season as a basketball and football cheerleader. She was selected All-American for the second time and cheered in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade last year.

Both girls are former captains for St. Joseph's School and the Quincy Point Panthers.

Donations are being accepted at Abp. Williams, 8 Independence Ave., Braintree 02184 as the two girls are raising funds for the trip through yard sales and youth cheer clinics. Any amount is greatly appreciated.

Recently the two girls were honored at a Quincy Youth Football League game and were awarded All-American shirts from QYFL vice president Mike Miller. Both are former league cheer all-stars.

Hamel, Wickens And Troupe Funeral Home Adds CDs To Musical Presence Service

Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, of Quincy has expanded its "Musical Presence" service by installing compact disc technology.

"We have offered 'Musical Presence' since 1976, when we became aware of what a comfort the right kind of music can be to people who are experiencing grief," said Roger Hamel, owner of the funeral home.

"While delivering the same superb sound reproduction already available through "Musical Presence", compact discs make it possible for the funeral home to substantially increase the number of songs in the music library it keeps on the premises." "Now with CD's it will be even more convenient for our families to select exactly the music they wish to have at their funerals," Hamel said.

"Musical Presence" is provided by National Music Service, of Spokane, WA., a subsidiary of NAMSCO Corporation. National Music Service is the principal supplier of recorded music for funeral service in North America," said Hamel.

Hamel noted that, "we use 'Musical Presence' because it enables us to serve our families with the highest quality background and chapel music." The background music helps us maintain the relaxing atmosphere that is so important when families visit our facilities."

Because the chapel music offers a choice of over 2500 vocal and instrumental selections, each family can have music that makes its funeral personal and therefore more meaningful," Hamel said.

"A number of scientific studies have shown that music can have a positive, therapeutic effect on people."

"Our 'Musical Presence' system is specially designed with this in mind. The music is exclusively selected and recorded for use in federal homes and played on equipment engineered to suit our building."

"Musical Presence was developed by Merrill P. Womach, nationally known gospel vocalist and recording artist. Many of the solos in the "Musical Presence" library feature Womach's singing. The distinctive quality of his voice has been called uplifting and inspiring and reflects his own personal experiences, " Hamel said.

On Thanksgiving Day of 1961, Womach barely escaped with his life from a fiery plane crash in which he was burned beyond recognition. He has risen above adversity through a strong faith that has challenged and encouraged thousands of others through his years of personal appearances and radio and television performances

Hamel said that "Musical Presence" is one example of how his firm is committed to serving the community.

"Bringing Merrill Womach's ministry of music to our families has been an important part of our care-giving," he said.

Ann Cosgrove Director Of Shore Shore Day Care Services

Ann Cosgrove of Quincy was elected to the South Shore Day Care Services Board of Directors at the agency's recent annual meeting held at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Simon Fireman GBARC 'Man Of The Year'

The Greater Boston Association for Retarded Citizens has selected Simon Fireman of Quincy as its 1993 "Man of the Year."

Each year, at its Red and White Ball, the GBARC honors as its man or woman of the year an individual who has made contributions to the community of civic, philanthropic, and social value.

The association said:

"Our honoree Simon Fireman is an extraordinary individual, truly deserving of this important honor. In the corporate world, in government service, in international affairs and most importantly in striving to help his fellow man, Simon Fireman has distinguished himself as few others have.

"He has represented his country with distinction as a trade advisor to Presidents Carter, Reagan and Bush, as a director of the Export-Import Bank, and as chairman of the Interagency Task Force on Trade under President Reagan."

The Red and White Ball will be held Nov. 13 at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel. All proceeds from the ball will be used to help the area's retarded citizens at home, in health institutions, at community centers and in the workplace.

SIMON FIREMAN

Fireman lives with his wife, Norma. They have three children.

Retirement Seminar Oct. 14

Lock-Up To Benefit Muscular Dystrophy

The Muscular Dystrophy Association will hold its first Metro Insurance Agency Lock-Up to benefit MDA, on Thursday, Oct. 28 at the Metro Insurance Agency in Quincy from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Several local business people will be locked up to support MDA. The bail is set at $500.

In the event a "jailbird" has not raised the required bail, they will have the opportunity to use cellular phones, donated by Cellular One, to obtain more donations. During the "lock-up," lunch will be provided to jailbirds.

Event proceeds will benefit thousands of children and adults in the Greater Boston area who are affected by any one of the 40 neuromuscular diseases which MDA covers. MDA provides patient services, medical equipment and supports extensive research programs.

Anyone interested in participating can call 461-0310.

QAA Classes Open

Quincy Art Association, 26 High School Ave., is offering a number of different art classes.

They include: children's art classes Tuesdays from 1 to 2:30 p.m., Artventure with Margaret Claffey Tuesdays from 3 to 4:30 p.m. and Draw Cartoons with Richard Porteus (advanced class) Saturdays from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

By virtue of a Judgement entered by the Norfolk Superior Court (Docket No. 91-2200) in favor of Mildred Scott, as Trustee of Louisburg Square South Condominium Trust v. Angelina A. Gangi, Trustee of Performance Realty Trust establishing a lien pursuant to M.G.L. c 183A, Sec. 6 on the real estate known as Unit 56 of Louisburg Square South Condominium for the purpose of satisfying such lien, the real estate will be sold at Public Auction at 11:00 A.M. on October 20, 1993 at the office of the Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff, 630 High Street, Dedham, MA. The premises to be sold are more particularly described as follows: Unit 56 of Louisburg Square South Condominium located at 146 Quincy Shore Drive, Quincy, Massachusetts and created by Master Deed dated February 17, 1981 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 5840, Page 654, as amended or record, together with the Unit's undivided percentage interest in the common areas and facilities of the Condominium, and together with such other rights and easements and obligations appurtenant to the Unit as may be set forth in the unit deed thereto and in any document governing the operation of the Condominium, including, without limitation, the Master Deed, the by-laws of the organization of unit owners and any administrative rules and regulations adopted pursuant thereto. Being the same premises conveyed to Angelina A. Gangi, Trustee of Performance Realty Trust by deed recorded with said Deeds in Book 6775, Page 664.

Terms of Sale:

1. Non-refundable certified check for $2,500.00 to be paid by the successful bidder at the time of the auction.

2. The balance of the purchase price to be paid within thirty days of the sale.

3. Release Deed from Trustees of Louisburg Square South Condominium to be issued to purchaser upon payment in full of sale price. The deed shall convey the premises subject to, and with the benefit of, any restrictions, easements, improvements, assessments, encumbrances, liens or claims in the nature of liens which are, by operation of law, conveyed with the same premises.

4. No representation is or shall be made by Seller as to the status of any mortgage.

5. Other terms to be announced.

The sale is pursuant to a Judgement of the Norfolk County Superior Court, a copy of which may be viewed at the office of Attorney Michael Merrill, One Beacon Street, Boston, MA 02108, 523-1760, attorney for the Seller, by appointment.

CITY OF QUINCY
AMENDED FINAL STATEMENT OF COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES AND PROJECTED USES OF FY 1993-94 CDBG FUNDS

I. INTRODUCTION

The City of Quincy was awarded $2,267,000 in Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Entitlement funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the 1993-94 program year. This amended Statement describes the changes in community development objectives of the City of Quincy and projected use of these CDBG funds. Public comments regarding this Statement are welcome and should be addressed to the Department of Planning and Community Development, Quincy City Hall Annex, Quincy, MA 02169.

II COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT OBJECTIVES

The City of Quincy aims to use its CDBG funds to carry out the national objectives of benefitting low and moderate income families or aiding in the prevention or elimination of slums or blight. Quincy's 1993-94 CDBG programs include the following categories: Housing; Public Service; Public Facilities and Improvements; Special Economic Development.

This list is being amended to add another program: Code Enforcement in the City's low-mod income target areas.

The City of Quincy makes a firm commitment that at least %70 of the CDBG funds to be expended during the three year certification period beginning FY 1993-94 will be for activities that will benefit low and moderate income people. Remaining funds will aid in the prevention or elimination of slums and blight.

III. PROPOSED CHANGES IN PROJECTED USE OF CDBG ENTITLEMENT FUNDS

	ORIGINAL	REVISED
Housing Rehabilitation Program Support	$272,000	$234,000
Code Enforcement	0	$38,000

runoff has caused "significant environmental damage," and Boston should be held accountable for its lack of cooperation in the matter.

"I applaud the mayor's action for responding quickly and decisively," said Cheney. "The people of Squantum have been very patient on this issue. The mayor of Boston (Thomas Menino) has not returned any of our phone calls, and we've certainly extended the olive branch."

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who was also present, said an emergency order Boston had filed for in August allowed for remedial work such as hydroseeding and placing of haybills to pick up erosion at the site, but not the heavier industrial work such as bulldozing that had been taking place. This action led directly to the cease and desist order, according to Ayers.

"We've tried to communicate with Boston from the start, to break down communication gaps," said Ayers, who added that Congressman Gerry Studds, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, and State Rep. Michael Bellotti have also been supportive in attempting to protect the best interests of the Squantum residents.

The Boston Police Department and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency plan to replace the single firing range at the site with three outdoor ranges and an indoor range. The ranges would be used by Boston and Quincy police and DEA officials.

Officials have said the number of people using the range would not substantially increase but the gunfire area would expand from one to four acres.

When the Quincy Conservation Commission issued the cease and desist order, Boston and DEA officials said they would appeal to the state Department of Environmental Protection.

National Guard crews, who according to Ayers have been commissioned by Boston to do the work at the site, had already cleared much of the site before the conservation commission had decided what kind of work would be allowed at the island.

Four of Moon Island's 44 acres were stripped Aug. 18, two days before the City of Boston filed for its emergency order to work at the site. The conservation commission said any work done would be at the applicants' own risk.

Squantum residents have opposed the gun range project, saying that it would cause environmental, noise and traffic problems.

Moon Island has been the site of controversy in the past. In 1986, Quincy attempted to retake the site from Boston in order to block a proposal for a Suffolk County jail. Once it was clear that the jail would be built elsewhere, however, the city decided to drop an eminent domain proceeding it had begun.

$42,000 Grant Awarded For Shipyard Redevelopment

A $42,000 state grant has been awarded to Quincy for the completion of the redevelopment plan for the former Fore River Shipyard, announces Mary Padula, secretary of the state's Executive Office of Communities and Development.

The project is being undertaken in cooperation with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority which owns and property and the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management. The grant, awarded to Quincy, is on behalf of Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth.

The project is for the redevelopment of the 182-acre historical property located in the municipalities of Quincy and Braintree, on the banks of the Weymouth Fore River. The site is in Quincy Point and East Braintree, bounded on the north by Route 3A and on the south by Route 53.

For several decades, the shipyard was the site of the greatest shipbuilding facilities in the world. During World War II alone, the shipyard employed 40,000 people and delivered a total of 227 Navy ships of all sizes and types.

More than 6,000 shipbuilders and thousands of others in secondary and service industries lost their jobs as the General Dynamics Fore River Shipyard phased out operations in the mid-1980s.

When GD closed the yard in 1986, more than $100 million in taxes and personal revenues were lost. The city of Quincy lost over $2 million in annual taxes from GD.

The yard is now the site of the MWRA's pelletization plant, a significant part of the Boston Harbor Cleanup. Currently inn peak use for cleanup related activities, large portions of the yard will become surplus and available for development beginning in 1995.

The development committee and a consulting team are currently focusing on existing conditions and generating information about issues and concerns in the three communities have identified in connection with the Fore River shipyard area (FRSA) and on generating consensus on the development goals and considerations for the FRSA.

The strategic planning rant is intended to provide necessary supplemental funding to determine the feasibility of the identified options and to produce a master redevelopment plan for the FRSA.

The project has been planned to maximize citizen participation during and after the preparation of the FRSA Development Plan. There will be broad representation of the residents, business people, and community leaders who will be effected by any development at the FRSA.

The grant is being administered through the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development.

Wollaston-North Quincy Site 'Not Appropriate'

Council To Turn Down Proposal For Supermarket

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A proposal by Shaws Supermarket, Inc. to construct a new store at a Wollaston-North Quincy site on Hancock St. will be turned down when the City Council meets as the city's special permit granting authority Monday, Oct. 25 at 6 p.m.

On Tuesday as the newspaper went to press, the Sun learned the proposal does not have sufficient support to proceed. Four city councillors, including two which represent the neighborhood surrounding the site of the proposed supermarket, told the Sun they would vote against the special permit next Monday.

A special permit application requires a two-thirds vote or six of nine councillors in the affirmative for the permit to proceed. However, the Shaws' proposal has at least four dissenters and city officials familiar with the project said the council may vote unanimously against the supermarket project.

Shaws would need a special permit since the proposal calls for a retail facility measuring more than 5,000 square-feet within an industrial zone. Under a new zoning ordinance approved earlier this year, the entity governing the city's special permit granting authority regarding retail facilities in an industrial zone changed from the Zoning Board of Appeals to the City Council.

On Tuesday, Council President Charles Phelan, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said they would all vote against the Shaws' proposal.

"After careful examination and a thorough review of the proposal by all pertinent city departments and officials and after conducting two public hearings and two neighborhood meetings, it has become apparent that the site indicated would not be appropriate for this particular project," said Phelan, who represents Ward 5 which includes Wollaston.

Ayers, who represents North Quincy, said he shares the same concerns as Phelan. "The project is too large and will create a negative impact on the Impact Quincy Survey:

Youth Here Less Likely To Use Alcohol, Other Drugs, Weapons

Youth in Quincy appear to be less likely to use alcohol and other drugs or carry weapons than youth throughout the state, but more likely to use tobacco than their peers, according to a survey recently released by Impact Quincy.

Almost 2,500 youth ages 11-18 answered the survey which asked questions regarding the youths' attitudes and behaviors regarding alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use; medical and personal health; safety and "life satisfaction."

"The date gives us some good news, a few surprises, and some clear challenges," said Impact Quincy Coalition Director Mitch Finnegan. "Clearly, the three areas of most concern are the use of alcohol, tobacco, and marijuana.

"The entire community--families, churches, the media, business, schools, social service providers, and others--needs to utilize this information to address these challenges. We need to use this information to continue building a community-wide effort to address these challenges," Finnegan said.

Seventy-five percent of the Quincy youth in grades 9-11 reported using alcohol at least once in their lives, compared with the state-wide average of 85 percent for youth in grades 9-12. Twenty-seven percent of Quincy youth reported ever using marijuana, compared to 35 percent across the state. Sixty-two percent of the same youth reported using cigarettes, compared to 63 percent in Massachusetts.

Finnegan said the use of tobacco among Quincy youths is probably higher than the state average when high school seniors are factored in.

"We would expect that tobacco use would rise to approximately 65 percent when we consider high school seniors. At the lower high school grades, the number of youths in Quincy using tobacco is higher than the state average," Finnegan said.

"Current" use of alcohol was even lower,

New Recreation Programs For Bernazzani School

A new recreation program will begin soon at the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy.

The City Council Monday night appropriated $4,300 to the Recreation Department so that the program can be initiated at the school. City Auditor Robert Foy said the money was taken from receipts received from 1994 in addition to the current budget.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said with a new gym currently being built at the school, a new recreation program there would make sense. He added that although the gym is still being worked on, he has "reason to believe it will be ready soon" and added that he hopes to have the program going in time for the school's winter term.

Kolson Will Finally Get His Council Salary

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson will finally be paid for doing his job.

The City Council Monday night voted 8-0 that Kolson, who has not been paid for the Ward 1 position since first being elected in 1989, should receive his FY94 salary of $10,107.

The state Ethics Committee had originally ruled that Kolson had a conflict of interest in running for the councillor's seat because he is employed by the Quincy Housing Authority. A state law decrees that nobody can receive two municipal paychecks.

However, Kolson, who abstained from the vote, said after the council meeting that once it was explained to the Ethics Committee that the QHA is not governed by the city--the way other housing authorities are in other local communities--the committee agreed that there was, in fact, no conflict of interest.

He added that the experience of being a councillor is something he would gladly do for free and said he didn't care that he has, in effect, lost for good the first three years of compensation for the position.

"I'd do it for nothing," said Kolson. "I wouldn't have missed it for the world."

Municipal Lottery Runs Into Malone Stonewall

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A proposal by City Councillor Michael Cheney to begin a municipal lottery in Quincy now faces a possibly insurmountable hurdle.

However, Cheney said Tuesday that he might end up dropping the proposal in favor of a different alternative to raise city revenues.

State Treasurer Joseph Malone has gone on record as saying he is opposed to Quincy or any other community in Massachusetts running a local lottery. Malone made his comments last Friday after attending an awards ceremony at Quincy City Hall.

"On the one hand, I commend him (Cheney) for coming up with an innovative way to raise revenues," said Malone. "But on the other hand, I think it would lead to the rise of 100 other communities wanting their own lotteries. When the state began the Massachusetts Lottery, it was agreed that all of its overhead would be combined into one lottery, and that system works.

"I think 100 separate lotteries, in the long run, would not be efficient."

Cheney's proposal is currently pending in the City Council Ordinance Committee. It requires approval from the Ordinance Committee, and then the City Council as a whole, before going to Mayor James Sheets in the form of a home rule petition. If Sheets signed the petition, it would then require approval from the state legislature and ultimately Gov. William Weld in order to become law.

Cheney originally introduced the proposal in 1991 and has said that despite local approval, the legislature allowed the matter to remain in committee. Malone also opposed the proposal two years ago because of his belief it would detract from Massachusetts Lottery sales.

Cheney has argued in the past that he believes the state legislature will now vote in favor of a Quincy lottery because the state lottery actually competes with itself by constantly introduced new games. He has also said that his research has shown that when the state lottery introduced a new game, sales of other games do not decline but in fact overall lottery sales increase.

Despite the fact that Malone has no official say in the matter, however, he is as state treasurer very influential in all financial matters. One Quincy city official, who asked not to be identified, said the proposal likely faces an uphill battle without Malone's approval.

"I imagine it would be a hard sell, and I know many people feel that way," said the official. "If Malone were in opposition, the lottery would probably line up all their lobbyists against it."

Other opposition to the lottery proposal includes Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee.

"I just feel that no government should be involved in gambling," said Cahill. "I think with the state lottery, it's gotten out of hand already, and I don't think we need to create any kind of bureaucracy in Quincy."

Ordinance Committee Chairman Lawrence Chretien, the Ward 3 councillor, said he has mixed feelings on the matter.

"I'm open-minded toward any idea that might

City Plans To Add 16-18 Recruits In All

3-5 New Firefighters To Be Hired By Lottery

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city plans to hire between 16 and 18 new firefighters, with as many as five being chosen by lottery.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said Tuesday that there are 13 veterans who will be hired before those to be determined by the lottery system. Veterans are given priority over non-veterans in such situations, he said.

Gorman added that there are currently 16 positions available at the fire department and two others that may soon become available because of veterans who have filed retirement papers. Therefore, the number of names drawn from the lottery will be between three and five, he said.

The lottery is needed to break a tie among 33 other applicants who tied with a mark of 100 percent on the state firefighter civil service test, according to Executive Secretary Thomas Koch. A source at the Quincy Personnel Department confirmed the number, saying 28 of the applicants are from Quincy and five are not, although all lived in the city at the time the exam was taken.

Koch said the lottery will be held today (Thursday) at 5:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St. It will be open to the public, he noted.

Koch added that as the names are drawn, they will be designated with the numbers one through 33. Number one will be first on the list to be hired, number two will be second, and so on, he said.

Gorman had told The Quincy Sun in September that there would be 18 to 20 openings in his department pending possible retirements, but said the number had changed because of a couple of veterans who decided they will not retire until a later date.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time that regardless of the number of vacancies, it is his intention to fill them all. The mayor has the final say on who is hired for the department.

Asked if he thought a lottery was the best way to determine who is hired for a position, Sheets said there would be no better alternative in this case.

"You have to find a way to choose among those who scored 100 percent," he said. "When you have a tie like that, you have to find a way to break it. How else could you do it?"

Gorman agreed.

"It's really the only fair way to do it," he said.

Koch also said that in such cases, conducting a lottery is not unusual, noting that the City of Boston does it "frequently."

Sheets said last month that the new fire recruits will replace retirees who have left the department over the past two years. The mayor has also said that because the recruits would be filling already vacant positions as opposed to new ones, the municipal budget will not be impacted by their presence on the city payroll.

The mayor added that he wants to hire the recruits as soon as possible. Gorman said he hopes the new firefighters will be able to begin working for the department by "late December or the first of the year."

Council Would Require POW-MIA Flags Display On City Buildings

The City Council Monday night passed a resolution which would make it mandatory for all municipal buildings in the city to display the POW-MIA (prisoner of war-missing in action) flag.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who introduced the resolution, said it is important that those who were lost while fighting for this country be remembered and that the flag should be put atop all city buildings next to the United States flag.

The resolution will now be sent to Mayor James Sheets. If the mayor approves, he will have to sign an executive order that will ensure that the matter is enforced.

$12,825 Approved For Adams Shore Playground

The Adams Shore Tot Lot received an appropriation of $12,825 from the City Council Monday night.

The money for the playground area at the corner of Albatross and Herring Roads came from the city's federally-funded UDAG (Urban Development Action Grant) Monarch III account.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson said the funds will go toward landscaping and equipment for the site, which was begun by the Adams Shore Community Association.

He added that the association has opened four "tot lots" in the city--in Adams Shore, Merrymount, Germantown and Baker Beach--and a fifth is slated to open in Houghs Neck in the spring.

A CASE OF (YAWN) ARTHRITIS

The searing joint pain an deformity brought on by some types of arthritis are so closely identified with the disease that many people are unaware of another serious symptom: fatigue. Unpredictable fatigue, strong enough to be debilitating, is actually a common problem among arthritis sufferers. The exact reason is unknown, although it may be due to the combination of aches and pains, poor sleep, and inactivity that often goes along with arthritis. To fight back against fatigue, the Arthritis Foundation recommends regular exercise (after getting your doctor's go-ahead), conserving your energy for the most important activities, and using energy-saving aids whenever possible.

P.S. Extreme fatigue is most common in the types of arthritis that causes inflammation.

If you suffer from chronic illness like arthritis, you know the importance of simplifying your life, and of paying careful attention to the body's signals. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. On Political Endorsements

Do political endorsements sway voters? Some think so .Some don't.

Those who don't think so believe endorsements may help certain interested areas or groups but don't mean that much to the average voter.

But those who believe in them feel that an endorsement can sometimes make the difference—especially in a close election.

And with a small voter turnout (32 percent) forecast by City Clerk Joseph Shea for the Nov. 2 city election, there could be some close contests.

Anyway, there are two group endorsements so far in this election. How valuable the endorsements are remains to be seen.

It would be interesting to check the endorsements with the election results Nov. 2. It might indicate the political weight that endorsements actually carry.

The two endorsements are from the Norfolk County Central Labor Council and Q-Vote, the political action arm of the Quincy Education Association.

The Central Labor Council is endorsing (in the order of their listing):

Theodore DeCristofaro (unopposed) Ward 2 councillor; Lawrence Chretien, Ward 3 and Thomas Fabrizio, Ward 4.

JoAnn Bragg, Ronald Mariano and Sean Barry for School Committee.

Q-Vote is limiting its endorsement to the School Committee race only and is backing Ron Mariano, JoAnn Bragg and Toni Kabilian.

Check them against the Nov. 2 results.

IF THIS YEAR'S candidates were equipped with pedometers, we would say that young Charles McIntyre would walk off with the mileage honors.

McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre and making his first run for public office as a city councillor at-large candidate, has been knocking on doors all over town for weeks. He's usually accompanied by his bride, Sheila, pretty, personable and a definite political asset.

Speaking of Sheila, that's got to be McIntyre's favorite name. In addition to his wife Sheila, there is his mother, Sheila, the city's former First Lady, and his sister, Sheila.

Must get a little confusing at times.

ROBERT LA FLEUR, Quincy's veterans graves registration officer is this year's selection as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of The Year."

LaFleur will be honored at a 9:30 a.m. breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue , Quincy Point, Sunday, Nov. 14.

LaFleur is being recognized for "his many years of devoted service and untiring efforts in helping the community, the elderly, the children and the veterans."

THREE POLITICAL FUNDRAISERS are on tap as this year's election campaign comes down the homestretch.

A campaign rally for Michael D'Amico, candidate for the Ward 4 City Council seat, will be held tonight (Thursday) from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Morrisette Legion Post, Miller St., West Quincy.

A pre-election fundraiser for Sean Barry, candidate for Quincy School Committee will be held Wednesday, Oct. 27 from 7 to 10 p.m. at Coddington's. Presidents Place, Quincy Sq.

A campaign rally-masquerade party for Mary Collins, candidate for City Councillor at-large will be held Friday, Oct. 29 from 7 to 11 p.m. at Presidents Golf Course, West Squantum St., North Quincy.

Former School Administrator Clarifies Position On Beechwood Reopening

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am sorry that Mrs. Powers misunderstood my testimony at the Beechwood Knoll School public hearing held on October 6 at City Hall.

My comments made at this hearing supported the superintendent's recommendation to reopen the building in September, 1994 as a public school building. I was the first speaker at the meeting to support the reopening at the school. A copy of my letter is on record with the Quincy School Committee.

(An excerpt from Mr. Moynihan's letter states:

"As a retired school business administrator of the Quincy School system. I would like to commend your administration and the Quincy School Committee on finally taking positive action to utilize both the Beechwood Knoll and Myles Standish School for school purposes.

"It is time to put the Beechwood Knoll back in service for the use of Quincy elementary students.")

As a taxpayer and a person still interested in quality education in the city, the School Committee's vote to reopen the school was a very positive move.

It's Time We All Woke Up

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As our boys die in Somalia, we are told that they "died in defense of their country." That is a lie. Their country is not Somalia, nor was it Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon, Panama Grenada or Kuwait.

In each of these conflicts political leaders in this country made a conscious decision to intervene half way around the world not in defense of America, but to accustom us to the idea of World Government. Our military should be used only to defend us from attack, not to be the vanguard of a U.N. police force in matters which don't concern us.

When we hear any leader, whether it be Clinton or Bush or anyone else, talk about the New World Order, or international obligations or multicultural action with our allies, we are hearing from people whose chief loyalty is not to America but to advancing the cause of world government. These leaders have been deliberately sacrificing our men and America's national sovereignty on the altar of the New World Order.

We must purge our nation of these leaders and elect men who place America first. Otherwise we will be weakened and drained as a nation, absorbed into a socialist world system, without even realizing how or when it happened.

What will be next? Bosnia? It's time we all woke up.

Death And Dying Workshop At Quincy Hospital Oct. 26

The South Shore Chapter of Uniting People in Pain Society (UPPS) will meet Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Quincy Hospital conference room A, 114 Whitwell St.

Samuel Goldfarb, Ph.D. of Boston will present a free workshop on death and dying.

All prospective participants, friends and family members are welcome. The workshop is free; donations are accepted.

For more information, contact UPPS Director Barbara Appel-Siddall at 471-1865 between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

UPPS is a non-profit, self-help group designed to teach people who live with chronic pain to reduce the impact pain has on their working and personal lives.

The group meets at Quincy Hospital every other Tuesday evening.

Police To Distribute Drug 'Hot Spot Cards'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Police Department will distribute "hot spot cards" to residents in an effort to increase the efficiency of its ongoing war against drugs.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said that poor economic times have made a stronger response to drug activities in Quincy and throughout the state a necessity.

"With the economy downfalling, it's brought in certain elements of society," said Mullen. "It's not everybody, but it's making some neighborhoods a nightmare."

The department's "hot spot card" allows residents to anonymously report suspected drug activities in the city. The card asks for seven pieces of data: names of suspects, locations of suspected drug activities, dates, times, descriptions, motor vehicle registration and any additional information.

FRANCIS MULLEN

The 10,000 cards will be distributed at neighborhood meetings and other group situations, the chief said.

Mullen said suspected drug activities may also be reported by calling the Quincy Police Hot Line at 328-4527. Callers are not asked to identify themselves.

The chief's comments followed last week's decision by Quincy officials to start enforcing a state law that requires landlords to evict tenants arrested on drug felony charges when drugs are found at the rental property. The eviction procedure does not wait for a conviction.

Mullen said that under the law, landlords would be notified by Quincy District Court when tenants have been arrested and police have completed an analysis of drugs seized on the premises. The landlords would then have 30 days to issue an eviction notice, after which their property would be impounded, he added.

Mullen said the law has been enforced in Boston for about the past year, but only now is receiving attention in Quincy and other area communities.

He added that the decision to enforce the law in Quincy was reached after he met with Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the City Council Public Safety Committee; Quincy District Court Judge Charles Black, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch and Lt. John McDonough, head of the Quincy Police Department's drug unit.

"It was a very constructive meeting," said Mullen. "It's (enforcing the law) just another thing we're implementing, another tie-in to our crime prevention program."

Mayor James Sheets has said that while he feels that the evictions could solve a significant problem, he wanted to confer with city landlords before giving a final endorsement to the plan.

Mullen said that although the law has existed for a long time, it hasn't really been necessary to enforce it until now.

"We haven't had the problems (in the past) that we have today," he said.

Despite Closings, Woolworth's To Remain Open In Quincy

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite a major downsizing begun last year, Woolworth Corp. will not be closing its 45-year-old store located at 1543 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

The company announced last week that it will be closing 400 of its approximately 800 U.S. variety stores, as well as 330 other company outlets in the United States and 240 in Canada. Fifteen of 29 Woolworth's stores in Massachusetts will be closed, officials said.

Mayor James Sheets said he is "thrilled" the Quincy store, which opened in 1948, was spared. He added, however, that it was something he almost expected.

"I don't think it was by accident," said Sheets. "I've kept in constant contact with the F.W. Woolworth headquarters in New York and kept them apprised of changes being made in the store and that it should be kept open. I've sent correspondence to them five to seven times.

"It's a good store, with a good volume of business. My hope is, as we change the character of the (Quincy) downtown, we'll still have Woolworth's to be looked upon as one of the historical Woolworth's stores."

Sheets said he would like to see the gold letters and red background restored on the front sign of the store and added that Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, would likely give a grant to the effort.

Don Russell, manager of the Hancock Street store, said he felt Woolworth's in Quincy Center was spared "because we're doing well thanks to the people of Quincy shopping here." He also said employees "were all relieved" when they heard the store would remain open but had little comment beyond that.

"On a deal like this, I'm really not supposed to talk," he said.

Mayor Lists 58 City Owned Vehicles

Oct. 21-27 1926 67 Years Ago

Mayor Perley E. Barbour reported that the city of Quincy owns 58 motor vehicles, the oldest being a 1917 Maccar three and a half ton truck used by the Sanitation Division to haul rubbish and ashes.

The Police Department listed four vehicles:

A 1919 Cadillac patrol wagon, valued at $4,200, used for patrolling purposes and driven by the department chauffeur.

A 1925 Reo patrol wagon, valued at $1,300, used nights and in bad weather as a patrol wagon, also as relief when the the Cadillac is being repaired. It is also employed in putting up signs, street painting and carting liquor.

A 1923 Buick Coupe, valued at $1,947.85, used by the police chief.

A 1926 Chandler, valued at $860, used nights as a motor patrol and days by lieutenant inspectors on investigations.

The Health Department also had a 1926 Ford coupe for use specifically by nurses to call on contagious disease cases/

MERRYMOUNT ZOO

City Councillor Welcome G. Young, noting that a herd of 300 buffalo was being rounded up in the west for sportsmen to shoot, proposed that some of the animals be obtained to start a zoo in Merrymount Park.

"I understand the city of Boston has made application for some of the buffalo to be placed in the zoo at Franklin Park," he said.

"Now we have a large tract of land at Merrymount Park and it would be a great asset to this park if we could have a zoo on a small scale here in Quincy."

Halloween Program At Historical Society Oct. 26

The Quincy Historical Society will present "Quincy Remembers: South Shore Spookiness" Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 2:45 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St.

The event will blend some new and some familiar elements into the popular afternoon "Quincy Remembers" series.

The program of stories for Halloween, appropriately set in the 1872 Gothic-revival Academy building, will feature facts, legends and fictions of mystery and the supernatural from around the Quincy and South Shore area. Stories will be appropriate for adults and children. Adults are welcome on their own, but are also invited to bring children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews. Each adult may bring as many children as he or she wishes. All children must have an adult present who will be responsible for them. Cider and other refreshments will be served.

'Phantom' A Wonderful Experience For Entire Family

('Phantom," presented by Eastern Nazarene College's Communication Arts department, Thursday, Oct. 21 at 7 p.m., Friday, Oct. 22 at 7 p.m. and Saturday, Oct. 23 at 6 and 9 p.m. For more information, call 773-6350 ext 262.)

By JENNIFER DOMINICCI

Musicians tune their instruments, the crowd murmurs in expectation as the lights come up and the action begins in Eastern Nazarene College's recent opening night production of "Phantom."

Not to be confused with Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Phantom of the Opera," "Phantom" is a collaboration by Tony Award winners Arthur Kopit and Maury Yeston.

The tragic story of the Phantom, the universal figure of pathos, drawn to a woman he loves but denied the right to be completely with her because of his grotesque face, touches a chord within everyone.

Strong vocal performances were given by all, especially Chris Porter who played the role of the Phantom. Noelle Howard, playing the role of Christine, gave an equally rich performance. Their duet in scene 8 of Act I, "Home," was very powerful.

Phillipe, David Scott, joined Christine in a charming, lighthearted number "Who Could Have Ever Dreamed Up You."

Phantom has some hidden surprises, such as "Erik's Story," in which the orchestra played beautifully.

The ensemble was full of strong performances, as well as exciting company numbers.

Carla Walche and Veronica Haas, in the roles of Belladora and Carlotta, were extremely entertaining.

Lighting, costumes, and music were used effectively to set and change moods in the production, thanks to Michael Ballard and Tracy Fannin.

"Phantom" will continue tonight (Thursday) through Saturday in the Cove Fine Arts Center. Performances are scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight and Friday and 6 and 9 p.m. on Saturday.

A beautifully orchestrated production, "Phantom" is a wonderful experience for the entire family.

Antiques, Flea Market At Christ Church Oct. 30

An Antiques and Flea Market will be held Saturday, Oct. 30 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Christ Church Parish Hall, 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Benefit Concert Saturday At Fort Square Church

A benefit concert featuring soprano Barbara Morash and pianist Martha Hayes will be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Fort Square Presbyterian Church, 16 Pleasant St., Quincy.

Morash has sung throughout New England and New York in leading operatic roles, concert work and musical theater. She also maintains a private teaching practice in voice, piano and acting.

Hayes, who studied music at Cornell College and Indiana University, is minister of music at Fort Square Presbyterian Church. In addition to teaching and directing, she has performed in benefit concerts on both the North and South Shores.

The program will feature both classical and contemporary music, with works ranging from Faure, Strauss, Goounod and Debussy to Leonard Bernstein and selections from "Les Miserables."

Admission is free. A free will offering will be taken to benefit Habitat for Humanity, an organization that assists homeowners with building and rehabilitating their homes.

'Love Letters' Opens Friday At NQHS

"Love Letters" by A.R. Gurney, a production by Quincy Community Theatre and J.M. Productions, will open Friday, Oct. 22 at North Quincy High School.

Other performances are scheduled Saturday, Oct. 23 and Sunday, Oct. 24.

Friday's show will star Suzanne Bates and Tom Bergeron from WBZ-TV 4. Saturday's performance will feature Sara Edwards of WHDH-TV 7 and Mat Schaffer from Kiss 108.

Proceeds will be used to help support the construction of a cultural center in Quincy.

Tickets are $15 for adults and $13 for senior citizens in advance and $20 at the door the evening of the performance.

Tickets are available at all Thomas Crane Public Libraries or by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to J.M. Productions, P.O. Box 2313, Quincy, MA 02269-2313. Call 786-SHOW for more information.

Halloween Storytelling At Crane Library Oct. 26

"Goose Bumps," a Halloween storytelling program, will be held Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square.

The program is suitable for children age five and older for adults.

According to storyteller Jennifer Smith there is more ancient celebration behind the Halloween parade of costumes and candy treats so popular today. Long ago Halloween was a night when witches and goblins were loose and ghosts returned to their favorite haunts.

Smith will bring her audience back to that ancient celebration with traditional songs, stories and superstitions.

The Halloween program is supported, in part, by the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency, the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

3 Banks Awarded $100,000 In State Funds

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Three local banks have been awarded the Treasurer's Award for Community Reinvestment, an honor totalling $100,000 in state monies, in recognition of their community support and contributions.

State Treasurer Joseph Malone presented giant-sized, ceremonial "checks" representing the actual awards to representatives from Quincy Savings Bank, South Shore Bank and Holbrook Cooperative Bank last Friday in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall.

The Treasurer's Award recognizes state and federally-chartered banks which receive a community reinvestment rating of "outstanding" under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977. Each bank receiving the award is given the option of accepting a deposit of up to $100,000 in state funds which may be held for as long as the bank retains its "outstanding" rating.

Banks receive one of four possible ratings: "outstanding," "satisfactory," "needs improvement" or "substantial noncompliance." Ratings for federal banks are issued by one of four federal supervisory agencies: the Comptroller of the Currency, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Office of Thrift Supervision. The state's Division of Banks issues ratings for state-chartered banks.

Malone said at the awards ceremony that banks are sometimes treated like offensive linemen on a football team.

"If you do your job well, no one notices, but if you get caught holding or let someone get by you, the cameras zoom in," he said.

Malone added that many banks set "shining examples" by their community involvement and "it's prudent to invest state funds into banks."

Representatives from the three banks credited their communities for their consistent success.

"We're very serious about the time and money we spend on our community," said Charles Simpson Jr., president and CEO of Quincy Savings Bank, who added his bank is proud to be involved with such groups as The Salvation Army, Work Inc. and Quincy Neighborhood Housing.

"A bank is only as successful as the community it in," said South Shore Bank Vice President and Regional Manager Warren Mann. "We're very proud to accept this award."

"It's not often that banks get good publicity," said Barry Whittaker, Holbrook Cooperative president and CEO, "and there are banks who do care. If we don't take care of our community, we're not going to survive."

Malone, saying he had "watched from a distance" with admiration the Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort for flood victims of the Midwest this past summer, then introduced Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor praised Quincy Savings Bank and South Shore Bank for being "very much involved" with Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, and noted both had sponsored such projects as old-fashioned colonial lights for the city's downtown.

"It's very important that banks become involved in what we're doing," he said.

City Council President Charles Phelan agreed.

"And this is something they've done over the years, not just this year," he said.

State Rep. Stephen Tobin, who said he was also speaking for State Reps. Michael Bellotti and Ronald Mariano and State Sen. Michael Morrissey, said banks are an extremely important part of any community because they represent three of people's biggest concerns--the economy, education and home ownership--by providing business, student and home ownership loans.

State Rep. Michael Sullivan of Holbrook had strong words of praise for Holbrook Cooperative.

"Over the years, the bank has remained very responsive to community needs and has always provided very personal service to its customers," he said.

Malone closed the awards ceremony by congratulating the banks on behalf of "all the people whose lives you've helped change" and said he looked forward to coming back to Quincy for another ceremony next year.

When Roy and Amy Johnson told us what they were paying to live in their three-room apartment, it didn't make sense to us either. So we took a closer look at Roy and Amy, their payment history, and their life. We saw things in Roy and Amy that other banks failed to see in their numbers. And now Roy and Amy see a future with a home. Their own home. Paying less on their monthly mortgage payment than they used to pay on their rent. If you're like Roy and Amy and would like to see yourself in a home of your own, stop by your local Fleet branch office today. Because sometimes owning your own home isn't a matter of having more money, but spending the money you do have a little differently.

IRS Non-Filer Day At North Quincy High School Oct. 29

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is sponsoring a Non-Filer Day at North Quincy High School Oct. 29, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

To receive assistance bring any W-2's, 1099's or other information needed to complete a return. For those who have delayed filing returns because they can't find their W-2's or 1099's, the IRS can help you reconstruct the records.

Gerald R. Esposito, Boston IRS District Director said;

"We recognize there are many reasons why taxpayers have not filed. These reasons include procrastination and fear or inability to pay."

Individuals and businesses who voluntarily reenter the tax system, or enter for the first time, will find IRS eager to help them file the necessary tax returns, he said.

"IRS is not offering an amnesty program, you will receive penalties and interest unless you can prove reasonable cause. However, we will work out installment payments and offers in compromise to help nonfilers who cannot pay their liability in full," Esposito said.

Since last October, more than 155,000 people have called the IRS about filing prior year forms and another 58,000 individuals visited IRS offices to get information and assistance with their returns. Nearly 45 percent of those late filers who have sent in returns received refunds. The IRS reminds late filers that refunds must be claimed within three years from the original due date.

Fabrizio Asks Fire Chief To Reactivate Ladder 3

Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio has asked Fire Chief Thomas Gorman to begin planning to reactivate Ladder 3 at the West Quincy Fire station.

The department is in the process of filling 20 vacancies in the department and Fabrizio said he wants the ladder placed back in service as soon as the new recruits complete their training.

Currently the nearest ladder trucks serving Ward 4 are located at headquarters in Quincy Center and at the Wollaston station, Fabrizio noted in a letter to Gorman. "It would be unfair to ask the people of West and South Quincy to continue to depend on equipment from other sections of the city in times of emergency," Fabrizio said.

"Now that the new firefighters are about to come on board, our first priority must be to restore the cuts that were made during the austere times."

Fabrizio, who has been pushing to have the city ambulance contractor locate an ambulance in Ward 4, also stressed the importance of Ladder 3 in medical terms. "While the ladder truck is vital for firefighting, it can also be the difference between life and death in heart attack cases and major auto accidents.

"It disturbs me to have Ladder 3 sitting idle just a few yards away from serious accidents on the Expressway."

Fabrizio said the reactivation of Ladder 3 is separate from the purchase of a new engine to replace the aging Engine 5, also in West Quincy. The councillor pushed to include funding for the new apparatus in the recently approved capital outlay project. It is expected to arrive shortly.

"We cannot take the opinion that by merely purchasing a new fire engine we have somehow fully restored public safety in South and West Quincy," Fabrizio said. "While the people of South and West Quincy welcome the new engine, it is important that we have both an engine and a ladder here."

The fire department would not need to purchase a new ladder truck, as the former Ladder 3 is currently used only as a spare.

Quincy, North Participate In Racism Workshop

Representatives from North Quincy and Quincy High School recently participated in a WGBH-sponsored workshop which outlined plans to combat racism in their schools.

In all, 16 high schools represented by teams that included a principal, a parent, two teachers and three students took part in the workshop which as an outreach component of WGBH's national television special, The Issue Is Race, which aired last fall.

The television program, hosted by Phil Donahue, explored the underlying causes of racism, and looked at a variety of proposed solutions. The Combating Racism workshop picked up where the television program left off.

Participants engaged in group discussions on strategies to recognize and respond to prejudice and discrimination. They also designed specific action plans to implement in their schools.

The workshop calls for a three and six-month follow-up to gauge how well the team-designed plans are working.

McCarthy Visits NQHS Classroom

School Committee candidate Ronald McCarthy recently took part in Lawrence Maloney's Contemporary Issues class for seniors at North Quincy High School.

The class is part of the Social Studies Department at NQHS headed by Michael Hurley. Maloney, along with student teacher Nancy Gallagher of Eastern Nazarene College, and members of the class had an open forum with the candidate.

McCarthy spoke to the students on a variety of issues, including the formation of Parent Advisory Councils, overcrowded classrooms, disciplinary measures, and 12-month school sessions. McCarthy said he was interested in the opinions of the students about their years in the Quincy Public School System.

Students asked McCarthy his feelings about in-house suspensions, citing the contradiction of taking students out of classes as punishment for not having attended classes. McCarthy proposed handling disciplinary problems after school hours. He contends that this would be more incentive for students to avoid situations requiring disciplinary action.

Asked about his feelings on the much-debated issue of the "Yakoo," the NQHS mascot, McCarthy replied that he could see both sides of the issue but had not formulated an opinion yet.

McCarthy told students that he supports the idea of a 12-month school year with intermittent vacations. He feels that restructuring schools in this way would allow for greater cohesiveness in classroom instruction.

Students also asked about teacher accountability and removal of teachers who were not fulfilling expectations. McCarthy agreed that teachers should be held accountable for their performances.

City Wins Another Round In Gun Range Dispute

Quincy has won another victory in its dispute with the City of Boston over the Moon Island gun range expansion project.

Superior Court Judge Richard Stearns issued a preliminary injunction last Thursday halting work on the new firing range.

Boston police and the U.S. Drug Enforcement agency want to build three outdoor ranges and an indoor range on the island.

Stearns, however, did say that Boston will be allowed to reconstruct the original range, which was razed in preparation for the new facility.

Mayor James Sheets has called the judge's ruling "a major victory." Sheets added that a hearing will be held on a permanent injunction but at press time the date had not yet been set.

Moon Island belongs to Boston but lies within Quincy city limits. Quincy and Boston police and DEA agents have used the range for years for firearms training.

Squantum residents have opposed the proposed expansion, saying increased traffic and noise and other problems could result. In addition, city officials and residents say Boston has defied a Sept. 16 cease and desist order from the Quincy Conservation Commission which ordered that all work at the site be stopped. That defiance, officials say, led to Quincy's attaining a temporary restraining order from the court Oct. 8 which prevented Boston from doing any further work until last Thursday's hearing.

In addition, Sheets has said the city may file a lawsuit seeking financial damages for alleged pollution of Boston Harbor by storm water drainoff from the defoliated construction site.

Depression Screening At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital's psychiatric service, Quincy Heights Center for Emotional Health, will provide a free depression screening program on Wednesday, Oct. 27.

The program includes half hour lectures at 1, 4 and 6 p.m. in the hospital's Education Center. Following each lecture, participants will complete a confidential self-evaluation questionnaire and individually discuss the results with a mental health professional.

Speakers will include Stanley Alexander, PhD, program director of Quincy Heights partial hospitalization program; and Lee Chartock, M.D. and David Shumway, M.D., attending psychiatrists at Quincy Heights.

The program is not designed to diagnose depression, but rather to help people identify the signs and symptoms of depression. Depression affects people of all ages and is a treatable disease.

For more information, call the Quincy Hospital public relations department at 773-6100 ext. 4016.

Public service and community involvement are not new to Joe LaRaia. His work in promoting the Arts in Quincy demonstrates his commitment and dedication in serving the citizens of our community.

Joe authorized the construction of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre when he was Mayor. The first program to utilize this facility was the Summerfest Concert Program, a series of free summer concerts that Joe originated and directs, recently completing his 11th consecutive season. Quite an achievement when you consider the concerts are free, do not involve taxpayer expense, over $75,000 raised in contributions and countless volunteers who have given their precious time.

QCA Candidates' Night Oct. 27

The Quincy Citizens Association will sponsor a Candidates' Night Rally Wednesday, Oct. 27 at 8 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

All candidates on Quincy's Nov. 2 ballot have been invited to join with their supporters in the parade of candidates. Incumbents and challengers will have an opportunity to speak to the voters, and in turn the voters will have a chance to question candidates running for mayor, councillor-at-large, ward councillor and school committee.

QCA members are urged to attend. Other interested voters are welcome. Refreshments will be served.

The Quincy Citizens Association was organized in 1967 to fight property revaluation and tax increases with the motto "Voice of the People."

Barry Sites Involvement, Experience At Coffee Hour

School Committee candidate Sean Barry, speaking before a gathering of voters at a recent coffee hour, stressed his experience and involvement in education issues as major elements of his campaign.

"My experience as a teacher, as an administrator, and as a community activist concerned about public education, strengthens my candidacy," Barry said. "I've been working hard since 1991, when I ran unsuccessfully for the School Committee, to earn the support of the voters of Quincy."

Barry has spent two years building a coalition of educators, parents and concerned citizens, while speaking out on issues such as tougher attendance policies, realistic budgets, and safer schools.

"This election will determine who makes the decisions facing our school system for the next four years," said Barry. "Voters will look for candidates with the broad-based experience and record of involvement in our community."

Among the issues facing the Quincy School Committee in the coming years are the Education Reform Acts, safety concerns, budget matter and overcrowding, Barry noted. He said the Education Reform Act will require an enormous amount of scrutiny as it changes radically the way school systems are managed.

Barry has taken a hardline approach to safety issues, stressing the need for a positive learning environment. He said his "zero tolerance" approach to students who physically threaten safety, or who carry weapons to school, is gaining support.

"As a teacher, and as a student, I don't want to turn my back on a student who is carrying a weapon or disrupting a class," he said. "As a School Committee member, I'll show them I'm serious as I show them the door."

Barry said he believes a School Committee member should balance the concerns of parents and employees with the realities of the taxpayers of Quincy.

"We cannot forget the people who foot the bill," he said.

Barry also downplayed the party affiliation of School Committee candidates.

"It is a small factor in this race," he said. "As a lifelong Democrat, I differ fundamentally with my two Republican opponents, and voters will see this. More importantly, voters look for the ties to community and a level of commitment I believe I possess."

A lifelong Quincy resident, Barry is director of public affairs at Quincy College, where he also works as an adjunct instructor. He holds a B.A. from Ohio Wesleyan University and an M.A. from American University. He currently is completing an M.A. at the University of Massachusetts at Boston as a night student and plans to enter a Ph.D. program next year.

Barry said he counts on community group meetings, candidate nights and coffee hours to meet voters. He lost his right leg to cancer last year and walks with crutches, preventing him from getting door-to-door.

"I've done some doorknocking, but my pace is much slower," he said.

Bicycle Auction To Benefit Emergency Management Nov. 13

Quincy Emergency Management will host an auction of used bicycles Saturday, Nov. 13 starting at 11 a.m. at the Quincy Emergency Management garage behind the Quincy Police station, Sea St.

The public may view bicycles from 10 to 11 a.m. All bicycles are in various conditions, from virtually new to old and in need of some repairs.

All proceeds will be used to purchase radio equipment for use by Quincy Emergency Management volunteers. All sales are by cash and all sales are final.

Anyone wishing to donate a bicycle should bring it to the garage by 10 a.m. Those wishing to make a donation to the cause without buying a bicycle may do so.

Explosive Presidents Face Weymouth Test

By TOM SULLIVAN

After dropping a 7-6 heartbreaker to Old Colony League power Plymouth, the Quincy football team rebounded with its most explosive attack in some time to roll over Matignon, 36-6, last Saturday before a handful of fans at foggy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents (3-2) face a tough assignment this Friday when they seek their fourth win at Weymouth (3-2) at 7 p.m. at Weymouth's Legion Field.

The Wildcats, under new coach Russ Tortora, who succeeded veteran coach Joe Kelley, have defeated Silver Lake, Taunton and North Quincy, while losing to Walthan and Barnstable. Last year Quincy upset Weymouth, 28-13.

Sam Brown, a junior playing his first year of football, had a banner day for Quincy against Matignon as he rushed for 173 yards and three touchdowns, as well as throwing a touchdown pass.

With its running game working to perfection, Quincy stuck to the ground as Mike Bartlett completed two of four passes, both to sophomore Terry Bowman, for 49 yards and Brown hit Tom Malvesti with a 31-yard scoring pass.

"We proved again today we can run the ball, so we didn't bother going to the air," said coach Jack Raymer. "Brown did a terrific job and Mike Elder and Bowman also played well. We have a well-balanced attack and a couldn't be more pleased with the way we played today.

"Offensively we moved the ball well and the credit has to go to offensive coaches Bob Noble and Mark Giordani. And the defense has been outstanding all year. We have given up only one touchdown in each of our last three games. The credit must go to defensive coach Bob Keuther.

"I had a chance to use a lot of our younger players today and they performed well. Ed Anderson had a 38-yard run to set up the final touchdown by sophomore quarterback Jeff Russell and Greg Santoro ran well and kicked the extra point."

On defense he lauded the play of Kevin Carey, Elder, Jason Bennett, John Green, Bill Dunn, Ashley Davis, Jon Gangi, Steve Provost and Jim Dowling.

Matignon received the opening kickoff and was forced to punt. On the first play from scrimmage Quincy fumbled and Matignon recovered on the Quincy 20. Here the Presidents held fast and took over on the 20.

Quincy then clicked off five first downs and Brown capped the drive by scoring from the 10. Elder kicked the first of his three extra points.

Matignon drove from its own 12 for its only sustained drive and early in the second quarter Mike Hayes passed to Mike Albiani for the score. The drive was sparked by a 30-yard run by Sean Griffen. A pass for the two-point conversion was incomplete.

Quincy drove from its 19 following the kickoff, with a 32-yard run by Elder the big play and Brown scored his second TD from the four. Bartlett rushed for the two-point conversion and Quincy led, 15-6.

A blocked punt set up Quincy's third touchdown as the Presidents took over on the Matignon 31. Brown caught Matignon by surprise and passed to Malvesti, who made a fine catch in the corner of the end zone. Elder kicked his second extra point and the Presidents led, 22-6, at halftime.

Starting the second half Malvesti returned the opening kickoff 43 yards to the Matignon 47.

There was no scoring in the third quarter but Quincy began a drive from its own 20 and the drive was capped by Brown's seven-yard touchdown run early in the fourth quarter. Elder kicked his third extra point.

Later Anderson's 38-yard run put Quincy on the varsity five from where Russell scored for his first varsity points. Santoro kicked the extra point, his first varsity.

Quincy's game at Barnstable, scheduled for Friday night, Nov. 12, has been moved to Saturday the 13th at 1:30 p.m.

Quincy Freshmen Roll By Matignon, 28-6

By KERRY BYRNE

The Quincy High freshman football team notched its first victory last week, pounding the Matignon Warriors, 28-6. The frosh squad is now 1-4.

Four different players scored for the Presidents as they put together their best offensive performance of the season. Kevin Connolly and Andrew Bryne did the bulk of the ground work for Quincy as ran at will over and around the Warriors defense. Opening holes for them were linemen Paul Dailey, Sean Thomas, Chris Geary, Chris McDonough, Jeremy Wray, Jason Lumaghini and Don McCarthy.

Connolly put the young Presidents up, 6-0, in the second quarter with a 30-yard run around the left end. Quarterback Mark Glynn tossed a pass to Will Fitzpatrick for the two-point conversion.

Later in the second, short yardage man Tim Santos brought the ball in from two yards out through a massive hole in Matignon's defensive line. This time Glynn found tight end Scott Pyer for another two-point conversion. The Presidents took the 16-0 lead into half-time.

In the third quarter, Glynn completed a 35-yard touchdown pass to receiver Joe Mariano, who made a spectacular diving catch in the end zone with a defender on his back. In the fourth, Quincy ended its scoring for the day in a very big way. Two hundred and twenty-pound offensive tackle Paul Dailey lined up in the backfield and took the hand off straight up the middle for a two-yard touchdown run. Conversion attempts on both second half touchdowns failed.

The Quincy defense, lead by hard hitting linebackers Santos, Anthony Lallis and Jason Little, who stuffed the Matignon offense throughout the game. Also playing tough on defense were linemen Tom McIntyre, Sean Thurston, John Ryan and Chuck Feeley. In the defensive backfield Brad Smith, Mike Russo, Joe Marini and Saeed Sadaat smothered the Warrior receivers.

Matignon scored their only touchdown with less than a minute to play in the game.

The Quincy frosh play Weymouth today (Thursday) at 3:30 at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Raiders Hope To Regroup Against Bosco

By TOM SULLIVAN

After playing good ball in its first four games despite a deceiving 1-3 record, the North Quincy football team turned in one of its poorest performances in some time as it self destructed in losing to Weymouth, 13-8, last Friday night.

The Raiders will try to regroup when it hosts winless Don Bosco Friday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Don Bosco, a 21-0 loser to North a year ago, is 0-5 with losses to Boston English, Rockland, Matignon, Bp. Feehan and undefeated old Rochester.

Everything North did seemed to go wrong against Weymouth as it had several fumbles, including a fumbled punt, had passes intercepted and was penalized nine times for 92 yards.

"We just didn't play well at all and there was no excuse for it," said North coach Ken McPhee. "We'd get a good drive going and we would fumble. We'd get another drive going and then throw an interception. And we had far too many penalties, which killed several promising drives. I'm not sure there were any bright spots at all. I'm not a happy camper right now."

One bright spot was the running of Shawn Nee, who had missed two games with an injury. He returned and carried 12 times for 87 yards.

Quarterback Dan Duncan completed his first three passes for 27 yards, but finished with just 10 of 25 for 117 yards, including North's only touchdown.

North gained 268 yards overall, including 151 on the ground. Weymouth stuck mainly to the ground, gaining 191 yards, while Ross Shannon completed only four passes for 27 yards, including a TD pass. North had 10 first downs and Weymouth eight.

The Wildcats (3-2) took advantage of a Raider turnover early when Jim Gagnon intercepted a pass, putting them on their own 32. Again North gave up the big play as Steve Kerrissey (24 carries for 156 yards) ran 44 yards to the Raider 24. Shannon hit Matt Gill in the right corner of the end zone with a five-yard pass and Mike Taylor kicked the extra point.

Weymouth's second score also came as a result of a North turnover as the Raiders fumbled a punt early in the third quarter. Big plays again hurt North as Kerrissey broke loose for 30 yards and scored the second touchdown from the 12.

North's only touchdown came with 1:12 left in the game when Duncan capped a 12-play, 77-yard drive with a 16-yard scoring pass to George Wirtz, who has been one of the Raiders' top pass receivers. Big Brian Raftery added the two-point conversion.

Wirtz turned in another fine performance with five receptions for 48 yards.

"We came into the game hoping to take away Raftery's offense from the tight end position," said first-year Weymouth coach Ross Tortora.

"We managed to do that by putting both a defensive end (Ryan Casey) and a linebacker (Gill) on him. Offensively, we are a ball-control team and Kerrissey has had a rhythm going lately. We just give him the ball and let him run with it."

Youth Football

Panthers Blank Elks, Apaches Edge Manets

The Quincy Point Panthers and the North Quincy Apaches continued their winning ways Sunday in the Quincy Youth Football League as the Panthers blanked the West Quincy Elks, 12-0, and the Apaches edged the Houghs Neck Manets, 8-6.

Both teams are 4-1.

This Sunday the Panthers face the Apaches at 6 p.m. and the Elks meet the Manets at 7:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

After a scoreless first half, the Panthers got on the board on a touchdown by Steve Roberts.

The Panthers scored again at the start of the fourth quarter when Jonathan Brillo took a Carmen Lorenzano handoff and raced 25 yards for the score.

The Elks took to the air but Lorenzano picked off a pass to squelch the Elks' hopes of avoiding a shutout.

The Panthers were led defensively by Larry Antonellis.

The Apaches scored first against the Elks when quarterback Chris Bregoli threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Jim Finn. Manny Vasquez added the all-important two-point conversion which proved the difference in the game.

The Elks game back with a long drive capped by Kevin Cellucci's touchdown run. The extra point try failed.

Neither team could generate much offense in the second half until late in the game when the Manets completed several passes and had a fourth-and-two on the Apaches' 10 with less than a minute to play. The Apaches dug in and held, running out the clock.

Mike Sullivan, Jay Ford, William Tracey and Pat Egan played strong defense for the Apaches.

STEERING INTO TROUBLE

There are some car troubles that drivers can feel through their steering wheels. One such problem arises when the wheel goes stiff and will not turn easily. The first thing to do in a such cases is to look for any indication of something wrong on the dashboard. A warning light may show that the car has simply stalled. Beyond that, difficulty in turning the steering wheel may be caused by a power steering fluid leak or a broken belt or pump. In such cases, there should be no attempt to drive the car to a garage for professional inspection. A tow is usually required. An unrelated steering wheel problem involving the car pulling to either side while driving is likely to be an indication of the need for an allignment.

HINT: A steering wheel that shimmies usually indicates worn shocks or wheels that are out of balance.

Q-N Hall Of Fame Football Selections Oct. 25

Nominations for the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame have closed and the 1993 inductees will be selected next Monday at 7 p.m. at the Morrisette Legion Post.

As in the past, the Hall of Fame will elect one person from both Quincy and North Quincy High for the decades from the 1940s and before, the 1950s, 1960s, 1970s and 1980s. The election from each decade will be made by members from that decade.

Officers for 1994 will also be elected at the Monday meeting.

The annual induction banquet will be held Tuesday, Nov. 23 at 6 p.m. at Morrisette. Tickets are $25 each and can be purchased from Jerry Perfetuo, 285 Common St., Quincy (471-4269).

The Hall of Fame annually awards several scholarships to deserving athletes at both high schools. Last year it created the William P. Degan Jr. Memorial Scholarship.

Cross Country

North Girls On Roll

The North Quincy girls' cross country team continued on a roll as it blanked Taunton. 15-42, to improve to 4-1.

North is tied with Falmouth and Weymouth for first place in the Old Colony League.

Erin Duggan and Laura Blaikie finished in a virtual tie over the Taunton 2.9 mile course with Mel Gaziano third, Katie McNamara fourth and Kelly Duggan fifth, rounding out the scoring.

Also running well for North were Ursula Feurtado and Diane Kane-McGunigle.

The North girls hosted Weymouth Tuesday with the winner being assured of a share of the league title.

The North boys continue to have their troubles and lost to Taunton, 20-35.

Eric Torvi finished second, Steve Cannon sixth, Terrance Roche seventh, Brian O'Donnell ninth and Warren Fong 10th.

Swimming

Fagerlund Sets New North School Record

The North Quincy girls' swim team had a 5-3 record after defeating Sandwich, 102 1/2-81 1/2, and Duxbury, 123-63.

Capt. Justine Fagerlund broke the school record for the 200 freestyle against Duxbury with a time of 1:59.42. She also held the former record. She has qualified for both the South Shore sectionals and the state championships.

Also qualifying for the state championships are Sarah Radell in the 200 and 500 freestyle, freshman Marianne Blaikie in the 100 and 200 freestyle, and Capt. Zoe Bohl in diving. Alyssa Cobban has qualified in diving for the South sectionals.

North will swim at Middleboro Friday and the next home meet will be next Monday against Stoughton at 3:30 p.m. at the Lincoln-Hancock School pool.

Ken Coleman To Be Honored By Jimmy Fund

New England will pay tribute to Ken Coleman, a North Quincy High School graduate, when he is honored by the Jimmy Fund Wednesday, Nov. 10 at The Sheraton Boston Hotel.

Coleman's 40 year career as a major league sports broadcaster has earned him the accolades, respect and friendship of countless New Englanders young and old. For 20 years "The Voice of Summer" carried Red Sox games to millions of New England families.

That the evening will be a major benefit for The Jimmy Fund is particularly appropriate as Coleman's association with New England's own great charity has been a vital factor in The Jimmy Fund's success. He is a lifetime member of The Jimmy Fund Board of Trustees.

Celebrities attending the dinner to honor Coleman will include Hall of Famer Bobby Doerr; a former All Star player and later Yankee broadcaster Bill White, now President of The National League; the "Little Professor" Dom DiMaggio; Mel Parnell the third winningest pitcher in Red Sox history and the best lefthander in the club's 93 years; Maine sports columnist Bud Leavitt, who is Ted Williams' buddy in the Nissan commercials, Johnny Pesky and Jess Cain.

Other figures are expected from Coleman's career with the Red Sox, Cleveland Browns, Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds and college football with Ohio State and Harvard.

Tickets are $75 payable to the Jimmy Fund. Call Jeff Hubbard at The Jimmy Fund (617) 632-3300.

Hockey

St. Moritz Devils Win 3 Games

The St. Moritz Devils' Squirt Minor hockey team won three games during the past week.

The Devils topped the BC Eagles, 6-2, with Nick Sarno and John Segalla scoring two goals apiece and Joe Carr and Corey Rosenfield one each. Tom Hughes, Mike Aylward, Steve Segalla and Mark Mulhern had assists. Goalie Kevin Regan was outstanding and Kevin Lynch and Brett Wood were standouts on defense.

Obi Aduba and Brandon Ray scored for the Eagles.

St. Moritz went to Enfield, Conn. and defeated the Springfield Junior Olympics, 4-1.

Rosenfield had two goals and Hughes and Aylward one apiece. Steve Segalla had two assists and Sean Sullivan, John Segalla and Robbie Johnson one each. Regan and defenseman Pat Balaconis were outstanding.

The Devils also defeated Worcester, 5-3, in their home opener at UMass/Boston.

Rosenfield had a hat trick and Aylward the other two goals. Regan had another strong game in goal.

Squirt A's Win, 8-2

Quincy's Squirt A hockey team, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, opened its season with an 8-2 victory over Belmont.

Council To Turn Down Proposal For Supermarket

surrounding area."

DeCristofaro said he would side with Phelan and Ayers. "I haven't spoken with Bruce or Chuck, but if they feel they (Shaws) haven't addressed all the problems up there, then I'll certainly go along with what those two councillors think best."

Chretien said he too would vote against the project, declining to comment further.

Shaws' proposed to construct a new supermarket at the site of the old Boston Gear Works at 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St. on the Wollaston-North Quincy line.

The proposal called for an an 86,000-square foot store at the site, including 56,000 square feet for the new market and 30,000 square feet for another user such as a women's clothing store, drug store or another retail store.

If approved, a portion of the 160,000-square-foot Boston Gear facility would have been demolished to make way for the project.

The proposal has been met with more neighborhood opposition than support. At a public hearing Oct. 4, 19 residents spoke in opposition while 36 were recorded in opposition. A petition signed by 500 North Quincy and Wollaston residents against the project was presented to the council Oct. 4.

At the same hearing, 14 people spoke in favor and another 10 were recorded in support.

Opponents feared the store would generate increased traffic, pollution, noise and existing drainage problems as well as impact local small businesses. Those potential detriments, they said, would outweigh any benefits from the store.

Among those voicing support for the project were representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and South Shore Building Trades. Supporters said the project would produce jobs, giving the local economy a boost.

Atty. Robert Fleming, who represents the applicant, could not be reached for comment.

according to the data. Asked about the use of alcohol in the 30 days prior to the survey conducted last spring, 59 percent reported no use at all. Of those who had used alcohol in the previous month, 17 percent reported using on one or two occasions; 9 percent reported use three to five times; and 13 percent reported using on six or more occasions.

Measures of "use in the last 30 days" is generally regarded as a better measure of current use patterns than measures of "life-time use" which may include high numbers of people who experiment once or twice with the substance.

"Any use by people under the legal drinking age is a concern," Finnegan said. "However, we need to compliment the almost 60 percent of our young people who apparently do not drink on a regular basis. This is a significant number of young people with whom to build our efforts."

Where youths drink is also an area of concern, Finnegan said. Over half of the youths who drank did so at a party or a friend's house.

"We know that a large amount of underage drinking takes place in unsupervised settings in people's own homes. The responsibility of the family and parents to provide appropriate supervision is vital," Finnegan said.

Almost a quarter of those youths who drank did so in a car. "This is very disturbing," Finnegan said. "The presence of any drinking in an automobile only raises the likelihood of accidents while under the influence of alcohol. This is an area that we must continue to address."

One statistic considered surprising to survey conductors involved the number of youth who have used inhalants, most of whom seem to have experimented with these substances at an early age.

Only 10 percent of youth surveyed said they have used inhalants, but of those who have, half did so before the age of 12.

"We want to make sure that kids understand the dangers of these substances," Finnegan said. "We'll be looking at different strategies to address this problem."

In other areas, the survey showed Quincy youth are much less likely to carry weapon that those across the state. Depending on which statistics are used, state averages indicate between 16 and 22 percent of all high school students reported carrying weapons.

The Quincy survey indicated only 10 percent have ever carried a weapon, defined as a club, knife or gun. "We need to work for the day when no youth in the city feels it necessary to arm him or herself," Finnegan said.

"However, we are pleased that this issue seems to be less of a problem in Quincy than in other communities."

Reflecting national statistics on adolescents and suicide, a large number of Quincy youth indicated they have either considered or planned their own death, with girls twice as likely to have done this than boys. Twenty-five percent of girls have considered hurting themselves, compared with 13 percent of the boys.

Seventeen percent of the girls have either considered or planned their own suicides, while nine percent of the boys have done so.

"These statistics are always disturbing," Finnegan said. "We must all work to show our young people how precious each one of them is to us. This must happen in the home, in the community, in the schools--everywhere.

"We must take every opportunity to help them see their own self-worth, so that no young person will ever think that suicide is the only way out of their difficulties."

Finnegan emphasized the survey results are useful only if they are used to guide the development of effective programs to address the problem areas.

"This survey was conducted to help us formulate worthwhile responses to the challenges identified. Every segment of our community now has a responsibility to identify where they can contribute, and begin to make a difference."

underscore the fact that we need revenue and the state has neglected us," said Chretien. "On the other hand, the state doesn't want local competition and people are concerned about an overemphasis on gambling. I'm sensing a lot of discomfort among people, and I would be hesitant to move quickly on something like that."

Chretien added that he would also like to see a public hearing held on the matter before any vote is taken.

Cheney said Tuesday that he may eventually decide not to pursue the proposal and instead may try to develop an idea he has for a "sweepstakes" which could be held in the city two or three times a year.

He added that he, also, has heard from a number of residents who are in opposition the establishment of a Quincy lottery, and that is what has made him hesitant about immediately pursuing the lottery proposal.

"I have to rethink my position," said Chency. "I've been talking to a lot of people, and there's a lot more resistance from residents this time." Cheney has said in the past that in 1991, the majority of residents indicated that they were in favor of the proposal.

He said he feels a sweepstakes might be something that would be more agreeable with residents because it would be "more like a raffle."

In addition, Cheney indicated that after giving the lottery proposal some more thought, he is unsure if the state legislature actually would support it.

Cheney said that while he is not particularly fond of gambling, the moral decision regarding gambling has been made and the city should be allowed to pursue such avenues in order to raise much-needed revenues.

Girl Scouts Toy Drive For Quincy, Ill. Children Gets City Council Support

A toy drive which was recently started by Girl Scout Troop 4142 of St. Mary's Church in West Quincy has been given the support of the Quincy City Council.

The council Monday night passed a resolution stating it was in favor of the drive, which will benefit the children of Quincy, Ill. whose lives and homes were destroyed by massive flooding earlier this year. A relief effort begun in the city this past summer raised $23,000 and collected 100 tons of food for the flood victims.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who introduced the resolution, called the toy drive "courageous." He encouraged both his fellow councillors and residents throughout the city to be as generous as possible in contributing to the drive.

Cheney added after the meeting, however, that there are many similar local charities in the area and he hopes people will not forget about them if they donate to the Girl Scout drive.

For more information about the drive, call Troop Leader Barbara Gargan at 773-4994.

Cheney Amendment Would Allow Vertical Extensions On Dwellings

The City Council Ordinance Committee Monday night voted to support a proposal by Councillor Michael Cheney for an amendment to a city zoning ordinance which would allow vertical extensions to be placed on city dwellings.

Cheney said the proposal would allow residents to put dormers or square off roofs on their homes. He added that such changes were allowed until a recent land court ruling that vertical extensions are not allowed in a non-conforming area.

Cheney noted that the decision affects single dwelling homes zoned Residential "A" and multi-family homes zoned Residential "B" and "C." He said he hopes the City Council as a whole can vote on the issue by the end of the year.

Robert Cibotti III Begins College Early Through Trinity Program

Robert W. Cibbotti III of Quincy recently began his college career early through the Summer Challenge Program at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.

The program is designed to enhance student achievement in mathematics and science.

Cibbotti was one of 15 new students at Trinity who participated.

Summer Challenge Program participants were selected from among those entering students who expressed an interest in mathematics and science.

Deadline For Retrofitting Flood Program Extended

In response to requests from several people who missed the deadline for the FEMA and CDBG funded retrofitting program to prevent further damage in flood prone properties, the City of Quincy plans to request additional funds from FEMA.

In order to justify its request, the city will need to generate information about homes that could be assisted under the new funding. Those who own a home or commercial structure prone to repetitive flood damage, would need financial assistance to address the situation, and have not submitted an application to the city, should contact:

Office of Housing Rehabilitation, Department of Planning and Community Development, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169, telephone 376-1050 or 376-1355.

There is no guarantee that additional FEMA funds would be awarded to Quincy or that FEMA funds, if awarded, would be sufficient to assist all applicants.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Count your blessings," goes the old song.

At a time of economic uncertainty, tight job situations, and tightening of belts, it is indeed time to count our blessings, to realize the graciousness of God in each of our lives.

Many times we overlook such blessings as good health, the blessings of family and friends, the blessings of a good food, and many countless others. There are many hidden blessings, as well: strength through sickness, patience through suffering, peace in the midst of stress, forgiveness from guilt.

Yes, count your blessings. Who can really count them all? The words of the ancient Aaronic Benediction are for each one of us: "The Lord bless you and keep you; The Lord make his face shine upon you and be gracious to you; The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace." (Numbers 6;24-26).

RETROFITTING FLOOD PRONE HOMES IN QUINCY

In response to requests from several people who missed the deadline for our FEMA and CDBG funded retrofitting program to prevent further damage in flood prone properties, the City of Quincy plans to request additional funds from FEMA. In order to justify its request, the City will need to generate information about homes that could be assisted under this new funding. If you own a home or commercial structure that suffers from repetitive flood damage, would need financial assistance to address this situation, and have not submitted an application to the City, please contact the:

Office of Housing Rehabilitation
Department of Planning and Community Development
1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169
Tel. 376-1050 or 376-1355.

There is no guarantee that additional FEMA funds would be awarded to Quincy or that FEMA funds, if awarded, would be sufficient to assist all applicants.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who gives meaning to and shines light on my path so that I may reach my goals, you who gives me the divine grace to forgive and forget the evil done unto me and which is with me at every moment of my life. I want in this short dialogue to reassure you one more time that I do not ever want to be separated from you, no matter how grand the worldly possessions may be, my desire to be with you and my brothers in perpetual glory will not be lessened. (One should say this prayer 3 days in a row without mentioning the request, within 3 days the divine favor shall be granted, no matter how unobtainable it seemed) Publish this prayer as soon as your request is granted.

OH HOLY ST. JUDE, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depths of my heart and humbly beg you to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance and help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. (Say 3 Our Fathers, Hail Marys and Glorias. Publication must be promised.) St. Jude, pray for us and all who invoke your aid, Amen. (This Novena has never been known to fail.) I have had my request granted. (This Novena should be said on 9 consecutive days.) D.M. 10/21

That's how much of your money the MWRA has wasted on foolish spending, according to the State Auditor's report. That's more than $300 for every man, woman and child in Quincy. And, they've got a lot more spending to do.

They didn't waste your money all at once. A few million here, a few million there. They blew $13 million on a series of mishaps that started with a giant drill to bore the sewage outfall pipe into Massachusetts Bay. The drill didn't work, so it couldn't bore the hole -- and it also couldn't produce the crushed stone the MWRA needed. So, the MWRA bought crushed stone from a vendor for $6.8 million, then had the drill fixed, and then paid another $4.7 million to have the stone the drill did produce carted away. Sounds like Moe, Larry and Curley in the tunnel business, doesn't it? But wait -- there's more.

The legislature approved a $24 million appropriation in the state budget this year to provide ratepayers some relief, but no one mentioned that the MWRA had already wasted that money, and more. So, by the time the Legislature contributed 24 million of your tax dollars to the MWRA, the agency had already flushed 32 million of your rate dollars down the drain.

Charles McIntyre will fight hard to keep the heat on the MWRA to make sure that waste like this doesn't happen again. Ever.

Multi-Million Golf Course, Rec. Complex Plans Are Unveiled

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A plan to build a new multi-million dollar golf course and recreational complex at the site of the former landfill off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy was unveiled Tuesday by Mayor James Sheets and other city officials.

Sheets said that such a project at the site, which encompasses nearly 400 acres, has been "a long time in coming."

"That area is the last frontier in the City of Quincy," said Sheets. "It's a magnificent sight. We cannot allow a resource of this area to go unmapped."

Sheets said that an industrial development at the site would likely be "sporadic" and "unplanned," but the proposed project will improve the quality of life in the city and will make people want to move to Quincy in the future.

The mayor said that Quarry Hill Associates of Quincy, the company in charge of the project, has been working on the concept of the project "for the past four to six months." He added that plans for the site include a golf course, driving range, baseball, soccer and softball fields; a skating pond, and other amenities.

Sheets said the project will be completed at no cost to the city. The development will be "paid for privately" by Quarry Hill Associates, he said, and the company will also be permanent caretaker of the site by having control over the maintenance and operation of the golf course and other fields.

Sheets also noted that Quarry Hill Associates will purchase soil and other excavation material from the Third Harbor Tunnel "Big Dig" Project in Boston. The material would be used to contour the site. Exact topography of the area, especially the golf course, will be worked out at a later time.

The mayor said in all, the project will cost between $8 and $12 million.

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio called the proposal "extraordinary" and "the most exciting proposal the city has seen since I've been on the council."

"This is a golden opportunity, and I'm very proud to be part of it," said Fabrizio. He added that he was particularly pleased with the prospect of having an ice skating pond at the site "because then it becomes a 12-month-a-year recreation facility."

Peter O'Connell, one of the partners in Quarry Hill Associates, said that the project is "a unique window of opportunity" and added, "I'm very

32% Voter Turnout Seen

5 City Council, 3 School Seats At Stake Nov. 2

Five city council and three school committee seats will be at stake in the Quincy city election Tuesday, Nov. 2.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is predicting 32 percent voter turnout--the lightest for a city election in 36 years.

Shea is basing his forecast mainly on the fact that Mayor James Sheets for the second election in a row is running unopposed. He is the first mayor in the city's history to have twice gone unchallenged.

Only two other mayors, Thomas Burgin in 1940 and Francis McCauley in 1983 were re-elected without opposition--each once.

With no mayoral fight, the main focus in this year's election is for councillor-at-large, the Ward 4 council seat and the school committee race in which two of the three seats are vacant.

Councillors at-large Timothy P. Cahill, Michael T. Cheney and former Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia are seeking re-election.

They are challenged by Mary P. Collins, former school committeewoman and former Norfolk County commissioner, and Charles R. McIntyre, son of the late James R. McIntyre, making his first bid for public office.

This will be the first time the McIntyre name has been on a city election ballot since 1969. It will also mark the first time both the McIntyre and LaRaia names have been on the same ballot as opponents since 1965 when James McIntyre defeated LaRaia for mayor.

LaRaia, who lost a city council at-large bid two years ago, made it back to the council earlier this year when Patricia Toland gave up her seat to become assistant city clerk. LaRaia, who was runner-up in 1991, was elected by the city council to fill the Toland vacancy.

There are two ward council contests with the most action in Ward 4 where incumbent Thomas Fabrizio is challenged by 18-year-old Michael D'Amico who was waged a spirited campaign.

In Ward 3, incumbent Lawrence Chretien is opposed by school bus driver Robert Boussy who has not been very visible.

Running unopposed for council ward seats are Peter Kolson, Ward 1; Theodore P. DeCristofaro, Ward 2; Charles J. Phelan, Jr., Ward 5; and Bruce J. Ayers, Ward 6.

School Committeeman Ronald Mariano, who is also a state representative, is the only school committee member seeking re-election this year. Both Frank Santoro and Margaret (Peggy) King decided not to run.

Five candidates mainly have their eyes on two open seats. They are:

Sheets Will Seek $725,000 Budget Cut

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he plans to ask the City Council to reduce the city's FY94 budget by over $725,000.

Sheets said the line item being reduced is the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's sewer assessment. A recent state appropriation in excess of $20 million granted to the city has made the reduction possible, he said.

The savings will mean an average household of four family members will pay $15 a year less for the sewer charge, according to Sheets. The mayor said that this is the first time in city history the MWRA assessment has been reduced.

Sheets said because residents are billed quarterly for the sewer assessment, the savings will not kick in until Jan. 1. He said he plans to ask the City Council to reduce the budget at an upcoming meeting.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton confirmed Sheets' figures, saying that the average household of four will pay an annual sewer fee of $750, as opposed to $765, because of the state monies received by the city. He added that initially the MWRA had predicted that the average Quincy household would pay $790 for FY94, which began July 1, but the authority was able to make cuts in its budget which allowed the figure to drop to $765.

In FY93, the average annual sewer fee in the city was $705, Colton said.

The city's FY94 sewer assessment will drop from $13,498,073 to $12,773,848, a savings of $725,025, the commissioner said. Colton added that in FY93, the city paid $11,927,307 for the MWRA assessment.

Houghs Neck Council Honors Two Churches, Kay Powers

By RUTH WAINWRIGHT

Houghs Neck residents filled St. Thomas Aquinas Saturday night to honor Most Blessed Sacrament and the Houghs Neck Congregational Church for their 100 years of spiritual guidance to the community.

Former Mayor Francis McCauley introduced speakers who included Rev. William English of Most Blessed Sacrament Church, and Rev. Dr. Peter V. Corea, 47 years at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, and Rev. M. Alicia Corea, associate minister for 43 years and the first woman minister ordained in Quincy.

City Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson were present to make several surprise announcements. Checks for $5,000 each were presented by a representative from Modern Continental SAE American, in charge of construction at the Nut Island Sewage Plant. These were in recognition of the inconvenience of residents by company trucks and equipment.

Recipients were Jack Walsh of Great Hill, who will use the money for two community basketball community teams for boys and girls. The other was prepared to the Houghs Neck Community Council and accepted by Renee Stone, retiring president.

Cheney announced also that a room has been promised at the Atherton Hough School where a Houghs Neck Museum will be established for use of students and residents. Old pictures, newsletters and other memorabilia will be contributed by community residents, and a drive will be held later to fund the project. A video of Houghs Neck is planned for March, "350 Years of Houghs Neck History," to be presented at the Broad Meadows Middle School by Cheney.

(L. Wainwright photos)

HONORED--Rev. Peter V. Corea of Houghs Neck Congregational church and Fr. William English of Most Blessed Sacrament Church share a light moment during the tribute to 100 years of community service by both churches at the annual Awards Night of the Houghs Neck Community Council.

Mayor James Sheets spoke of the great character of Houghs Neck people." He also praised McCauley in securing funds for the new construction at Quincy City Hospital, traveling to Washington to work on the project while he was mayor.

Citations for the churches and Mrs. Powers, "Distinguished Senior Citizen, were presented by Sheets, Rep. Stephen Tobin, Peggy O'Connor from the Council on Aging, and the councillors.

The Honor Awards Night is held annually by the Houghs Neck Community Council.

Despite Strong Opposition

Supermarket Plans To Be Re-Submitted

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite strong opposition from local residents and the City Council, Shaw's Supermarkets Inc. plans to resubmit a plan for a new store at the site of the old Boston Gear Works sometime early next year.

Shaw's withdrew its proposal for a new supermarket at the site at a special meeting of the City Council Monday night. The council is the special permit granting authority regarding retail facilities in an industrial zone, and a majority of councillors indicated last week that they would vote against the proposal.

A new zoning ordinance last year changed the special granting authority from the Zoning Board of Appeals to the City Council, and the Shaw's proposal is the first to apply to that ordinance. Shaw's would have needed the support of 2/3 of the council--six of the nine councillors--for its proposal to win approval.

Although the majority of the council has expressed opposition, however, the developer of the project said that a new proposal will be submitted sometime early next year. Because the council voted unanimously to support the withdrawal--a majority council is needed to allow an applicant to withdraw--Shaw's may resubmit its proposal at any time.

"We're going to try for a revised plan," said Mark Dickinson, president of Dickinson Development Co. in Quincy. "We want to do a Shaw's Supermarket there, and that's what we're going to try to do. There are an awful lot of ugly uses for the site, such as an auto shop, truck terminal, or some kind of manufacturing plant, that the City Council would have no authority over."

Despite the fact that most residents at two public hearings and additional neighborhood meetings opposed the project, Dickinson said he still felt that the majority of the people in Wards 5 and 6 could be convinced of the benefits of the project. The site, located at 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St. on the Wollaston-North Quincy line, is divided between the two wards.

"I think the neighborhood is more than just a few streets and a few people," he said. He added that the revised plan he intends to submit will "not necessarily" be one for a smaller supermarket.

City Council President Charles Phelan, who represents Ward 5, said at Monday night's meeting that he would not support any similar proposals for the site in the future.

"I want to make it clear that I will not support this if it comes back in three months," said Phelan. "After having been involved with reviewing this the last few months, we came to the conclusion that a project of this size will not work at the site."

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who looked over the plan in detail with Phelan, agreed.

"We put a lot of work into it, and our intentions from the start were to give the community the opportunity to address this issue," said Ayers. "Everything that has come from the neighborhood (residents) has indicated that, basically, the size of the project is too big for the area."

Although councillors were in agreement over their opposition to the supermarket, there was some discussion on whether Shaw's should be allowed to withdraw the proposal. Councillor Joseph LaRaia said he felt the council would be sending a wrong message to residents if Shaw's were allowed to do so.

"I know some neighbors are concerned, and I've discussed it with a few individuals," said LaRaia. "I think we're sending a wrong message that this (proposal) is still alive."

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said at the meeting that a majority vote of the City Council is needed to allow an applicant to withdraw in such a situation. He also noted that even if the Shaw's proposal were voted on and defeated by the council, the company could return to the council in two years with a plan for the site that is "substantially changed" from its present one.

Other councillors said they had no problem with allowing Shaw's to withdraw.

"I've been on the council for 12 years, and this is not the first time we've done this (allowed an applicant to withdraw) as a courtesy," said Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, who made a motion to allow the withdrawal. "I'm sure the ward councillors (Phelan

GETTING RID OF THE GALLBLADDER

They typically start sometime after a meal, often arriving with severe abdominal pain, bloating, nausea and vomiting. Gallbladder attacks can be excruciating, and without treatment, they are likely to get worse. Two types of surgical procedures are commonly prescribed for removing diseased gallbladders cholec stectomy, or removal of the gallbladder through a single abdominal incision, has long been a proven, successful treatment. For the laparoscopic cholecystectomy, a tiny telescope (laparoscope) and other surgical instruments are inserted into the abdomen, and the gallbladder is removed through a small incision in the navel.

The laparoscope has revolutionized many types of surgery, ranging from gallbladder removal to treatment of endometriosis. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

The Council Presidency

Next year's City Council presidency may be riding on next week's election results.

The three contenders for the gavel are Michael Cheney, Tim Cahill and Larry Chretien.

CAHILL

CHENEY

CHRETIEN

At the present time, Cheney reportedly is the closest to nailing down the honor with an apparent four-vote bloc. Five votes are needed in the nine-member council.

Cheney reportedly has Ted DeCristofaro, Peter Kolson and Tom Fabrizio in his corner. And Cheney himself makes four.

Cahill and Chretien reportedly two votes each at this time with Joseph LaRaia Cahill's second vote and present Council president Charles Phelan Chretien's No. 2 vote.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, in this scenario is once again the swing vote.

AYERS

If he lines up with Cheney, — providing he holds his other votes — Cheney would become council president.

This is Cheney's third shot at the presidency. He lost out to Patricia Toland who is now assistant city clerk, four years ago and to Phelan.

Two years ago Ayers was the key vote for Phelan.

Cheney reportedly started putting votes together six months ago learning from both Toland and Phelan who got off to early behind-the-scene starts in their successful bids.

But the whole picture could change with next week's election results.

DeCristofaro, Kolson and Ayers will positively be in that picture as they are now because all three are running unopposed.

But Cheney, Cahill and LaRaia are being challenged by Mary Collins and Charles McIntyre.

If Collins and/or McIntyre are elected next week it could turn the council presidency picture upside down.

Fabrizio has to get by Michael D'Amico in Ward 4 and Chretien by Robert Boussy in Ward 3. If one didn't, that could change the picture, too.

You might see some new campaigning for the council presidency election night as the returns come in.

THE COUNCIL PRESIDENCY has long been considered a springboard to the mayor's office and Cheney, Cahill and Chretien would like to spring there.

But the presidency is no sure ticket to get there.

A number of council presidents have gone on to become mayor but not always directly. Some were elected two or more years after serving as council president.

Council presidents who went on to become mayor in the past half-century include Charles Ross, Thomas Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets.

But you don't have to be a council president to become mayor.

Two recent mayors were never council president: Walter Hannon and Frank McCauley.

Recent council presidents who did not become mayor include George Burke, Vincent Smyth, John Quinn, Leo Kelly and John Lydon. None of them ever ran for mayor. Burke opted to successfully run for district attorney.

Although it is no guarantee being Council President will make you mayor, it does help. The presidency is the second most powerful city political office—second only to the mayor. The council president names the council committee chairman and members, runs and controls the council meetings, and is more often sought after by the press to be quoted on issues. And as head of the City Council, he has more opportunity to take issue with the incumbent mayor on various important matters if he chooses to do so.

Who will be the next council president? Will he be the next mayor?

One of the answers may be there next Tuesday night.

SPEAKING OF MAYORS and election nights, Frank McCauley does an excellent job as analyst on Continental Cablevision's Ch. 3 election nights.

McCAULEY

McCauley, who is also a history buff, knows his city and its politics. As early returns come in, he's usually right on target giving viewers a preview of what to expect that night.

Ed Fiddler, who heads up Continental's community televisions and his volunteers do a good job on all community events and particularly shine on election nights.

Quincy is fortunate to have a cablesystem like Continental. It is superior to and more than cable outlets in many other communities.

But, hey gang, don't let candidate interviews get in the way of the returns as they come in.

Halloween Safety Tips

Police Chief Francis E. Mullen offers the following safety precautions to motorists, parents and homeowners to ensure a happy and safe Halloween for the children and residents of Quincy.

Motorists are advised to exercise caution on Halloween, Sunday, Oct. 31. Children will be "trick or treating," wearing costumes with masks, and crossing streets as they go throughout the community.

Parents should go over these safety rules with their children before they leave the house.

•Cross only at corners.

•Never cross between parked cars.

•If there is no sidewalk, walk facing the oncoming traffic.

•Remove masks before crossing streets.

Parents should follow these tips to further insure the enjoyment of Halloween:

•Make sure children are dressed in light-colored clothes; short enough to prevent tripping. (Reflectors and/or reflective material would be added safety measures.)

•Make sure children can see well through face masks, if worn.

•Makeup is preferable to face masks as it does not hinder vision.

•Accompany young children.

•Stay within the boundaries of your immediate neighborhood and visit only the homes you know.

•Watch for traffic.

•Only accept and give wrapped or packaged candy.

Residents should remove all obstacles from their steps and leave on outside lights which will help prevent youngsters from falling.

Action Speaks Louder Than Words

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently, the Area Director of Metro South-state Department of Mental Health, Barbara Leadholm, wrote a letter to the editor printed in The Patriot Ledger on Sept. 30. It was in response to that recent violent attack and rape of a 76-year-old resident of the Clement O'Brien Towers. As someone who has worked in both direct-care and support services for the state Dept. of Mental Health in Metro Boston since 1972, I agree with her position up to a point. None of us should make unsubstantiated quantum leaps blaming the mentally ill who live at the housing complex for a crime yet without a suspect.

However, I disapprove of Leadholm's attempt at reframing the public policy issue at stake here. She says those recovering from mental illness ought to be able to live in a community among people of all ages and backgrounds. Personally, I think that's a good idea but what of the right of the elderly to live in a community setting of their own choosing? Don't the elderly have a right to living in senior housing? Or has that right been abrogated? Leadholm, also, states "...with proper community-based supports in place such as those at the Clement O'Brien Towers" but she doesn't go on to detail any of those "community-based supports."

She further states the "need to educate the community about mental illness has never been greater," but again, what about educating the DMH and all their bureaucrats about the needs of older Americans? Here is the problem. When government and DMH appointees pit two groups of folks both in need of housing, neither group is served. Sadly, a gulf is created between two groups who should be allied with each other against government inaction.

I have little use for Leadholm's apparent knee-jerk reaction as printed in The Patriot Ledger. No one, hopefully, will buy her guilt trip. The mentally ill are not the enemy. The elderly are not the enemy. Both of them are victims of a housing shortage. If government was doing a better job, affordable housing wouldn't be such a scarce commodity. I am not pandering to the elderly in my stated position and I would condemn any person or local official who I viewed as fostering hysteria but that's not the case here.

Apparent self-serving expressions of shock over the incident the place took at Clement O'Brien Towers are not enough. Perhaps the state Department of Mental Health in Metro South does understand the the feelings of the elderly but perhaps they don't. Education is a two-way street. Has the area director, himself, gone into these public housing units for the elderly and talked with there folks over the changes taking place with the many new laws and regulations concerning the disabled? Or has she dumped this problem on local officials at city and town halls within the Metro South Region?

Hopefully, the state Department of Mental Health which tries to respond to the misunderstanding and stigma attached to those suffering a mental illness would also show just a little empathy for other groups in society also very much in need of many of the same things as the mentally and physically disabled.

Is the housing shortage for the mentally ill a public policy issue to be rectified by the elderly population? I believe that the Deinstitutionalization, a process begun in the 70s to move patients out of institutions and into the community, looks better on paper than in real life. Many times there is inadequate community-based housing and supports waiting for them.

If state officials were doing their jobs right, there would be enough public housing units to go around for all. But it is easier for folks up on Beacon Hill at the State House to hand the problem of adequate housing for the elderly and disabled to local officials for figuring out. It's called dumping and the state under the Weld Administration seems to have penchant for doing so.

Action speaks louder than words and it is time for the state Department of Public Health to stop whining and become part of the solution for a change.

FR Shipyard Workers Reach New Agreement

Oct. 28-Nov. 3
1956
37 Years Ago

The Bethlehem Steel Co. and the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America reached agreement on a new contract covering some 15,000 workers in the company's East Coast shipyards, including 5,100 at Fore River.

The wage section of the agreement provided for raises of nine to 22 cents an hour the first year and seven to 10 cents the second and third years for workers who are currently making $1.71 to $2.27 an hour and some specialists making more.

Other improvements under the agreement included four hours call-in pay instead of two, one more paid holiday (Feb. 22) making seven in all, changes in the vacation plan plus better pension and insurance plans and elimination of "in between pay rates."

Meanwhile, the Fore River management filed suit in Suffolk Superior Court for a temporary injunction to restrict picketing by 300 members of the draftsmen union, who were striking for a new contract. Their picket line had halted production at the yard.

And Donald Edmonston was reelected president of the Shipbuilding Workers Local 5 with 1,560 votes to 1,350 for his opponent, Stanley Kyller of the pipe shop. Edmonston also was reelected to the local's negotiations committee.

SCHOOL OVERSPENDING

Purchasing Agent Joseph A.E. Erickson, told the City Council he can prove that the School Department "is going to spend a lot of unnecessary money" for equipment for the new Broad Meadows Junior High School. The cost is already $30,000 over estimate he said.

City Councillor Thomas S. Burgin assailed an item in the Broad Meadows contract that called for some $5,000 in travel expenses for the architects to fly back and forth between Boston and Chicago. The city had already received two bills for $250 each.

QSO Fall Concert At First Parish Nov. 5

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, in cooperation with the National Park Service, Adams National Historic Site, will perform its Fall Concert Friday, Nov. 5 at 8 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A number of Quincy residents are in the orchestra. Valerie Densmore plays oboe, Tim Van Dam is on trombone and Janette Blackburn, Bobby Williamson, Andy Walsh, Christine Cotter and Eleanor Nelson play in the violin section.

The program, entitled "Colors of Music," will celebrate the 40th season of the orchestra. Program notes will emphasize the influence of music on the Adams Family, particularly during their diplomatic tours in Europe. John Adams, second President of the United States, spent 10 years abroad while his son and sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams spent 16 years in Europe.

Music will include works by Gretry, Beethoven, Handel, Cimerosa and Vivaldi. Steve Wright, a member of the orchestra, will perform a Bassoon Concerto by Vivaldi and a 140-voice chorus from Eastern Nazarene College and North Quincy High School will sing choruses from Handel's "Messiah."

Ann Danis, associate professor of music at the University of Rhode Island, is music director and conductor of the QSO. During the 1989-90 season she was a guest conductor of the Cape Cod Symphony. She is also music director of the newly-formed Ocean State Chamber Orchestra.

Tickets are $10, $8 for seniors and students. A reception will follow the concert in the parish hall of the church. Tickets are available at United First Parish Church, Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington St., Quincy Center and Sullivan's Corner, 716 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Registration for the conference is $3 in advance, $4 at the door. Limited child care is available on a pre-registered basis for toilet-trained children through age 6 years. Information and registration forms are available by calling Impact Quincy at 472-6027.

Parents, service providers, and educators will focus on the needs of children from birth to age nine.

The conference will begin with a panel discussion on "The Community's Role in Providing a Healthy Environment for Young Children." Featured panelists will be Mayor James Sheets, School Supt. Gene Creedon. Missy Greeley, director of corporate affairs for Stop & Shop Companies: Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane: and Harry Schulman, director of South Shore Mental Health.

Following the panel discussion, conference participants will chose two of 11 workshops to attend. Workshop topics include Love and Limits: Positive Approaches to Discipline: Stress Management for Parents of Young Children; The Value of Play; and How to Select Child Care.

The conference will conclude with a luncheon and awards presentation. Participants may bring their own lunch, or reserve a box lunch for $5 at registration.

Special appreciation awards will be presented to Michelle Lydon, who led the drive to restore the Collins Rest-a-While playground, and Glenn Gibbons, a five-year-old who designed the conference logo.

JAMES LOCKHEAD

BFDS Speaker Stresses Workplace Skills At NQHS

James Lockhead of Boston Financial Data Services was a recent guest speaker at a 12th grade Contemporary Issues class at North Quincy High School.

Lockhead, a member of the Speaker's Bureau for the partnership between BFDS, NQHS and State Street Bank, discussed skills and education required in the workplace. The CI class, taught by Lawrence Maloney and student teacher Douglas Calais, is part of the Social Studies Department.

Some of the skills Lockhead mentioned as being beneficial, if not essential, were those as basic as answering the phone and as advanced as being computer literate. Having good English and math skills, as well as self-confidence, are also important, he said.

"At my company, with some thousands of applicants a year and only a few hundred new employees hired each year, competition is tough," said Lockhead. "Although most of the new hiring involves entry level positions, basic skills are always helpful in landing a job."

Library Materials Available To Homebound Residents

The Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Council on Aging are sponsoring a project that will bring materials to homebound city residents.

The project, "Outreach on Wheels," will provide books, including large print, audio cassettes, videos, compact discs, and magazines on request from the main library in Quincy Square. Delivery from the library to the patron will be made by the Council on Aging. Pick-up of materials will be arranged by the patron with the council.

To receive a registration card and more information, call 376-1301 ext. 303 or TDD 376-0669, Monday through Friday between 9 and 11 a.m. or 2 and 4 p.m.

'Active Parenting' Program At Beechwood Center

Beechwood Community Life Center, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston, is sponsoring "Active Parenting,' a six week video-based program for parents of children ages 2-12.

The program, which began this week, is being held Mondays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Topics include: The Active Parent, Understanding Your Child, Instilling Courage, Developing Responsibility, Winning Cooperation and The Cooperative Family in Action. Group leader will be parent counselor Joanne Cooney.

The program is supported by Impact Quincy and there is no charge to Quincy parents.

Donations are requested from non-Quincy residents.

To make reservations or for more information, call 471-5712.

Beechwood Community Life Center Launches New Infant Care Program

Beechwood Community Life Center, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston, recently added a program of infant care to its child care offerings.

Infants 8 weeks to 15 months are cared for by Beechwood's experienced teachers in a small group with ample attention to each individual baby's needs. The program will provide an intimate, nurturing environment where care is based on individual developmental levels.

"More and more families are finding it necessary for both parents to work, and there is a real need in the community for infant care," said Kathy DeCecco, director of Beechwood's Pre-School. "Our professionally trained teachers really develop a partnership with parents in caring for their child."

Beechwood's Child Care Program is a year-round, full day program for children through kindergarten for families who need day care outside of the home. Carefully designed programing focuses on children's individual needs and challlenges them in developmentally appropriate ways.

Beechwood Community Life Center is a city-wide multi-purpose community center, offering educational, social, and cultural enrichment programs for people of all ages.

For more information, call Beechwood at 471-5712.

South Shore YMCA Volunteer Recognition Celebration Nov. 4

The South Shore YMCA's annual volunteer recognition event, called "Celebration '93," will be held Thursday, Nov. 4 at 6 p.m. at Thayer Academy in Braintree.

Tickets are $15 each, and are on sale at the YMCA., 79 Coddington St., Quincy, or can be ordered by phone by calling 479-8500 ext. 102.

The event includes a reception, volunteer recognition program and a musical performance by local high school students.

Several individuals will be honored, through presentation of the Youth of the Year Award, the Hodgkinson Award, and induction into the YMCA's Hall of Fame.

"We are hoping for a good turnout at Celebration '93, and expect at least 200 of our members, participants, donors, staff, volunteers and friends to help us recognize the work our Y does in the community," said YMCA General Executive Director Ralph Yohe.

"It's also an opportunity for us to thank the community for their support all year long, and for our members and friends to share fellowship and camaraderie."

For more information, call June Blair at the YMCA, 479-8500 ext. 109.

Bragg Supports Beechwood Reopening

JoAnn Bragg, a candidate for Quincy School Committee, says she is pleased with the committee's decision to reopen the Beechwood Knoll School as kindergarten center.

"There are tremendous benefits to the return of the building to the school system," Bragg said. "The opening will alleviate the current overcrowding at the Wollaston, Park and Montclair elementary schools."

Bragg said the biggest advantage will be a further return to the neighborhood school concept. "The return of Beechwood, initially as a kindergarten center but eventually as a full elementary school, will strengthen the neighborhood school concept.

"Neighborhood schools are the cornerstone of public education," she said.

Recalling her early school involvement, "when the Beechwood Knoll and other schools closed, students were redistricted, staff were let go and the neighborhood school faded. I bought my home in 1980, just around the corner from the Massachusetts Fields school.

"My eldest daughter attended kindergarten there. The following year the school closed. I still live in the same home. I now have three children and each has attended a different elementary school," Bragg said.

"Slowly, we are returning to neighborhood schools. The Wollaston School was reopened, a major addition to the Bernazzani School is nearly complete, an early childhood center will soon open in the Lincoln-Hancock School District, and Parker School will be getting a gymnasium.

"The return of the Beechwood Knoll brings another school into the system, strengthening neighborhood schools throughout the city."

Bragg said she is concerned about the fate of the Beechwood Community Life Center, which must leave the school building. "The Beechwood Life Center provides a great service to the entire city.

"It would be a real tragedy not to find a suitable replacement home. The Myles Standish School is a possibility for a new home, but requires considerable repair and upgrading. Hopefully, the city can assist with the required funding."

"We have a tremendous opportunity to strengthen our schools, as well as support a terrific community life center program. Both are essential to the fabric of Quincy and should not be forced to compete with each other," Bragg said.

ON BOARD WITH YOUR CAR'S COMPUTER

In order to maintain most cars built during the last ten years, it is necessary to have working knowledge of computer system devices. In some cars, there are as many as four or five separate on-board computers that control the functioning of most all of the car's major systems. Everything from the emissions system to anti-lock braking systems utilize sensors to gather information, which is processed by microcomputers, which issues commands to actuators. If all this terminology seems more appropriate to jets and space vehicles than to cars, it is not. Today's auto technician must be able to analyze a computer printout as well as a worn spark plug.

HINT: The computerized systems found in most of today's cars offer the advantage of not going out of calibration and not wearing out as fast as mechanical parts.

People generally put a great deal of money into their cars. With the initial purchase price, insurance, tune-ups and repairs, you can end up with a sizable investment. Doesn't it make sense to make sure you have your car serviced and repaired by the best technicians around? You and your car deserve the very best and here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO you'll get it. Stop by 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) and get acquainted. We invite your inquiries about our ALL-DATA computer system that keeps us updated on all manufacturers changes, etc. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Wollaston Boy To Conduct City-Wide Food Drive Saturday

A city-wide food drive to benefit a local food pantry will be conducted Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon by Christian Oster, an 11-year-old boy from Wollaston.

Christian ran a successful food drive this summer in the Wollaston area after learning how summer and early autumn are difficult periods for food banks to help clients. He said he expanded his drive to the entire city because of the upcoming holidays.

Volunteers are needed to collect food in their neighborhoods as well as work at the drop off point at the Wollaston Congregational Church, corner of Lincoln and Winthrop Aves.

Anyone interested in helping or needing food picked up should call Christian at 471-3121. Donations of non-perishable items as well as paper products, personal items such as toothpaste and razors, may be left at the Wollaston Congregational Church on Saturday.

Gift certificates to supermarkets are also welcome. Checks should be made payable to the Pantry Shelf.

Why do some banks only give home equity loans to people who DON'T really need them?

Don't worry. It doesn't make sense to us, either. That's why we've developed a home equity loan program that's a little easier, for people who may not otherwise qualify. We take a more flexible look at your job and payment histories. We offer terms from 1 to 15 years with payments as low as $50 a month. And there's no appraisal necessary on amounts up to $15,000. So if you're looking for a loan between $5,000 and $25,000, and don't know if you'd qualify for a home equity loan at other banks, talk to us at Fleet. Stop by your local branch office today.

Kabilian Cites School Involvement At Rally

Toni Kabilian, candidate for Quincy School Committee, recently held a pre-election rally with an estimated 100 friends, supporters and city officials attending.

Kabilian compared her involvement in Quincy Public Schools to the well-known children's book "The Little Engine That Could."

"The little engine started at the bottom of the hill saying, 'I think I can, I think I can,' and halfway up the hill it changed to 'I know I can, I know I can,'" she said.

"Thirteen years ago when I began my involvement with Quincy public schools, I said, 'I think I can, I think I can,' but today, more than a decade later, because of my experience and dedication, I can say without a doubt, 'I know I can!'"

Kabilian cited her experience and involvement on the Advisory Councils of four different schools. She noted that she has been appointed by three different school superintendents to several School Committee task forces, including the Long Range Study, Foreign Language, Transportation and Substance Abuse Task Forces.

She is presently working with staff members under a grant for Accelerated Schools at the Sterling Middle School, one of five schools nationwide to obtain the grant.

Kabilian noted she has spoken out on the issues as past president of the Citywide Parents Council. The council represents all schools in the city.

Among those issues, she said, are school closings, expired occupancy permits, layoffs, budget cuts, and weapons and violence in the schools. She credited her ability as a consensus builder in bringing about a unified position regarding the middle school foreign language program.

Kabilian noted she has recently been endorsed by Q-VOTE, the political action arm of the Quincy Education Association.

Kabilian is seeking one of three seats on the School Committee in the Nov. 2 election.

Realtor Institute Program Nov. 3-4

The Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors will co-sponsor module 101 of the Realtor Institute (GRI) program with the Massachusetts Association of Realtors on Nov. 3-4 at the Lantana, 43 Scanlon Drive, Randolph.

The program will be held from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The course, which is open to all realtors, but geared to those licensed from one to four years, includes 15 hours of real estate training. Students who attend the GRI program will benefit from a comprehensive curriculum which will include instruction on advertising, creative financing, closing techniques and successful methods for obtaining listings and qualifying the buyer.

The two-day GRI 101 course is one of six modules which constitute the Realtor Institute program. Participants must successfully complete the entire six module program or the equivalent course work and pass an examination administered at the conclusion of each class, in order to earn the nationally-recognized Graduate Realtor Institute (GRI) designation. Students have five years from the completion of the first course to finish the remaining segments of the GRI program.

The registration fee for the GRI 101 module is $165 if received by pre-registration deadline, Oct. 26. Tuition is $175 for those who register less than one week prior to the course. To receive a GRI course application or to register by VISA or Mastercard, contact the Massachusetts Association of Realtors at (617) 890-3700.

Mariano Announces $256,099 Grant For Health Programs

Rep. Ron Mariano announces Quincy will receive $256,099 in grants as its share of the Health Protection Grant Program.

A port of the recent increase in cigarette taxes approved by the voters will fund the program. The state Department of Education will distribute the grants which total $27 million state-wide.

"These monies will go a long way towards educating our young people on the risks of cigarette smoking and other health related issues," Mariano said.

The monies will also help local communities fund existing health services and programs and will initiate conflict resolution and mediation programs.

"The most important resource this nation has is its children and its future is directly tied to their education. This is another small step we can take to preserve our children's health and welfare," Mariano said.

Quincy Center Letter Carriers Endorse LaRaia

Quincy Center letter carriers of the National Association of Letter Carriers have endorsed Councillor-at-Large Joseph LaRaia for re-election.

The endorsement follows a recent change in the federal law that allows post office employees to endorse candidates for office throughout the country. The law still restricts federal employees from running for office.

The endorsement locally is one of the first in the country since the changes in the law commonly known as the Hatch Act.

You have elected and re-elected Joe LaRaia to represent you in several capacities in city government. That experience has equipped Joe to render mature judgement, offer practical solutions and voice progressive ideas.

His accomplishments as mayor have had a major impact on Quincy's changing scene:

• The new City Hall. North Quincy High School. Manet Health Center, Atlantic Community Center, the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre.

• His independent, tell-it-like-it-is stance on the City Council has given the public full awareness on major issues when others have preferred to remain silent.

Experience, that makes a difference!

Christmas Festival Posters Due Nov. 12

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee announces that Nov. 12 is the deadline for completion and collection of posters for its annual poster contest.

The contest, held in conjunction with the city's public, private and parochial schools, is for students in Grades 1-5. This year's contest theme is "What Christmas Means to Me."

Rules are as follows:

Each poster must include the student's name, phone number, grade, school and teacher. The information must be written on the back of the poster or an attached I.D. card. Posters must be handed in to teachers Friday, Nov. 12.

The committee will collect the posters from the main office of each school Monday, Nov. 15.

Prizes include $100, $75 and $50 savings bonds for first, second and third places. Two sets of winners will be chosen: one representing Grades 1-3 and one for Grades 4-5. There will also be an "honorable mention" category which will not include a cash prize.

Awards will be presented during the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony Friday, Nov. 26 in front of United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Winning posters will be displayed throughout Quincy Center during the holiday season. The posters become the property of the committee and will not be returned to the schools until January.

The committee's next meeting will be Wednesday, Oct. 27 at 7 p.m. at The Patriot Ledger, 400 Crown Colony Drive.

For more information on the contest or other committee activities call Gloria Noble at 472-5613 or Mary Blood at 578-6198 or 328-8649.

QUINCY HEALTH DEPARTMENT'S Environmental Sanitarian Cynthia DeCristofaro illustrates potential home hazards with a miniature model home at the recent Quincy College Environmental Fair. Among the hazards pointed out are radon, gas, carbon monoxide from furnaces, indoor pollution and lead paint. The department urges residents to use caution around raccoons due to the rabies outbreak in the Quincy-Milton area and advises homeowners that they may nest in chimneys.

MWRA'S PROJECT COORDINATOR for school education Meg Tabacsko displays the progression of tap water (left) through the sewer system, its treatment and discharge (right) at the recent Quincy College Environmental Fair. According to the MWRA, the treated water that will be discharged from the 9 and 1/2-mile outfall pipe now under construction will be nearly clear and will pose no environmental hazard to fishing banks.

Quincy Historical Society Anniversary Auction Nov. 9

The Quincy Historical Society will hold an auction Tuesday, Nov. 9 as one of the events in celebration of its 100th anniversary.

The event will be held at the Quincy Neighborhood Club with a silent auction from 6:30 to 8 p.m. followed by a live auction.

Tickets are $25 per person and checks should be made payable to The Quincy Historical Society.

The committee is soliciting items to be auctioned and will pick them up from those donating.

Those wishing to donate may contact General Chairman Mark Bertmen at 773-3636 and Tom Galvin at 328-3300 or Edward Fitzgerald at 773-1144. Donated items may also be brought directly to the Historical Society at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Farmers' Market Closes For Season Friday

The Quincy Farmers' Market at the Hancock Municipal Parking Lot on Revere Rd. will close for the season Friday, Oct. 29.

Pumpkins and other fall vegetables are in season. Among the produce available are winter squash, including butternut, buttercup, acorn, hubbard, and sweet dumpling. Other home grown vegetables in season are cabbage, broccoli, turnip, onions and several varieties of potatoes, such as Yukon Gold, Kennebeck, Superior and Red bliss.

Many of these winter vegetables store well in a cool dark place into February and March.

There are approximately six growers serving customers this month at the Quincy Farmers' Market, including Freitas Farms of Middleboro, Pemacre Farm of Pembroke, Verrill Farm of Concord, and Noquochoke Orchards of Westport.

LaRaia Honored By Handicapped Construction Assn.

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia has been selected as "Legislator of the Year" by the New England Association of Handicapped Contractors.

Association President David F. Tilley of Sachem St., Wollaston, said LaRaia was the unanimous choice of the Board of Directors as a "true and loyal friend to the handicapped throughout his public career."

Fabrizio Announces Plans To Refurbish Two Playgrounds

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio announces plans to refurbish two playgrounds in Ward 4 using funds from the Antonelli Memorial Trust.

The trust was established at the suggestion of Fabrizio, in cooperation with the Antonelli family, as part of the Home Depot mitigation process. Proceeds of the trust are to be used for community improvements in South and West Quincy.

Fabrizio said neighborhood meetings will likely be held in mid-November to determine what type of improvements are desired by the community. Tentative plans call for the creation of "tot-lot" type parks at the Grasso Playground on Columbia St. and the Flaherty Field on Quarry St.

Fabrizio said he hopes to call upon the Quincy Parks Improvement Council (QPIC) which he praised for the recent refurbishing of Collins Rest-a-While on Southern Artery.

"My goal is to duplicate the tremendous work of QPIC at Collins," Fabrizio said. "Both the Grasso and Flaherty playgrounds are desperately in need of upgrading and the trust allows us to do the work without city funds."

Fabrizio said he also plans to work with the City Council's Park and Recreation Committee to develop a long-range plan to improve conditions at the city's playgrounds. "For years, we have asked the park department to do more with fewer employees and a smaller budget.

"We don't want to improve these playgrounds only to have them deteriorate due to a lack of care. The recent media accounts of our deteriorating parks was very disturbing," Fabrizio said.

"We need to make sure the park department finally has what it needs to provide safe and enjoyable facilities for the children of South and West Quincy, and the entire city," he added.

Interfaith Sheltering Coalition Receives NYNEX Grant

Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition has received a $500 grant from NYNEX Foundation through its Volunteer Recognition Program.

The program recognizes NYNEX employees who are active community volunteers by contributing to the organizations that benefit from their efforts.

Catherine Consolazio of Quincy, has been active in the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition for many years. She brings movies and popcorn for the guests at Fr. Bill's Place each Sunday evening.

"The grant will be used to build shelves in the shelter's storage facility," said Joe Finn, Executive Director of QISC.

"The Volunteer Recognition Program was developed to recognize and support the many NYNEX employees who actively volunteer their time, talent and resources, and make important personal contributions to the communities in which they live and work," said Carol Collins, NYNEX staff director - Community Affairs. "It's our way of encouraging employee participation in community affairs while providing support to non-profit organizations."

School Committee, City Council Races Highlight Election

(Cont'd from Page 1)

Sean L. Barry, director of public affairs at Quincy College; JoAnn Bragg, a tax accountant and president of the Citywide Parents Council; Christine Cedrone, an office manager; Toni Kabilian, parent activist and former president of the Citywide Parents Council; and Ronald H. McCarthy, acting vice principal of Middleboro High School.

In the September preliminary election, Bragg topped a nine-candidate field followed by Mariano and Barry.

The three other nominations went to Cedrone, Kabilian and McCarthy in that order.

Bragg, Barry and Kabilian are making their second bid for a school committee seat. Cedrone and McCarthy are running for the first time.

The latest registration figures from the City Board of Registrars shows 45,374 voters, up 200 since the September preliminary election.

The number of registered Independents rose 222 to 11,447 from 11,225 and the number of registered Republicans increased 13 to 6302 from 6289 while the number of registered Democrats dropped 35, to 27,622 from 27,657.

The number of female voters remains significantly higher than male voters in Quincy. There are 25,515 registered female voters compared to 19,859 registered male voters, a difference of 5,656.

A 32 percent turnout would mean approximately 14,519 voters going to the polls Tuesday.

A Dancer's Dream

Quincy Girl In Boston Ballet's 'The Sleeping Beauty'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ten-year-old Ashley Loud of Quincy is living every young dancer's dream.

Ashley, who has taken dancing lessons since age 2, is currently performing as a Garland Girl in the Boston Ballet's production of "The Sleeping Beauty," which runs through Nov. 7 at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts in Boston.

Considering it's her first professional ballet, one might think she would be a little intimidated. Ashley, however, said she's really not all that frightened.

"I'm a little nervous, because I've never danced on The Wang Center stage before," she said just hours before last Thursday's opening night. "I'm pretty scared, but I'm also really excited."

Thirty-five young dancers from New England, including Ashley, were selected to perform either in the Garland Dance or as pages in the production. Ashley said "a lot of kids, around 82 altogether" went to the recent audition at the Boston Ballet School on Clarendon Street in Boston to try out for the production.

"My mother and father are really proud of me," she said.

Ashley spent the first four years of her training at the Quincy School of Ballet. At age 6, she transferred to the Children's Ballet Workshop (CBW) in Hingham, where she was directed Nan Cogswell Keating, a former member of the American Ballet Company Theater Company.

ASHLEY LOUD

This year, CBW merged with the Boston Center for Dance Education, where Ashley is enrolled in its Norwell branch, under Keating's direction.

Now a seasoned professional, Ashley had some words of wisdom for other aspiring young performers who might think dancing is all fun and games.

"It's a very fun thing to do, but it's a lot of work, too," she said.

A fifth grader at the Bernazzani School in West Quincy, Ashley lives on Howard Street with her parents, Richard and Jacquelyn and six-year-old brother Andrew.

Tickets for "The Sleeping Beauty" range in price from $21 to $58. Student Rush tickets are $12 and are available at the door one hour before curtain. All prices include a $1 Wang Center Restoration Fee.

Tickets may be obtained in person at The Wang Center Box Office, 270 Tremont St., Boston, Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., or by calling 931-ARTS (931-2787).

proud to be part of the development team."

The primary architect of the golf course will be Sanford Associates of Jupiter, Fla., which will work with Quarry Hill Associates on the project. John Sanford, principal from the company, said that the master plan for the project calls for the golf course to encompass both the wetland and woodland areas at the site. Sanford noted that the site consists of 50 to 60 percent wetlands and 25 to 30 percent woodlands.

Sanford said the skating pond and other recreational fields planned will mainly be situated on the northeast edge near the entrance of the site. A clubhouse and parking area will be centrally located for everyone's convenience, he said.

He added that the golf course will run 6,600 to 6,700 yards long or par 72, "a good length for a public golf course," and said separate tees for all levels of players will be situated at each of the course's 18 holes.

William O'Connell, another member of the Quarry Hill Associates development team, said the timetable for the project will depend on when soil can be obtained from the "Big Dig" Project. He added that it will likely not be brought to the West Quincy site for 18 months, and construction on the project would not be completed until three years after that.

Sheets said in the interim, a citizens advisory committee will be formed to allow for public input on the topography and other aspects of the project.

Other city officials said after the press conference they were very pleased with the concept of the new recreation area.

"It looks like it will be an exceptional facility, well-kept and maintained," said Raymond Cattaneo, executive director of the Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said he feels the total recreational use of the project, and not just the golf course, will be a benefit for the community.

"The city is getting a great bargain," said Welch. "I'm very pleased with the proposal. The aesthetic scenic sites alone are worth it (renovating the landfill area). Even if you've just walking through the area or sitting on a bench, it's a great place to be."

and Ayers) will do the right thing when it comes to the residents."

Councillor Michael Cheney seconded DeCristofaro's motion.

"A clear precedent has been set to let them withdraw," said Cheney. "I would certainly support the withdrawal of the Shaw's application. The ward councillors have indicated that they will keep a watchful eye over the site."

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien said he would support the withdrawal "because I'm comfortable about what you (Phelan and Ayers) said about the project. I think we went through a long process, and I'm comfortable you two councillors will work with the residents.

"I'm optimistic we'll eventually solve what to do with that site," Chretien added.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said that although he would support the withdrawal, he had mixed feelings on the matter.

"It's a tough issue," said Cahill. "We've gone through an entire public hearing process, and some of my concerns are similar to Councillor LaRaia's. I don't think it's our job to drag this out for another year. The neighbors have said that a high-use retail store at that site will not work."

Cahill said that Hancock Street from East Squantum to Beale Streets is constantly congested with traffic and added that he knows firsthand about such problems because he used to live on the corner of Water Street and Quincy Avenue near the Shaw's Supermarket just south of Quincy Center.

"Traffic is crazy, and the impact is severe," he said. "I will support the motion (to withdraw) based on the council president's lifelong concern for the ward, but I will not support a Shaw's, a supermarket, or any high retail use at that site."

After listening to the other councillors, LaRaia said he would "reluctantly" support the motion, which passed unanimously.

The Shaw's proposal had called for an 86,000 square foot store at the site, including 56,000 for the new supermarket and 30,000 for another user such as a women's clothing store, drug store or another retail store. The 160,000 square foot Boston Gear facility would have been demolished to make way for the project.

The proposal had run into opposition from most of the residents who attended the neighborhood meetings and two public hearings. Most recently, 19 residents spoke in opposition, 36 were recorded in opposition, and a petition of 500 North Quincy and Wollaston residents was presented to the council at a public hearing held Oct. 4.

At the same hearing, 14 people spoke in favor and another 10 were recorded in support.

Opponents leared the store would generate pollution, traffic and noise problems, affect existing drainage problems, and impact small local businesses, all of which they said would outweigh any potential benefits from the supermarket.

Among those voicing support for the proposal were representatives from the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and South Shore Building Trades. Supporters said the new store would create jobs and give the local economy a needed lift.

Raiders On Rebound, Face Lakers Friday

By TOM SULLIVAN

Two weeks ago the North Quincy football team turned the ball over several times to ruin its chances of a win and resulting in a 13-8 loss to Weymouth, its third loss in a row.

Last Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium the shoe was on the other foot as it was visiting Don Bosco that made the turnovers and the Raiders took advantage as they rolled to a 25-0 first quarter lead and walloped the winless Bears, 46-12, to improve their record to 2-4. Bosco fell to 0-6.

North Quincy recovered four fumbles and blocked a punt which resulted in four Raider touchdowns. Coach Ken McPhee had a chance to use many of his reserves and 10 different players carried the ball.

Dan Reynolds recovered two of the Bosco fumbles and big Brian Raftery blocked the punt and recovered a fumble.

This Friday night the Raiders travel to Kingston to face a winless Silver Lake in a 7 p.m. game.

The Lakers have lost to Duxbury, Weymouth, Falmouth, Bedford, Barnstable and Taunton.

"We needed this win badly after our poor showing at Weymouth," said McPhee. "I hate to beat a team so badly, but you can't ask our younger players who have seen little action not to score. We had two players score their first varsity touchdowns and another scored his first varsity points."

North's defense was again superb. Bosco handled the ball only eight times in the first quarter and had just 21 total yards and one first down against the starters in the opening half.

The Bears managed to pick up 69 yards in the second half against North's reserves, including 59 by Calvin Bryant, who scored on a 15-yard run and ran back a kickoff 80 yards for the other Bosco score. The Bears completed one pass in five attempts for just three yards.

North Quincy Scoring
	TD	PAT	FG	Pts.
Nee	4	0	0	24
Duncan	3	0	0	18
Raftery	2	4	0	16
Epps	2	0	0	12
McGregor	2	0	0	12
Wirtz	2	0	0	12

Martinson	1	0	0	6
Zaniboni	1	0	0	6
Geary	1	0	0	6
Ragusa	0	2	0	2
Azuonone	0	2	0	2

Shawn Nee had another big night for North, carrying nine times for 139 yards and two touchdowns. Derrick Epps, who had filled in admirably when Nee missed two games and had a 100-yard game, rushed for 30 yards before being injured.

North quarterback Dan Duncan was 3-for-5 for 65 yards as the Raiders gained a total of 330 yards, including 265 on the ground.

North's 46 points were the second most scored by a Raider team. The school's third varsity team in 1935, captained by Pete Zoia, defeated Boston Farm and Trade, 51-13. The Raiders earlier this year topped Falmouth, 40-16.

Chris Geary scored his first varsity TD on a 48-yard run, Tim Zaniboni scored his first varsity TD and Bob Ragusa, carrying the ball for the first time, had three carries and scored a two-point conversion, his first varsity points. All three are juniors.

"Sean Dolbeare ran the team well in the second half and Dan Reynolds, Mike Manganaro, Geary, Zaniboni and Ragusa all played well," McPhee said.

Bosco fumbled the game's opening kickoff and North recovered. On the third play, following an eight-yard run by Nee, Raftery scored his second touchdown of the year from the four.

Following a punt, the Raiders drove 80 yards for their second score, as Duncan hit George Wirtz with a 35-yard pass and Nee scored on a 24-yard run.

The next kickoff again was fumbled by the Bears, the Raiders recovering on Bosco's 25. Two passes to Raftery for 25 and 12 yards set up Duncan's touchdown from the three.

A bad pass from center on a punting situation gave North the ball on the Bears' 16-yard line but North fumbled the ball away. On fourth down Raftery blocked a punt and Mike McGregor scored from the one. Kevin Ross, after two misses, kicked the point and North had a 25-0 lead after one quarter.

The Raiders drove from the 50 following a punt. Nee rushed for 46 yards, scoring from the 10, and Ross kicked his second extra point.

That was the only score of the second quarter but North marched 85 yards following the second half kickoff for its next score. Nee had a 40-yard run and Zaniboni scored from the one to make it 38-0.

Bosco's Bryant returned the kickoff 33 yards to the North 47 and the Bears drove to their first score against North's subs as Bryant ran 15 yards for the score.

Following the kickoff Bosco recovered a North fumble but a drive was stopped on North's 22. The Raiders were held and punted to Bosco's 48. North recovered another Bear fumble on Bosco's 48 and, on the first play, Geary raced round the right side for 48 yards and his first varsity score. Ragusa rushed for the two-point conversion.

Bryant broke loose and returned the ensuing kickoff 80 yards for the final score of the game.

Presidents On The Move, Host Falmouth

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's football team is on the move and, with the defense improving in every game, the Presidents are moving up in the Old Colony League race.

Quincy (4-2) turned in one of its finest performances of the season last Friday night to defeat Weymouth, 26-0, at Legion Field in Weymouth.

Quincy's defense has been outstanding. It recorded its first shutout at Weymouth and in the previous three games held Plymouth, Taunton and Matignon to one touchdown each.

This Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium Quincy hosts Falmouth in a 7 p.m. game.

Falmouth has a 2-3-1 record and turned in a superlative defensive effort last week in bowing to unbeaten OCL leader Plymouth, 7-0, the only score coming on a blocked punt recovered in the end zone. The Cape team has defeated Dennis-Yarmouth and Silver Lake while also losing to North Quincy and Bridgewater-Raynham and tying Taunton.

"We just controlled the game at Weymouth and it was a great two-way effort," said coach Jack Raymer. "We are now putting it all together. The defense has been just amazing and our young offensive line, with only one senior, continues to knock them over.

"All our running backs are doing a fine job behind an always improving offensive line and our passing game been clicking, giving us a well-balanced attack."

Junior Sam Brown had another outstanding game, carrying 26 times for 139 yards and a touchdown. Mike Elder carried 13 times for 58 yards and a score and quarterback Mike Bartlett carried five times for 67 yards and two TDs and was 7-for-10 through the air for 83 yards.

Defensively sophomore Billy Dunn led the way with nine unassisted tackles. "He's going to be a great one," Raymer said.

Raymer also praised the defensive work of Mike Feeley, John Green, Paul Colleary, Ashley Davis, Mike Lombard, playing defense for the first time since a pre-season injury; Jon Gangi, who had two pass interceptions; Tim Dowling, who had one interception; Steve Provost and Kevin Carey.

Offensively center Dave D'Olympio is the only senior in the line. Excelling with him were Tom Malvesti, whose 46-yard pass reception from Bartlett set up the third touchdown; Jason Sova, Jason Bennett, Peter Kolson, Feeley, Butch Palazzi and Jeff Burrell.

Brown got Quincy on the board first when he capped an early drive with a seven-yard scoring run.

This was the only score of the first half as both defenses played outstanding ball. The Presidents did reach the Wildcats' five-yard line but gave up the ball with 19 seconds left in the half.

Weymouth was held to 76 yards in the first half and failed to get into Quincy territory.

Dowling picked off a Ross Shannon pass on the first play of the second half which set up the Presidents' second score. Bartlett raced 26 yards for the touchdown.

The next series of plays broke Weymouth's back. Mike Taylor returned the kickoff 63 yards to the Quincy 21 but the Presidents held and Gangi intercepted a pass in the end zone to end the threat.

Quincy drove to its third touchdown with Elder scoring from the six.

Terry Bowman rushed for the two-point conversion to make it 20-0.

Bowman, a sophomore who has been outstanding in every game, suffered an injury that is expected to keep him out of at least the next two games.

Bartlett scored his second touchdown from the two with 8:04 left in the game to end the scoring.

Youth Football

Apaches Blank Panthers, Take Over First Place

The North Quincy Apaches took over sole possession of first place in the Quincy Youth Football League by blanking the Quincy Point Panthers, 18-0, last Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Panthers threatened early but the Apaches' Chris Bregoli intercepted a pass on the Apaches' 20. Bregoli, also playing quarterback, then completed a 60-yard pass to John Parastedis.

Pat Egan capped the drive by scoring early in the second quarter and the Apaches had a 6-0 edge at halftime.

In the second half, the Apaches' offensive line opened big holes for running backs Manny Vasquez and Egan. Vasquez scored from the 10.

The Apaches' defense swarmed all over the Panther ball carriers and then put together a long fourth quarter drive with Bregoli scoring the final touchdown on a 10-yard run.

The Panthers threatened to score late in the game but the Apaches' defense dug in and preserved the shutout.

The Apaches' coaches praised the efforts of the offensive line. Defensively Bregoli, Egan, Pat Coughlin, Dan Toland and Jim Finn all played well.

Future Stars Learn How At Youth Soccer Clinic

By MIKE LINNANE

Quincy's future soccer stars attended a recent clinic at Atlantic Field.

Quincy Youth Soccer League (QYSL) sponsored the clinic instructed by North Quincy High School's boys varsity coach Jim Johnston and Quincy's boys varsity coach Barry Austin. Assisting each coach were players from their respective squads.

Representing North Quincy: Scott McCormick, Ralph DiMattia, Ed Mitton. Kevin Chan, Bob Johnston, Shawn Johnson, Dan Stone, Neil Huchison, Mike Johnston, Spiro Kouvlis, Billy Barron and Peter Johnson.

Representing Quincy High were Dan Clark, Dennis Greeley, Jason Downey and Chris Swanton.

In groups of 10, the youngsters were instructed on the skills of dribbling the ball, chest traps, juggling the ball, offensive and defensive plays. Many of the high school players have been past participants in the Quincy Youth Soccer League and were elated to be instructing the younger athletes. Equally enthusiastic were the QYSL players learning the various techniques from the older experienced players.

Not to be forgotten was a group of 25 QYSL coaches who in turn were having their skills sharpened. Austin and Johnson demonstrated a number of drills and games the coaches can use to develop their players. A question and answer session followed on game rules and basic fundamentals.

The program finished at noon with Quincy Youth Soccer's Russ Conner thanking both Austin and Johnston. The QYSL players gave Austin, Johnson and their squads a roaring round of applause for their participation.

After the clinic, Jim remarked what a great community effort was put forward by QYSL and the two high school squads. Both coaches were delighted with the response and the level of play demonstrated by the QYSL players.

Soccer in Quincy continues to become a favorite sport with the youngsters. Quincy Youth Soccer League expects to expand again with its upcoming spring registration Saturday at Broadmeadows Middle School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

North Jayvees Win, 14-6

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team improved its record to 4-1 with a 14-6 victory over Weymouth.

Wideout Jerry Fernandez scored both touchdowns on passes from quarterback Sean Dolbeare. Weymouth scored on the final play of the game.

North topped Barnstable, 28-6, with quarterback Eric Zimmerman hitting Fernandez with a 30-yard scoring pass and Keith Martinson adding two touchdowns and Zimmerman one.

North suffered its only loss at the hands of Plymouth, 6-0, as four players went down with injuries.

Earlier North had outlasted Falmouth, 34-20, with both the offense and defense playing well.

Martinson scored on a 35-yard run and a 12-yard run, Fernandez on a 20-yard pass reception, Dolbeare on a one-yard quarterback sneak and Tim Zamboni on a 17-yard run.

North run for over 300 yards in the game, led by Zamboni with 200 yards.

Cross Country

North Girls Share First Place With Falmouth

The North Quincy girls' cross-country team (5-1) shares first place with Falmouth in the Old Colony League following an impressive 22-36 victory over previous co-leader Weymouth.

With two meets remaining with Bridgewater-Raynham and Quincy, the North girls will be looking toward Friday's final Falmouth meet at Barnstable's Hathaway Pond course. Two NQ wins and a Falmouth loss would give North the undisputed league title.

"Anything can happen at Hathaway Pond, it's a nasty course," said North coach Geoff Hennessy.

Erin Duggan was the winner against Weymouth, finishing in 20:50 and missing Suzanne Lewis' NQ course record by two seconds.

Laura Blaikie finished third, Katie McNamara fifth, Erica Doherty sixth, Kelly Duggan seventh and Mel Gaziano eighth.

The young North boys' team lost to Weymouth, 20-35.

North's Eric Torvi again was the individual winner but the Wildcats placed the next seven runners ahead of North's Steve Cannon, who finished eighth.

The North teams faced B-R Tuesday and will host Quincy this Friday over the Pageant Field course.

At the Brown Invitational meet the North girls' varsity ran its best race of the year but could only place fifth behind Newton North, the top-ranked team in Eastern Mass.; Sacred Heart of New York City, East Providence and Suffern, N.Y.

Erin Duggan again paced North, with a time of 19:18 over the flat 5-kilometer course at Slater Park in Pawtucket. Her time was the fourth best time by a Mass. girl in the meet.

Blaikie placed 21st (20:03), and Doherty 29th (20:16).

In the freshman-novice division North finished 10th led by Kerry Ginty, whose 16:16 over a shorter 4-kilometer course was the second fastest in North history for ninth place and a trophy.

Diane Kane-McGunagle was 51st and other scorers were Carrie Jarvis, Diane Jordan and Meaghan Powers.

The boys were led by Greg Burke's fast 14:32, good for 62nd place.

Chrissy Herman turned in a 23:16 in the jayvee girls' race with Colleen Cotter (23:27) and Ursula Feurtado (23:46) close behind.

Cannon led the jayvee boys with an 18:13, followed by Terrance Roche (18:39) and Brian O'Donnell (19:28).

North will take part in the OCL championship meet Nov. 2 at Silver Lake and the State Coaching invitational Nov. 6 at Franklin Park.

Quincy Teams Lose But Individuals Shine

Although the Quincy boys' and girls' cross country teams lost to Barnstable, several runners continue to shine in the Old Colony League.

Junior James Lencki ran his dual meet record to 5-1 with an excellent time of 17:05. Junior Doug Gallagher was third at 17:54.

Also running well for Quincy in a 24-34 loss were Matt Langille, Damon Blanco, Rich Bergeron, Hubert Lam and John Duffy.

On the girls' side sophomore Liz Sawan improved her dual meet record to 4-2, although the girls lost, 20-37. She had an outstanding time of 20:43, the 11th fastest time ever over the Barnstable course.

Also running well were Lauralee Summer, Maryann Ashworth, Amy Nicklas and Kathryn Lencki.

Quincy will face North Quincy this Friday at 3:15 p.m. over the Pageant Field course.

Pee Wee A's Tie, 4-4

Quincy's Pee Wee A hockey team, sponsored by the Elks and coached by Kevin Mock, battled back from a 2-0 deficit to tie Needham, 4-4.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Election Day is almost here. As in every pre-election period, claims and counter-claims have been heard . . . Half truths and exaggerations . . . Allegations, accusations and denials . . .

Our constitution of the United States permits this. More importantly, it permits all of us to believe or disbelieve what we want. And still more important yet, it permits us the privilege and power to vote as we wish. There is no such thing as a controlled vote in this country. No one, absolutely no one but yourself can control your vote. Controlled votes are not permissible or possible. You are alone in the ballot box.

On election day you accept or reject the pleas and pressures. You have freedom of choice. No one can impair your freedom to vote as you wish. Go to the polls. VOTE. No one was ever elected, no issue was ever decided by STAY-AT-HOME-PEOPLE!. . .

At Least Three Fire Dept. Lottery Winners To Be Appointed

By MICHAEL WHALEN

At least three of 33 potential candidates are likely to obtain positions on the Quincy Fire Department after a lottery that was held in Quincy City Hall.

The fire lottery was conducted last Thursday by City Clerk Joseph Shea in the City Council Chamber. Both Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Mayor James Sheets, who has the final say on who is hired for the department, said last week the lottery was the only fair way to break a tie between 33 recruits who scored 100 percent on the state firefighter civil service test.

Gorman said that 13 veterans will be given priority over the 33 other candidates to fill vacancies in the department. The chief added that there are currently 16 positions available along with two others which may soon open because of retirements, meaning that three to five positions will likely be filled by those picked first in the lottery.

All 33 names were drawn in the lottery and given numbers from 1 to 33. If any of the veterans or lottery winners fail to pass physical examinations or other tests required for the job, those on the lottery list be chosen in the order their names were drawn, Gorman said.

Sheets has said that it is his intention to fill all vacancies in the department. He has also said that the new fire recruits will replace retirees who have left the department over the last two years. Because the new firefighters will be filling already vacant positions as opposed to new ones, the municipal budget will not be impacted by their presence on the city payroll, according to Sheets.

The mayor said he wants to hire the recruits as soon as possible, and Gorman said he hopes the new firefighters will be working for the department by late December or Jan. 1.

A source at the Quincy Personnel Department said all of the 33 recruits who were placed in the lottery are either present or former Quincy residents. All lived in Quincy at the time the test was administered in January 1990, but now 28 are residents and five have moved from the city, the source said. At press time it was not known which five were no longer residents.

The first five names drawn from the lottery--those apparently most likely to be hired--were, in order: Joseph C. Jackson, James J. Puleo, Michael J. Worley, Roger J. Kineavy and James A. Bailey.

Those drawn from numbers six to 33 included:

Paul F. Halloran Jr., David A. Flynn, Kevin M. White, Neil M. Leonard, Oliver J. Fahy, Stephen E. Johnson, Michael D. Flynn. David C. Usher, Paul S. Renken, Christopher W. Condon, Stephen F. Mitchell, James D. McCue, Paul D. Campbell, Stephen J. Wells.

John J. Griffin, Arthur M. Collings, Edward M. O'Reilly, Matthew F. Gorman, Stephen W. Grazioso, Edward J. Rowan, Thomas F. Bambery, Shaun J. Wynn, Peter M. DiBona, Kimberly L. Johnson, Scot P. Batson, Michael MacMurdo, Timothy H. Quinn, John R. McCarthy.

License Sought For Flea Market At Jordan Marsh Warehouse

A request to open a new flea market at the site of the former Jordan Marsh warehouse at Marina Bay was continued Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

Tony Abbott of Brighton, who said he runs a similar successful operation in Brockton, told the board he was interested in using approximately 35,000 square feet at the site Saturdays and Sundays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. He estimated that there is a total of approximately 1.2 million square feet available there.

Abbott said he became interested in the site because he wants to expand his current operation. He added, however, that his Brockton flea market would continue to operation in addition to the Jordan Marsh site if the board voted favorably on his request.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said before the board could take any action on the matter, Abbott would have to contact Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers for his opinion on the issue.

City Clerk Joseph Shea also said that Abbott had "some papers to get in order" and told him that he could appear before the board at a later date after consulting with Ayers.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

Quincy Seeks Injunction To Stop Transporting Of Explosives Through City

Outraged over the apparent transporting of explosives by motorcade to Moon Island for detonation Monday, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers has called on Quincy officials to take the City of Boston to court to stop the practice.

According to Ayers who said he researched the matter, the City of Boston did not obtain permits to allow officials to transport any explosive, nor did they contact Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Mayor James Sheets, Ayers or the residents in order that safety precautions could be taken.

The transporting took place mid-afternoon through the streets of North Quincy and Squantum not far from the time school was released. Ayers is working with Sheets and Assistant City Solicitor Jim Timmins to take the City of Boston to court to request an injunction be filed against the City of Boston for their action.

A motion to amend the compliance currently pending in Suffolk Superior Court will be filed by Timmins with Ayers this week in Dedham. They will be seeking an injunction against the City of Boston asking that Boston be prohibited from transporting any hazardous material through Quincy streets in the future.

Ayers said he strongly believes that an alternative site should be found outside of Quincy or the option of transportation by barge to the site should be adopted for the safety of local residents.

"This is just another example of the breakdown in communications that we are currently experiencing with the City of Boston relative to the Moon Island gun range," Ayers said, adding he will not "tolerate endangering the safety of the citizens in Ward 6."

He will work with Sheets and the future mayor of Boston to resolve the situation.

Quincy and Boston officials are already at odds over Boston's proposed expansion of the Moon Island gun range. Moon Island, owned by Boston, is accessible by land only through Quincy.

Sheets Opposes Convention Center At JM Warehouse

There will be no "Boomtown" for Rex Trailer at the former Jordan Marsh warehouse in Marina Bay, according to Mayor James Sheets.

US Venture Group in Waltham, with which former children's television star Trailer is associated, revealed plans on Monday for converting the warehouse into a 1 million-square foot convention center.

Sheets, however, said Tuesday he is against the proposal and will see to it that it doesn't go through.

"I don't have confidence this would work and I don't support it," said Sheets.

Sheets said US Venture Group first approached him with the idea three or four weeks ago. He said that while Trailer, who starred in the Boston area television program "Boomtown" for 18 years until 1974, was "always very kind and sensitive," other US Venture Group officials seemed to have "a cavalier attitude" toward Quincy.

"They came in here with no backup, no engineering or architectural studies," said Sheets. "It has not been managed well."

Study On Sewer And Water Rates Available At Chamber

A report revealing consumer and industry consumption and cost of water and sewer services in major cities across the nation is available, at no cost, through the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

The report also includes a chronology of correspondence and legislative testimony regarding the rising cost of MWRA rates, and the Ernest and Young 1992 National Water & Wastewater Rate Survey.

"Our goal is making business people aware of comparable water and sewer rates is part of our ongoing efforts to seek a permanent funding solution for the cleanup of Boston Harbor and to be certain that the full projections of rates are never realized," said Chamber General Manager Terry Fancher.

A report issued earlier this year by state Inspector General Robert Cerasoli predicted MWRA rates to quadruple from the already second highest rates in the country.

The study was conducted through the Chamber's Business Development and Transportation Department as a series of mailings to major cities around the country to determine their sewer and water rates and major users, including Boeing, Anheuser-Busch and Coca-Cola.

St. Moritz

Squirt Minors Break Even

The St. Moritz Devils Squirt Minor hockey team broke even in two games over the weekend and is in sixth place in the 12-team Metropolitan Boston-Squirt Minor Division with a 3-3 record.

The Devils topped the Assabet Valley Patriots, 4-3, on goals by John Segalla, Joe Carr, Mike Carr and Steve Segalla. Pat Balconis, Sean Sullivan, Brett Wood, John Segalla and Robbie Johnson had assists.

Sullivan, Balconis and Tim Egan turned in outstanding two-way performances.

The Devils lost to the Bay State Sharks, 4-2, with Steve Segalla scoring both goals and John Segalla having an assist. Bob Cellucci and Rick Sarno had fine games and a beautiful shot by Sarno was stopped by the Sharks goalie with an amazing save. Devils' goalie Kevin Regan, Wood and Sullivan were standouts.

Like Father, Like Son

Jim McIntyre worked hard for Quincy all his life, because he honestly cared about his city. He learned duty from his father, who served as a police captain. In turn, Jimmy taught public service to his son, Charles.

CHARLES McINTYRE learned from his father, his mother, and the example of his grandfather -- not because he needs the job, but because he wants to serve. Quincy needs more people who see public service as a duty, not a career.

City Councillor Tim Cahill and School Committeeman Ron Mariano easily topped their respective fields in Tuesday's election while JoAnn Bragg and young Christine Cedrone took the other two school seats.

Cedrone, who is 23 and believed to be the youngest person ever elected to the Quincy school committee, edged out Sean Barry by a scant eight votes. Barry could not be reached by press time on whether he would seek a recount.

In another highlight Tuesday, former Mayor Joseph LaRaia finished a strong second behind Cahill and ahead of third place winner Michael Cheney.

Cahill piled up 8,860 votes to top the city council, positioning himself for a future mayoral bid as he easily topped the city council at-large field for the third consecutive city election.

LaRaia was second with 7,840 and Cheney third with 7,552--288 votes behind.

Charles McIntyre, 26-year-old son of the late Mayor James McIntyre, making his first bid for elective office, finished an impressive fourth with 6,920 votes--673 behind Cheney.

Mary Collins, former school committee member and Norfolk County Commissioner, was fifth with 5,786 votes, trailing McIntyre by 1,134.

Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio turned back a strong challenge by 18-year-old Michael D'Amico who was making his first run for office. Fabrizio won by a 277-vote margin, 1,553 to 1,276.

In Ward 3, the only other ward contest, incumbent Lawrence Chretien rolled over challenger Robert Boussy 2,118 to 396.

Incumbent Ron Mariano topped the school committee field for the second final city election to win his second four-year term. His vote was 8,918.

Bragg, a 38-year-old tax accountant and president of the Citywide Parents Council, finished a strong second with 8,479 votes.

Cedrone received 5716 votes; Barry 5708; Toni Kabilian 4714 and Ronald McCarthy 4166.

Here's how Tuesday's winners reacted to their victories:

"I'm very honored, and I hope I can continue to keep the people's confidence and trust," Cahill said.

"I worked as if I was running for the first time," said LaRaia. "I did a lot of door knocking. That was primarily my grass-roots campaigning."

"I'd hoped to do better," said Cheney. "But we'll make some changes for the next election, and next time we'll be number one, not number three."

"I may not be the best politician in town, but I'm a nuts and bolts type of guy and I've had a lot of good accomplishments," said Fabrizio. Of his challenger, he added "Mike ran a very spirited campaign and brought a lot of energy to the race."

Chretien said, "I just appreciate the support of the people of Ward 3, and I will do my best to support them."

"Obviously we're thrilled," Mariano said. "We've worked very hard and turned it up a notch after the primary."

Bragg said, "I'm very happy, I'm very ecstatic, I worked hard to get the vote out."

Cedrone, an office manager, said, "I'm really, really happy," she said. "I worked very, very, hard."

Mayor James Sheets was re-elected to a third term--his second without opposition. He was the top vote getter with 12,651 votes. He drew 4,222 blanks.

Sheets is the first mayor in the city's history to run unopposed twice. Two other mayors, Thomas Burgin and Francis McCauley, each were elected once without opposition.

Re-elected unopposed were:

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, with 2,256 votes and 860 blanks; Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, 1,756 votes and 845 blanks; Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan with 2,013 votes and 838 blanks; and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers with 1,980 votes and 573 blanks.

The voter turnout was 37.20 percent, a little higher than the 32 percent predicted. This meant that 16,896 of Quincy's 45,374 registered voters cast ballots.

Officials Eye December Completion

'Walk Of Names' Project Underway

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Eyeing a first phase completion date before the end of the year, officials broke ground Monday for Quincy's "Walk of Names" project at the entrance to City Hall annex and McIntyre Mall.

Mayor James Sheets presided over the ceremony which attracted approximately 75 officials, invited guests and residents, many of whom have purchased personalized bricks for the project.

Plans for the downtown improvement project include creating a new brick plaza with walkways, along with the upgrading of plants in the immediate vicinity of the City Hall entrance and McIntrye Mall.

The overall design will feature a new granite fountain, sculpted by Edward Monti of Quincy as its focal point. An octagonal pattern of darker bricks will surround the structure, accenting a herringbone pattern of lighter colored bricks throughout the plaza. The design will also feature 16-inch by 16-inch squares of Quincy granite.

Bricks for the first phase of the project, 3,000 in all, are sold out, according to Georgia Pierce of PR. Etc., the Quincy company which is marketing the project. If there is enough interest, Phase II of the project will also allow for engraved pavers as part of the design.

The second phase will allow for upgrading the area extending into McIntrye Mall and the area in front of the MBTA station. Orders for these personalized bricks may be placed by calling 337-3499.

The project was designed by Mary Smith Associates of Quincy. Construction will be managed by the Quincy Department of Public Works.

The contractor is P.A. Landers of Hanover which is also doing traffic improvements along East Squantum St.

The plaza will include six park benches, four flag poles and a number of historic street lamps, all donated by individuals, businesses and organizations.

The project began after a $50,000 bond issue was designated to replace the granite pavers in front of City Hall annex. The mayor said several residents, particularly senior citizens, had tripped over the granite pavers walking to and from City Hall.

Instead of simply replacing the pavers, Sheets said he decided to do a larger scale project on a historical theme. "We should do more than just new sidewalks. We decided to let the people get involved.

"It's been an enormous success," Sheets said.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton agreed.

"It's been a very successful program and we're happy it's underway. We hope the project is completed in time for the holidays, weather permitting of course."

The mayor also expressed thanks and gratitude to the residents, businesses and organizations which purchased the bricks as well as those responsible for planning and coordinating the project.

One invited guest, Sheila McIntyre, said she is happy the city is refurbishing the City Hall annex area and McIntyre Mall named in honor of her father-in-law, the late William McIntyre.

"The McIntyre family is delighted that Captain Bill McIntrye will continue to be recognized even more prominently by the refurbishing of McIntyre Mall. We're grateful for the mayor's interest in preserving McIntyre Mall," she said.

The green space adjacent to City Hall was named McIntyre Mall after Capt. William McIntyre who served as a Quincy police captain and the department's chief of detectives. He was the father of Mrs. McIntyre's husband, the late James R. McIntyre who served as mayor of Quincy and state senator.

The $217,000 project is being financed primarily through the sale of bricks and other park-like items for the project, such as benches, flag poles, and lighting fixtures. The $50,000 bond covers site preparation, project design and layout, and marketing the bricks, said Project Manager Lester Gerry of the Quincy Public Works Department.

Last week, the site preparation began with the removal of the old granite pavers, lights and flag poles. Monuments, plaques and other significant markers were also removed but they will be replaced on the site, Gerry said.

The site preparation will continue over the next several weeks and drainage and sewerage work will begin near the end of the month, Gerry said. Shortly after, the light bases, irrigation work for the fountain and the granite curbing will be installed followed by the pavers in early December, Gerry said.

Some landscaping may be done, such as seeding and a few plantings and spreading on loam, depending on the weather, he said. The remaining landscaping will be completed in the spring, Gerry said.

Sheets said the new fountain should be finished early next summer, in time for either Flag Day in June or Independence Day in July.

The Constitution granite sculpture, the centerpiece of McIntyre Mall for many years, will be removed and placed at Freedom Park to make way for the new working fountain which will resemble the fountain at the entrance of Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

For the first phase, 3,000 bricks were sold, raising $160,000, Gerry said. If there is enough public interest, phase two of the project will allow for engraved pavers as part of the design.

The second phase will allow for upgrading the area extending from McIntyre Mall and the area in front of the MBTA station. Orders for these personalized bricks may be placed by calling 337-3499.

Another $25,400 has been generated for the first phase with the sale of six benchs at $1,000 each, four flag poles at $1,100 each and six historical lighting fixtures at $2,500 each. The lights are similar to the fixtures which line Hancock St. and nearby streets in Quincy Square.

As of Monday, there were two light fixtures available for the first phase, said Helen Murphy of the mayor's office. In addition, there are six benches and 16 light fixtures available for the second and third phases, Murphy said Monday. Anyone interested in making a donation for these items can call Murphy at 376-1990.

The front entrance to City Hall annex is closed during the construction. To accommodate visitors to City Hall, a handicapped ramp has been placed at the entrance to old City Hall (James R. McIntyre Government Center).

Would Give City Council Control

Ayers Wants JM Warehouse Site Rezoned

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A proposal for a giant convention center at the site of the former Jordan Marsh warehouse in Squantum will likely require the approval of the City Council.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers has proposed rezoning the property at the site from Business "B" to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

Ayers, who made the proposal during Monday night's City Council meeting, said the council will hold a public hearing on the matter Dec. 6.

The rezoning would make the City Council the special permit granting authority over the site. Currently, most uses for the site need only approval from the Quincy Building Department, according to Planning Director Richard Meade. Multi-family units or heavy industrial uses at the site would currently require approval from the zoning board of appeals, he added.

In addition to the council's public hearing, the Planning Board must also hold a public hearing on the proposed zoning change and make a recommendation on the matter to the City Council. Meade said the board will schedule a hearing as soon as possible for a date in the near future.

Ultimately, the City Council has the final say in the matter. It can act within 21 days of its own public hearing without the Planning Board's recommendation, since the board has no authority over the council in the matter. Meade noted, however, that the council's general course of action is to wait for the board's recommendation.

The council needs the vote of 2/3 of its members for the zoning change, Meade said. Several councillors expressed support of the zoning change Monday night.

Ayers' proposal comes in the wake of an announcement last week by U.S. Venture Group in Waltham for plans to convert the warehouse into a 1 million square foot convention center. City officials, including Ayers and Mayor James Sheets, have expressed opposition to the project. The Quincy Sun has printed a letter this week from U.S. Venture Group responding to comments Sheets made last week in the paper.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said Tuesday that any proposal for a zoning change at a given site governs what happens at that site "until it's voted up or down." Therefore, Mulvey said, the site is technically zoned PUD already and U.S. Venture Group can either wait for a decision on the zoning change or reapply for a PUD permit if it so chooses.

The City Council must act on the proposal within the 90 days following its public hearing, after which it would remain Business "B," he added. If that were to happen, Ayers could resubmit his proposal at any time, Mulvey

$35,000 Approved For Planting 260 Trees

As part of its continuing effort to help keep Quincy beautiful, the City Council Monday night appropriated $35,000 to the Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department to plant 260 trees throughout the city.

The funds were taken from the city's federally-funded UDAG (Urban Development Action Grant) Monarch III account.

Raymond Cattaneo, executive director of the department, said the money would be used to pay for the services of the Delprete Company of Rockland. He added that Delprete submitted the lowest bid to the city for the project.

Cattaneo said the appropriation is a "good price" for something that is necessary for the city.

"Every year, 150 to 175 trees are removed because they are dead and decayed," he said.

Cattaneo also noted that this year, some of the 260 trees will replace trees that are removed while others will be planted in sites that currently have no trees at all.

Mullen Says No High Speed Police Chase In Fatal Accident

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Police Chief Francis Mullen has denied that a car accident last Friday night which killed one woman and injured three other people, including two police officers, was the result of a high-speed police chase.

A preliminary report by Kevin Cook, the city's traffic officer, has also concluded that the collision was an accident.

The chief made his remarks while addressing the City Council on the matter at its Monday night meeting. Mullen updated the council on the accident investigation at the request of Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the council's Public Safety Committee.

Mullen told the council that the incident is still being investigated by city and state police as well as Cook, an accident reconstructionist with the Quincy Traffic Commission. The chief, however, said that at this point there is no indication of a high-speed chase and took issue with a story in last weekend's edition of The Patriot Ledger that included the headline, "Police chase kills woman."

"That was poor headlining," said Mullen. "I was outraged when I saw it."

Councillor Michael Cheney agreed that the newspaper had made a mistake by presenting the story in the manner it chose.

"One of the things that upset me about it is that the headline prejudged what had taken place," said Cheney. "It takes the air that the police department would cover up any kind of an investigation."

The chief said that he contacted the state police to assist in the investigation so that there would be partiality on any ruling in the matter.

Cook has written in his preliminary report, however, that it appears the incident is not the fault of the police officers involved in the accident.

"After an initial investigation of the evidence along with the inference that can be drawn from the statements of witnesses, it appears this was just an unfortunate accident," Cook wrote.

Mullen said four witnesses, whose names have not been made public, were at the scene of the accident.

Mullen said the collision occurred after two police officers decided to follow another vehicle to routinely request that the driver pull over to the side of the road. Officers Jack Sullivan and Michael Sullivan Jr.--who are not related--were in a cruiser parked at the Adams Shore Library when they observed a red Ford Escort traveling east on Sea Street. The car was "weaving" and traveling approximately 40 m.p.h. in an area where the speed limit is 30 m.p.h., he added.

The chief said the police cruiser turned on its blue lights and followed the other vehicle down Sea Street. Somehow, the police cruiser collided with a white Hyundai Excel being driven by 66-year-old Delores Murray of Sea Street. She was apparently driving home a friend, 71-year-old Mary O'Leary of Kilby Street, after the two attended a bingo game at Most Blessed Sacrament Church in Houghs Neck.

Murray was apparently taking a left turn from Sea Street onto Jewett Street when the accident occurred, Mullen said. It is unclear at this point exactly how the two vehicles collided, although it appears that there may have been a van in the area which obscured the drivers' view.

Mullen said the accident occurred at about 10:10 p.m. about "four-tenths of a mile" from the Adams Shore Library. He added that it is unclear why Murray tried to turn onto Jewett Street, a dead end, since Kilby Street, where O'Leary lived, is one block west of Jewett.

Nearby residents who heard the collision rushed to the scene and did everything they could to assist the officers and the two women, the chief said. After paramedics arrived on the scene, O'Leary was taken to Quincy Hospital where she died from injuries sustained in the accident. Murray remains in stable condition in the intensive care unit at Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Michael Sullivan Jr. received medical attention at Quincy Hospital but was not admitted, according to Mullen. Jack Sullivan was taken to Milton Hospital where he received 100 stitches in the area of his neck. He was not released until Sunday, Mullen added.

$22,600 Voted To Continue Asian Speaking Interpreter

The City Council Monday night appropriated $22,600 to the Quincy Police Department so that it may continue to receive the services of an Asian language-speaking interpreter.

Executive Secretary Thomas Koch said the interpreter, Hi Thai of Urbanistics in Quincy, serves as a liaison between the department and the city's growing Asian community.

"With 12,000 Asians in the city, it's a fundamental need of the police department," said Koch. "Next year, it will be part of the department's regular budget."

City Auditor Robert Foy said the funds for the appropriation were taken from receipts received from 1994 in addition to the current budget.

Council President Charles Phelan said the interpreter's service is a good for the city.

"I've met him, and he speaks Chinese, Vietnamese, Cambodian and other languages," said Phelan. "It's a heck of a bargain at (just over) $22,000."

BEATING THE HEART ATTACK CLOCK

"Every minute counts."That saying is never truer than when it comes to coping with a heart attack. The reduced blood flow, called ischemia, caused by a blood clot is what starts the countdown. Muscle starts to die near the area of the ischemia, and that destruction spreads with time, limiting the heart's ability to pump. The first hour after the attack begins is known as the "golden hour," when emergency hospital care can make a dramatic difference in keeping permanent damage to a minimum. Within the second hour, mild damage is likely to occur. Without treatment, damage will worsen until muscle death fills the area of ischemia, generally by around six hours after the onset of the attack.

P.S. Heart muscle starts to die within minutes, but people wait an average of three hours before seeking treatment for a heart attack.

Never let fear of embarrassment over having misdiagnosed you symptoms get in the way of your seeking the prompt medical attention you need. For more information on the symptoms of heart attack, or any other aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our new office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

The Granite Ball

I'm going to try again.

Last time my good friend, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro didn't like the idea. But maybe this time he will.

DeCRISTOFARO

A couple of years ago I proposed that the beautiful large polished granite ball at the Fore River traffic rotary be brought back to Quincy Sq. where it was located many years and where, I believe it really belongs.

Ted's reaction at that time was something like: "Over my dead body!"

And that the suggestion came from an old Quincy Pointer, it bordered on treason.

But hold on, Ted. Hear this one out.

Now the stage is being set for what could be an appropriate swap.

Work has begun on the "Walk of Names" at Constitution Common beside old City Hall and in front of new City Hall. Some 3,000 bricks engraved with the names of residents and firms that purchased them will be placed there.

It should be a picturesque setting.

Especially since that monstrosity of rock known as the Constitution Sculpture is finally going to be moved out of there.

No, that's not the swap I have in mind.

I would have the ball brought back to Quincy Sq. and placed on McIntyre Mall beside the Walk of Names. It would be the crown jewel for Mayor James Sheets' "Cleaner, Greener Quincy" and one of the prettiest downtown settings anywhere.

Then, place something handsome and appropriate at the Fore River traffic rotary. Like a stone or bronze model of one of the famous ships built there.

Now that we are going to have a U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum across the street at the shipyard what could be more appropriate than a sculptured ship model at the rotary with a sign calling attention to the museum?

And what could be more appropriate than having the granite ball at McIntyre Mall?

The ball was a gift to the city from the historic Granite Railway Company and the Faxon family in 1925 to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the settlement of Quincy in 1625.

For many years it was located alongside the city clerk's office at old City Hall.

A sculptured model of a battleship or aircraft carrier at the Fore River traffic rotary would be appropriate as an eye-catching tribute to thousands of shipyard workers who built some of the finest and most famous fighting vessels and commercial ships ever to sail the world.

The granite ball is a fitting tribute to the many Quincy granite craftsmen and the city's historic granite industry. What could be more appropriate than to have it back in Quincy's Historic District where all residents of the city and tourists could enjoy it.

Now's the time to do it.

Council Cuts $746,400 From City Budget

Because of an increase in state funding, the City Council Monday night was able to cut $746,400 from the city's FY94 budget.

The line item being reduced is the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's sewer assessment. Mayor James Sheets announced last week that a recent state appropriation in excess of $20 million granted to the city has made the budget reduction possible.

Sheets, who has said this is the first time in city history the MWRA assessment has been reduced, said the change in the assessment will mean a savings of about $15 a year for an average household of four family members. Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton agreed, saying that a family of four will pay an annual sewer fee of $750 instead of $765.

The mayor said that because residents are billed quarterly for the sewer assessment, the savings will not kick in until Jan. 1.

Although councillors Monday night expressed satisfaction with the reduction, some said it is just the beginning of something bigger.

"There's more to be done, and the fight is not over," said Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who actions against skyrocketing MWRA rates in the past have included leading a "Tea Party" protest last May at Marina Bay.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, who noted that despite the reduction the city is still paying more for the MWRA assessment than it did last year, agreed.

"It's really just a decrease in the increase," said Cahill. "As you (Kolson) said, the fight is obviously not over, but it is a good first step."

$36,000 Voted To Solve Viden Rd. Flooding

A flooding problem on Viden Road in South Quincy should be resolved in the near future.

The City Council Monday night appropriated $36,000 from the city's sewer rehabilitation fund to allow the Department of Public Works to perform the work necessary to stop the flooding.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said that there is an area on Viden Road "in back of about three houses" that has been flooding for some time.

"It's very, very bad," he said.

DeCristofaro added that the appropriation will allow an easement to be built through the land across the street from the site which will allow the water to drain properly.

Defends Plans For Convention Center At Jordan Marsh Warehouse

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Thursday, Oct. 28, an article appeared in The Quincy Sun under the headline: "Sheets Opposes Convention Center At JM Warehouse." The mayor made statements, we believe, that should not stand without a response.

Sheets stated that the group first approached him with the idea three or four weeks ago claiming, "they came in here with no backup, no engineering, or architectural studies" and that it had "not been managed well." The mayor stated he is against the proposal and will see to it that it doesn't go through.

The article also stated that "there will be no Boomtown for Rex Trailer at the former Jordan Marsh warehouse" in response to US Venture Group's plan to convert the former warehouse into a world-class, state-of-the-art convention center as well as a Film and Production Center.

U.S. Venture Group's concept of converting the empty and deteriorating Jordan Marsh warehouse has been in the works for several months. It was after meetings with Meredith & Grew and Federated Department Stores concluding that it was a viable project and not just a dream that we finally met with the mayor. That meeting was in early August--not just two or three weeks ago. That meeting was followed by several meetings at both the mayor's office and the office of Quincy 2000. At one particular meeting at Quincy 2000, US Venture Group's team consisted of an official from Raytheon to discuss the benefits and possibilities of deploying a personal rapid transit system that would travel on an elevated (monorail-like) guideway connecting the Red Line directly into the proposed convention center and then continuing throughout Marina Bay, thereby, providing direct access to public transportation to all the residents and office personnel throughout Marina Bay.

The official attendance personally taken that day by Chuck D'Aprix of Quincy 2000 will clearly show that the following distinguished members, in attendance as part of our team included the inventor of the personal transit system, J. Edward Anderson, Ph.D., P.E., Shepard M. Arkin, P.E. and Prof. Charles W. Harris, Professor Emeritus at Harvard University, plus other individuals considered experts in their respective fields. We met that day with D'Aprix, City Councillor Bruce Ayers, and other city officials. At our suggestion at the meeting we asked Ayers, who displayed reluctance in supporting our project, to list whatever concerns that he might have (because at the meeting he could not state his concerns, for whatever reason) at a later date when he would have a chance to fully consider his position.

Following that meeting, we received a memo from Quincy 2000 listing five questions prepared by D'Aprix and Ayers. The questions were very basic and because of the extensive thought process process that we had already put into the project we were able to respond quickly. We never received any additional questions again from either Ayers or any other city official. Without any feedback we believed that our response was satisfactory and we continued to work on other problems concerning the project.

The architectural firm that has been selected to develop the facility is Bergmeyer Associates of Boston. Bergmeyer is the architectural firm of choice for many leading companies around the country, as well as the firm of choice for "The Mall at Chestnut Hill." Among some of the projects they are presently involved with is a 1 million square foot addition to the mall located in Auburn.

For the record, Mr. Trailer has been faculty member at Emerson College for the past 17 years teaching both television performance and production. Emerson College enjoys the reputation as the finest communications school in the United States by industry leaders. In addition to his teaching duties at Emerson, which he considers a labor of love, Rex is involved in a myriad of activities in the film and television industry that also includes RTV, a television production company located in Waltham.

The television show, "Boomtown" provides Rex with the same fond memories that is also shared by the many thousands of children that appeared on the show. Rex Trailer's motivation for this project came from within, he saw the potential of benefit to many thousands that would be employed in the many worthwhile positions that would come as a result of the project. Mr. Trailer may not need another "Boomtown," but the real question is how can a project such as this, with all its economic benefits, be so quickly dismissed by city officials during these particularly tough times.

Politics Charged In School Bid To Change Rules

Nov. 4-10, 1937
56 Years Ago

A proposal before the School Committee to change its rules of procedure came to an impasse when member George Abele charged it would open the way to political control and member Joseph J. Kendrick called it an attempt to oust Supt. James N. Muir.

Abele objected to a rule that would establish subcommittees.

This is only a committee of six," he said, "and it is the duty of each member to keep in touch with all matters. If we delegate authority to subcommittees there is a dangerous possibility of politics creeping into the schools."

Kendrick didn't think very much of a proposed rule change that would permit Muir to attend Committee meetings only at the request of the committee. He questioned its legality and the matter was referred to City Solicitor John D. Smith.

PARKING THREATENED

Napoleon J. Gray threatened to put a fence around his land, which the city used as an access to its 3,000 car municipal parking lot, unless he received $341 in back rent to offset his 1936 and 1937 taxes on the land.

City Auditor George H. Bonsall said he was surprised at the threat because Gray had never billed the city for the rent and there was $200 in the treasury earmarked to pay it in the 1937 city budget.

Joseph Grossman Portrait On Display At Historical Society

The Quincy Historical Society is placing the portrait of Joseph B. Grossman on permanent display as part of its gallery of distinguished Quincy citizens. The portrait will be on view, along with a special exhibit noting his achievements, at the Adams Academy, beginning Friday.

JOSEPH GROSSMAN

In a long, productive life, Grossman, who was born in 1892 and died in 1990, was distinguished in government, business and philanthropy. The first of the Grossman family to be born in America, he, with his father and brothers, was co-founder of the Grossman building supply company. He served as Chairman of the Quincy Board of Registrars of Voters, State Representative from the 3rd Norfolk District, and Governor's Councillor.

He was president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, Community Chest, Red Cross, and Rotary and a co-founder of Temple Beth El and the Jewish Community Center. State-wide, he was an officer and board member of numerous hospitals, colleges and universities and charitable organizations. A member of the Quincy historical Society, he played a vital part in its building drive for the Adams Academy.

Continental Workshop On Children's TV Viewing

Continental Cablevision is inviting parents and educators from Quincy, Milton and Randolph to attend a free workshop to help them teach children the skills they need to critically view television Saturday, Nov. 6, at Boston's World Trade Center.

The program also includes a fair offering information on cable TV's educational programming, a wide range of children's entertainment, and favorite cartoon characters from cable network shows.

Led by a nationally-recognized expert Dr. Renee Hobbs of Babson College and Harvard's Institute on Media Education, the 1 to 3 p.m. "Critical TV Viewing & Your Children" workshop will help parents and educators teach children how to understand and evaluate information they get from television; better manage their viewing; and find stimulating and quality TV programming.

Parents also will view a videotaped presentation of educational innovations in the use of television.

"It's an inescapable fact of life in America today that television plays a major role in children's lives," said Ed Fiddler, Continental's local program director. "As distributors of TV programming, educators and as parents, we have a responsibility to help children use television wisely, so that they become selective and critical viewers."

For those who wish to bring their families, a cable fair from 1 to 5 p.m. will offer educational entertainment, every hour on the hour, including Superstation TBS' Captain Planet, songs from Curtis Coleman, the Massachusetts zoos' "Wildlife on Wheels" program and African music and storytelling from Unu Mondo and Pastiche. the Family Channel's Madeline and Peter Rabbit, Nickelodeon's Magellan, Batly and Duckula will make appearances throughout the afternoon.

Representatives from more than 20 cable TV networks will be available at the fair to show and discuss their educational and family programming.

Because space is limited for the "Critical TV Viewing and Your Children" workshop, advance registration is required. Parents, teachers, school media specialists and administrators may register by calling 1 (800) 280-4782.

The workshop and the Cable Education-Entertainment fair are presented by the Boston Cable Co-Op, a marketing coalition of Greater Boston's three largest cable operators, Cablevision Systems, Continental Cablevision and Time Warner Cable. The event is co-sponsored by The Learning Channel.

Other contributors include Arts & Entertainment, The Family Channel, MTV, Turner networks, The Discovery Channel, The Weather Channel and Black Entertainment Television.

QUINCY RESIDENTS RAKE IN THE SAVINGS

ANNOUNCING QUINCY'S 4th ANNUAL LEAF COMPOSTING PROGRAM AND WE WANT YOUR HELP! WHY?

LAST YEAR ... We composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.

THIS YEAR ... We hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES

2. BAG THEM

We recommend using the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores. They're big, easy-to-fill, recyclable and biodegradable. Plastic bags aren't great - but, we'll take them. Bag only leaves, twigs and grass clippings. No trash. No large branches.

3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.

Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!

Thanks for your help!

Program runs October 25 thru December 3

Salvation Army Santa's Kitchen To Benefit Project Bread

The Salvation Army invites residents to participate in Santa's kitchen to benefit Project Bread.

Organizations and individuals can decorate spoons: wooden spoons, metal spoons, plastic spoons. The spoons will then be displayed and sold at Filene's Basement and the funds given to Project Bread. This organization provides funding to various food pantries and meal programs throughout the state, including the Salvation Army.

The Quincy Temple Corps are taking an intergenerational approach to the project. The seniors in the Adult Day Health Program are making spoons, as are the children in the preschool and afterschool programs. Spoons can be ordered from Project Bread by calling 723-5000. Decorated spoons can be dropped off at the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m.- 4 p.m. They can also be brought to the Spoon Tree at Filene's Basement in Boston Dec. 4 from 11 a.m.-2 p.m.

She is the daughter of Maureen and Robert Kane.

Why do some banks only give home equity loans to people who DON'T really need them?

Don't worry. It doesn't make sense to us, either. That's why we've developed a home equity loan program that's a little easier, for people who may not otherwise qualify. We take a more flexible look at your job and payment histories. We offer terms from 1 to 15 years with payments as low as $50 a month. And there's no appraisal necessary on amounts up to $15,000. So if you're looking for a loan between $5,000 and $25,000, and don't know if you'd qualify for a home equity loan at other banks, talk to us at Fleet. Stop by your local branch office today.

Fleet Bank

We're here to make a difference.

*For example, for a 15 year, $10,000 loan made on 9-1-93, the APR would be 8.95%. You would make 180 monthly payments of $101.43. Hazard insurance is also required. This offer is good only for new Equiloan accounts and cannot be used to pay off existing Fleet debt.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If you were to die tomorrow, would your family know what to do? Is you insurance up to date? Are premiums paid? Are Bank-book, Social Security, V.A. and other important documents all together and does your family know where they are? Is your will current and available? Do you have a list of names, addresses, phone numbers of your brokers, insurance agencies, accountants and lawyers? Does your family know your wishes concerning the type of service you desire?

These are but a few of the many details you may require. We at Deware have literature to help you make certain decisions you might wish to make. Please feel free to call us for printed forms on pre-planning and/or pre-financing or drop by for free copies. Our offices are always open to you and there is no question about funeral service which will not be answered simply, honestly and in strict confidence. This involves no cost or obligation, of course.

Strong Presidents Seek 6th At Lakers

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy football team's defense continues to be impregnable and is a big reason the Presidents have won three games in a row and take a 5-2 record into Friday's 5 p.m. game at Silver Lake.

Quincy held Falmouth to an amazing 42 overall yards in winning, 21-0, last Friday and the defense is getting better and better every week.

The Presidents, winning their second straight shutout, have allowed just three touchdowns in their last five games.

Quincy will be favored Friday night against a Silver Lake team that hasn't won in seven games. The Lakers, who walloped Quincy, 36-8, a year ago, have lost to Duxbury, Weymouth, Falmouth, New Bedford, Barnstable, Taunton and North Quincy.

"Our defense continues to amaze," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer. "They are working well together and they are just getting better and better every week. And the offense has been doing its job, too. We have gained over 300 overall yards in each of our last three games."

The only problem against Falmouth was penalties. The Presidents were hit with 10 penalties, two of them nullifying touchdown runs by Sammy Brown.

"I told the kids they couldn't keep getting hit with so many penalties, especially with Barnstable and North Quincy coming up," said Raymer.

Despite having his two touchdown runs (42 yards in all) nullified by penalties, Brown had another big game, rushing for 118 yards. He also threw a 45-yard pass to Tom Malvesti to set up a touchdown.

Quarterback Mike Bartlett again was outstanding, hitting on seven of eight passes for 130 yards and two touchdowns and rushing for 46 yards.

Malvesti had hit best all-around game as he had six receptions for 166 yards and scored two touchdowns. Mike Elder blocked well and kicked all three extra points.

The Presidents were playing without sophomore standout Terry Bowman, injured two weeks ago against Weymouth.

Quincy caused five turnovers. Jon Gangi had another pass interception and Paul Colleary, who had an excellent two-way game, forced two fumbles, one of which he recovered himself and Ashley Davis recovered the other. Jason Bennett had two sacks and Mike Lombardi, playing a great game in just his second defensively, had a sack, as did Davis.

Also sparking on defense were Mike Feeley, John Green. Bill Dunn, Davis, Gangi, Tim Dowling, Steve Provost and Kevin Carey.

Playing well offensively were Dave D'Olympio, Malvesti, Jason Sova, Mike Sheffer, Peter Kolson. Feeley, Butch Palazze, and Jeff Burrell.

The Presidents took the lead in the second quarter on a four-yard pass from Bartlett to Colleary. Elder kicked the extra point.

Just before the touchdown, Colleary had forced and recovered a fumble on the Falmouth eight.

Just prior to the fumble recovery, Quincy had a first-and-goal at the Falmouth seven but a holding penalty forced it back to the 25, which voided a Brown touchdown run around the right end.

Bartlett hit Elder on a quick slant to the one but Falmouth held, only to hand the ball right back on a fumble following a seven-yard gain by Chris MacDonald.

Quincy added its second touchdown in the final minute of the third quarter when Malvesti, after catching a 45-yard pass from Brown, scored from the one.

Malvesti scored his second touchdown on a 13-yard pass from Bartlett. Elder kicked his third extra point.

"Malvesti is such a great asset to our offense, he's just a great athlete," lauded Raymer. "Falmouth keyed on Brown and Bartlett hurt them with his passing and scrambling ability."

Falmouth reached Quincy territory only once after stopping Brown on a fourth-and-one at midfield. The Clippers paid a heavy price on the play as senior defensive end Steve Femino suffered a broken left tibia.

GOING INTO A STALL

When a car stalls intermittently, the problem can usually be isolated with a diagnostic checkup. To help the auto technician make the correct diagnosis, it is necessary to know under what conditions the engine stalls. Is the engine cold, or does it run normally and only stalls when it is hot? An engine that stalls when it is cold may have a heavy buildup of carbon in its intake manifold. An engine that stalls when it is fully warmed up (and also seems to idle too slowly) may have a defective idle air control motor in the fuel injection system. Some cars also stall when the speedometer cable is broken or disconnected. Because the on-board computer requires an electrical speed signal to reset the idle air control motor, the absence of a signal could cause the idle speed to fluctuate.

HINT: The idle control motor regulates idle speed.

There are never any high pressure tactics used by anyone in our shop so if you need the services of our technicians, we are located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). 10 Quincy Runners In N.Y. Marathon

Ten Quincy runners are scheduled to take part in the New York City Marathon on Sunday, Nov. 14.

They are Mary Lee Caldwell, Ann M. Doggett, Richard B. Doubleday, Jane S. Doyle, Richard Fontaine Jr., Ron Kramer, Daniel C. McGinn, Martin M. Nicholson, Kevin Tenney and Walter D. Burgess Jr.

The runners are being saluted this week by Vermont Pure National Spring Water, whose water is the official bottled water of the marathon.

"The marathon is probably the single event where water is most required. It's absolutely essential to an athlete completing the race," said four-time New York City Marathon winner Bill Rodgers, who also has won the Boston Marathon several times.

Youth Basketball Tryouts Nov. 9-11

The Quincy High School Presidents Youth Basketball teams will hold tryouts for boys in Grades 6-8 Tuesday, Nov. 9 and Thursday, Nov. 11 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the MacLean gym.

Three teams will be selected and fifth grade boys may also try out. The teams will play in the South Shore Youth Basketball League.

Further information can be obtained by calling Bob Cochrane at 471-2746.

Raiders Face Big Test From B-R

After polishing off two winless opponents and improving its record to 3-4, the North Quincy football team faces one of its biggest tests Friday when it hosts Bridgewater-Raynham in a 5 p.m. game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

B-R is having another fine season at 5-2 and has defeated Canton, Quincy, Falmouth, Barnstable and Weymouth, while losing to B.C. High and Plymouth. Last season unbeaten North edged B-R, 3-0.

Junior Shawn Nee had another fine game and provided the heroics for North in last Friday's 28-12 victory over Silver Lake.

Nee rushed for 108 yards, had a 60-yard touchdown run nullified by a clipping penalty and scored the touchdown which clinched the win by running back a punt 65 yards.

"Shawn has been tremendous all season and had another excellent game," North coach Ken McPhee said. "He is one of the finest runners we have had in some time. He has good speed and is shifty and can cut and change speeds. As a sophomore last year he rushed for 600 yards despite missing three games.

"I'm happy with the win, but we made a tremendous amount of mistakes. We just can't stand prosperity. We have been in every game, but I thought we'd do better."

McPhee lauded Dave Pacino and big Brian Raftery for fine two-way performances and also praised linebackers Dave Carney and Tim Zaniboni, Jeremy and Nathan Gott, Justin Dilks, Bill Neutter, Toby Odom, Derrick Epps and Jason Picardi.

North stuck primarily to the ground as Dan Duncan completed three of 12 passes for 43 yards.

Derrick Epps rushed for 47 yards as the Raiders had 217 yards on the ground and had 14 first downs to seven for the Lakers. The Lakers threw eight passes and didn't complete any.

Both teams traded turnovers before North scored the first touchdown of the game. After North recovered a fumble Raftery scored the first TD on a 23-yard run. Kevin Ross kicked the first of his four extra points.

North took advantage of another turnover in the second quarter when Jeremy Gott intercepted a pass and returned it 33 yards for a score.

Silver Lake scored its first touchdown when Mike Feroli, who rushed for 127 yards, scored on a 19-yard run for the first of his two scores.

North's Duncan hit Nathan Gott with a 30-yard pass and, with a Laker penalty tacked on, the Raiders had the ball on the Laker 17. After a penalty Duncan scored on a 19-yard run with 28 seconds left in the half and North had a 21-6 lead at the intermission.

The Lakers cut the gap to 21-12 when Feroli scored his second touchdown on a 21-yard run midway through the third quarter.

That set the stage for Nee's 65-yard punt return with 5:40 left in the game to assure the Raiders of their third win.

Cross Country

North Girls Share Title With Falmouth

The North Quincy girls' cross-country team finished the dual meet season with wins over Bridgewater-Raynham and Quincy ended up as co-champion (with Falmouth) of the Old Colony League with a 7-1 record.

The boys, however, fell on hard times and finished at 0-8, the first winless season in 20 years.

The North girls topped Quincy, 20-41, but Quincy's Liz Sawan won her sixth race. North placed the next five places.

Erin Duggan was second, Laura Blaikie third, Mel Gaziano fourth, Kelly Duggan fifth and Erica Doherty sixth.

Quincy freshman standout Katherine Lencki was seventh, North's Katie McNamara and Colleen Cotter eighth and ninth and Quincy's Laura Lee Summer 10th.

In head-to-head competition North lost to Falmouth by one point as both teams finished at 7-1.

The Quincy boys defeated North Quincy, 20-35, for their first win in four years.

Quincy's Jim Lencki was the individual winner, North's Eric Torvi was second, followed by Doug Gallagher, Matt Langille and Damon Claco of Quincy, Steve Cannon of North, Hubert Lam of Quincy, Terrence Roche, Brian O'Donnell and Greg Burke of North.

The North girls earlier had defeated Bridgewater-Raynham, 15-42, sweeping the first five places for the shutout.

Erin Duggan was the winner, followed by Blaikie, Gaziano, Doherty and Kelly Duggan. Sophomore Cotter finished ninth.

The boys lost, 19-44, to B-R, the second rated team in the league. North's Torvi ran his best race of the year, taking second place in 17:22 over the grueling three-mile course. Sophomore Cannon placed 10th.

North and Quincy competed in the OCL conference championships Tuesday at Silver Lake.

Both teams also will participate in the Mass. Coaches' Invitational Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at Franklin Park. The meet features freshman, sophomore and junior-senior divisions with medals 30 deep.

Reardon Shines At Stonehill

Former Quincy High football player Bill Reardon is having an outstanding season as a junior corner back for Stonehill College's nationally-ranked (Div. II) defensive unit.

A second team ECFC selection last year, Reardon has 35 total tackles after six games, three pass breakups, one interception, a fumble forced and a fumble recovery.

Mullin Says No High Speed Chase In Fatal Accident

The driver of the red Fort Escort the officers had been following, 40-year-old Marianne Sullivan of Taffrail Road--who is not related to either of the officers--was arrested at around 1000 Sea St. shortly after the accident occurred. Mullen said she apparently had continued traveling east on Sea Street when she lost control of her car and smashed into "an abutment and fence." She then deserted the vehicle and began walking down the street, Mullen said.

Although it appears there was another person in the Ford Escort before the accident, Mullen said, only Sullivan was arrested at the scene.

Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin said Sullivan pleaded innocent Monday in Quincy District Court to charges of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, operating to endanger, and leaving the scene of an accident. A pre-trial conference has been scheduled for Nov. 30 at 9 a.m., Tobin added.

Mullen said that he has contacted members of both O'Leary's and Murray's families and expressed his sympathies. He paid tribute to all those who offered assistance at the scene of the accident and said that despite the tragedy, it appears that the two police officers involved in the accident followed proper procedure in the situation.

Mullen also told the City Council that in the instance of any kind of a high-speed chase, it is the policy of the Quincy Police Department to put the safety of the public before the pursuit of a suspect.

Kolson and other councillors expressed sympathy toward the victims of the accident and their families and thanked Mullen for the investigation. Kolson said the Public Safety Committee will meet "in one or two or three weeks" when the investigation is more complete.

Vertical Extensions On Dwellings Approved

An ordinance amendment that will allow vertical extensions to be placed on city dwellings was passed Monday night by the City Council.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who first introduced the ordinance change June 21, said the amendment will allow residents to put dormers or square off roofs on their homes. He added that such changes were allowed until a recent land court ruling that vertical extensions are not allowed in a non-conforming area.

Cheney said the decision will affect single family homes zoned Residential "A" and multi-family homes zoned Residential "B" and "C."

Ayers Holds Key Vote

Cahill, Cheney Deadlocked For Council Presidency

Councillors Tim Cahill and Michael Cheney reportedly are deadlocked for the City Council presidency with Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers holding the deciding vote.

Five council votes are needed to win the post, the second highest city elective office to that of the mayor.

Both Cahill and Cheney have four votes each according to close sources.

Lined up with Cahill reportedly are Councillor at-large Joseph LaRaia, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, current council president who cannot succeed himself.

With Cheney reportedly are Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio.

With this scenario, Ayers holds the key vote which will decide whether Cahill or Cheney will be the next council president.

"I haven't made a decision yet," Ayers told The Sun just before press time.

"I want to sit down with each of them and discuss Ward 6 and city-wide issues with them. I want to see what kind of a direction they plan to take the council and the city in the next two years.

"Right now it would be premature for me to say I am leaning to one or the other."

Two years ago, Ayers held the swing vote that gave the council presidency to Phelan.

Minor Changes To House Districts

Quincy Still Dominant In New Senate District

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy would remain the dominant community in a newly created Norfolk-Plymouth County senatorial district while the city's three House districts would undergo a minor shift under new redistricting plans.

The plans, adopted late Monday night by the Senate and House, were on the desk of Gov. William Weld Tuesday. The governor, who has indicated a preference for more majority-minority districts, will either approve the new plans or send them back to lawmakers for revision.

The new districts, which would remain for the next 10 years, were redrawn because of shifts in the population.

Under the Senate plan, Sen. Michael Morrissey would be placed in a new Norfolk and Plymouth Senate district. He would represent Quincy, Precincts 1-5, 8, and 10-12 in Braintree, the town of Holbrook, Precincts 3 and 4 in Abington, Precincts 1-7 in Rockland and the town of Norwell.

Morrissey would lose Precincts 6, 7 and 9 in Braintree, located in the East Braintree area, and the town of Avon. Sen. Brian MacDonald of Weymouth would pick up the remaining Braintree precincts and Sen. Paul White of Boston would add Avon.

Under the House plan, Rep. Ron Mariano would be the only Quincy legislator to lose part of his home base: Ward 3 Precinct 1 to fellow Quincy legislator Rep. Steve Tobin.

In its place, Mariano would add two precincts in Holbrook, and continue to represent his five other precincts in Quincy and six precincts in Weymouth. As a result, he would in effect represent more people in Weymouth than in Quincy.

Minor changes are also proposed for the districts of Rep. Michael Bellotti and Tobin. Bellotti and Tobin would essentially swap two precincts: Ward 5 Precinct 4 (Beechwood Knoll) would go from Bellotti to Tobin while Ward 4 Precinct 1 (West Quincy) would go from Tobin to Bellotti.

By picking up Ward 4 Precinct 1, Bellotti would also add a precinct in Randolph.

Under state redistricting guidelines, a district comprising more than one community must be contiguous. In other words, the communities within that district must share the same border at some point.

Although pleased that Quincy was not divided, Morrissey said he was outraged over the splitting of Braintree. He and other legislators were also angered by Boston-based incumbents who sought to reach their district quotas

5 Clinics Cancelled

Enough Vaccine For One More Flu Clinic

The Quincy Health Department will hold a Flu Clinic Thursday, Nov. 18 from 2 to 3 p.m. at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., Quincy.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said that although it was originally announced that the department had exhausted its flu vaccine supply at a clinic held last Saturday at the health center, the city was able to obtain just enough for another hour-long clinic.

The commissioner noted that the city has already held nine large public clinics (including last Saturday's) and two smaller ones for city employees. Each of the larger clinics received about 100 more people than the clinics held last year, she added.

"The reason for the increase in participation is that with the flu season predicted to come earlier than ever this year, the state Department of Public Health had recommended people to receive their vaccine by Oct. 30," she said.

Although the health department is now able to hold the additional clinic, Gallahue said, five others had to be cancelled because of the abnormally high demand for vaccine.

Those originally scheduled that will not be held include: Sawyer Towers on Martensen Street, Nov. 16; Houghs Neck Community Center, Nov. 18; Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Nov. 19; JFK Health Center, Nov. 24 and Dec. 2.

No Recount For Barry?

Sean Barry has until Friday to file for a recount in his eight-vote loss to Christine Cedrone in last week's School Committee race.

Barry had given no indication as to whether he would seek the recount at The Sun's press time Tuesday. Efforts to reach him were unsuccessful.

The fact he had yet to take out the necessary papers led to speculation he would not seek a recount.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said that Barry would need to obtain the names of 10 registered voters per ward for the recount. Deadline for filing the papers is Friday at 5 p.m.

SEAN BARRY

Barry could seek a city-wide recount or certain wards.

Shea estimates a city-wide recount for School Committee would cost an estimated $4,000 to $7,000.

Ron Mariano and JoAnn Bragg topped the six-candidate field with votes of 8,918 and 8,479 respectively. Cedrone took the third seat with a vote of 5,716 and Barry was fourth with 5,708.

From The Firehouse

By
Quincy Deputy Fire Chief Paul Cuddy

Fire safety is a topic that every citizen in Quincy should be aware of and try to learn more about. Statistics begin to make us aware of the seriousness of the threat of fire: four to five thousand fire deaths annually in the U.S., thousands more maimed from fire injuries, property losses in the excess of $1 billion annually. In this the first of a series of periodic articles on fire safety, I would like to relate a poem that truly depicts the horror of uncontrolled fire. The author, unfortunately, is unknown.

The Enemy

I am more powerful than the combined enemies of the world.

I have destroyed more men, women and children than all the wars of all nations.

I massacre thousands of people every year.

I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest guns.

In the U.S. alone, I steal over one billion dollars each year.

I spare no one, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike.

The young and the old, the strong and the weak.

Widows know me to their everlasting sorrow.

I loom up in such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labor.

I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently.

You are warned against me, but you heed me not.

I am relentless, merciless and cruel.

I am everywhere!

In the home, in the schools, in the factory, on land, in the air, and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, yet few seek me out to destroy me.

I crush, I maim, I devastate.

I will give you nothing and rob you of all you have.

I AM YOUR WORST ENEMY! I AM RAMPANT FIRE!

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

•Granted a request from the North Quincy High School Soccer Boosters for a permit to conduct a Canning Drive Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 23-24.

•Granted a request from St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church, 157 Beale St. for a one-day liquor license for its annual Greek School PTA Family Dance Saturday, Nov. 13 from 8 p.m. to midnight.

•Granted a request from KBR Realty Trust d/b/a Space Age Service Inc., 450 Southern Artery (Brian Bearde) to increase its capacity for underground combustibles and flammables from 16,000 gallons to 30,000 gallons, and for an additional 2,000 gallons to be stored above ground.

•Granted a request for the transfer of the Common Victualer License of B & B Deli, 171 West St. (Brian Bersani) to Gail's Variety, 171 West St. (Gail O'Riordan).

THE LAST VOTE--Tom Gilmartin, 80, former Ward 6 City Councillor and long-time political analyst, casts his final vote in a Quincy election at the Atlantic Middle School. Gilmartin, who has been tracking Quincy politics for 60 years, has sold his Bayfield Rd. home. He and his wife will be moving to a Weymouth apartment.

"GREAT ITALIAN FOOD WITH WONDERFUL SERVICE ..."

Here's what the Boston Globe (Sunday, Oct. 24) had to say about Siros Restaurant:

"It offered great Italian food with wonderful service at decent prices. The decor was hip, the bay view was picturesque, the presentation of food was creative ... Siros is all class, from its chic black chairs to the waiters' black outfits to the general friendliness of the place ... Siros is clearly destined to become a hot-spot for residents of Quincy and beyond."

Rock Concert At Armory Approved By Board

By MICHAEL WHALEN

For the second consecutive year, Squantum-based Scarborough Productions will host a rock concert at the National Guard Armory on Hancock St.

The permit for the concert was granted Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

Virginia Sindelar, head of Scarborough Productions, said this year's concert has a second goal in addition to providing a fun-filled, alcohol and drug-free evening for area teenagers. Scarborough Productions is working in conjunction with the Committee to Establish Youth Centers, which is headed by Citywide Parents Council President and School Committee member-elect JoAnn Bragg, and proceeds from the concert will benefit the future establishment of youth centers in the city, according to Sindelar.

The concert will be held Thursday, Dec. 30 from 7 to 11 p.m. Entertainment will be provided by four bands; a local high school band, a professional Quincy band, and two professional Boston bands, she said. Pepsi-Cola will be available for refreshment, she added.

Security will be provided by National Guardsmen, state and Quincy police, as well as parent and teacher volunteers who will arrive at 6 p.m. the night of the concert, Sindelar noted. She added that the event will cost approximately $8,600 and although she is unsure where some of the funding will come from, Impact Quincy has already donated a grant of $2,500 to the concert.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, who attended last year's concert, spoke in favor of the request.

"Everything was in tip-top shape last year, although they could have had more people." Shea said. Sindelar admitted that attendance was low at last year's concert, but added that this year she hopes to fill the armory, which has a seating capacity of 800.

Police Chief Francis Mullen echoed Shea's comments.

"When people work together instead of battling one another, there's a successful mission for all," said Mullen. "I'm happy with the format, and I'm sure we'll all work together."

Tickets for the concert, which is not limited to Quincy students, are $5 apiece and will be sold at the city's high schools and at the door or may be obtained by calling 328-0677.

MIKE ALBRECHT, center, of the Beale St. Papa Gino's Restaurant, accepts a plaque for his longtime support of Quincy Recreation Department programs from Park and Recreation Board Chairman Kathleen Mitchell as Recreation Director Barry Welch looks on. Albrecht has provided sponsorships and products for such youth programs as the Reebok tennis clinic, annual arts and crafts display, six on six soccer, Pepsi Hot Shots, whiffle ball tournament, three on three basketball and other championship events sponsored by the Recreation Department. The restaurant has also assisted in the Cleaner, Greener program, the restoration of Collins Rest-A-While, and a community cleanup of Mass Fields Park.

Planning Board Postpones Home Quarters Application

Due to a scheduling conflict, the Home Quarters PUD Special Permit application will not be on the Planning Board agenda for Tuesday, Nov. 16.

The matter will be placed on the board's agenda for the next meeting after that date.

Veterans Day Regulations On Alcoholic Beverages

Regulations regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages on Veterans' Day (today) were announced Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

Hotels, restaurants, taverns, clubs, package stores, manufacturers, wholesalers and importers may sell or deliver alcoholic beverages. In addition, package stores were allowed to stay open until 11:30 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday).

City Clerk Joseph Shea said at Tuesday's board meeting that he receives numerous calls asking about the regulations before most major holidays and he wanted to increase community awareness by announcing them publicly.

WHEN THE SANDMAN GOES ON STRIKE

Ever felt too tired to sleep? Do you routinely wake up too early in the morning? Years ago, you might have been matter-of-factly diagnosed with insomnia, handed a sleeping pill prescription, and sent on your way. Today the diagnosis and treatment of sleep disorders is a highly developed field, with new discoveries occurring all the time. There are three basic types of disorders: insomnia (difficulty falling or remaining sleeping), excessive daytime sleepiness, and parasomnia (unusual events, such as sleepwalking). Treatment for a sleep problem might include medication, behavior modification, and education for the patient and those close to him or her (spouses, parents, coworkers, etc.).

P.S. Sleep problems can be primary disorders or the result of other medical or psychiatric problems.

Try sipping a warm, non-caffinated beverage at bedtime, or slipping into a soothing bath in order to sleep better at night. Avoid drinking alcohol close to bedtime, however. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We specialize in the treatment of heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Office hours are by appointment, and our new, more comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Cahill Strong Mayoral Contender

Tim Cahill's third-in-a-row first place finish in the city council at-large race last week positions him as the leading contender for the mayor's office.

CAHILL

Whether he would take on popular incumbent James Sheets or could beat him are questions without answers at this time.

But there is little doubt that if Sheets decides not to run for a fourth term in 1995, Cahill would be the man anyone else with mayoral dreams would have to beat.

Cahill topped the five-candidate field with 8,860 votes, 1,020 ahead of second place Joseph LaRaia and 1,308 in front of Michael Cheney who also has his eye in the mayor's office.

By finishing first in his third consecutive election, Cahill matched Arthur Tobin who turned that political hat trick in the 1971-73-75 elections. The next time out in 1977, Tobin was elected mayor, defeating Joseph LaRaia who was the incumbent mayor by a 5,000 vote margin.

TOBIN

So Cahill would seem to have history on his side right now.

Cheney's mayoral ambitions were somewhat dashed as he slipped in the at-large race after finishing second in the two previous elections. In finishing third this year he was only 632 votes above first time candidate Charles McIntyre.

CHENEY

Cheney's claim that "the old McIntyre machine was out to get me," has most observers shaking their heads in puzzlement. They didn't see any evidence of it. And they don't think the claim makes much sense.

If there had been a target in behalf of McIntyre, son of late Mayor James McIntyre, the most likely one would have been Joseph LaRaia.

Not because of the long-time McIntyre-LaRaia rivalry. But because LaRaia was considered by most political observers to be the weakest of the three incumbents and thus the easier of the three to move out.

Cahill and Cheney were conceded the one and two spots.

So why would McIntyre followers be out gunning for Cheney? And they weren't out gunning for LaRaia either.

McIntyre probably campaigned the hardest and longest of the five at-large candidates knocking on doors all over town. It paid off with a most impressive political debut.

Cheney's claim just doesn't seem to hold water.

IF TIM CAHILL was the big winner last week, Joe LaRaia was right up there, too.

LaRAIA

He was being written off by many of the so-called experts who remembered his fourth place finish two years ago.

Only fate put him on the ballot this year as an incumbent when as the runner up in the last election he inherited the seat vacated by Patricia Toland to become assistant city clerk.

LaRaia didn't campaign well in 1991. But this year he did and he came roaring back for a new political life.

"I really worked this time," he says.

Two years ago he didn't spend much time in Wollaston but he did this year and it paid off. He also did well in Ward 6, and scored big in Wards 2 and 4 his traditional strongholds.

There is no doubt that he benefited from the fact that there were five other candidates of Italian descent on the ballot. Ethnic pride always helps.

But he deserves credit for what actually was a stunning comeback. He worked for it and it showed.

CHARLES McINTYRE certainly has nothing to be ashamed of in his first bid for elective office. Even though he has a well known political name, he personally deserves a good part of the credit. He covered a lot of ground campaigning and won votes from people who didn't know his famous father and from newcomers who never heard of him.

McINTYRE

McIntyre gave Cheney a good run for the third spot, leading Cheney in Ward 2 by 28 votes, Ward 4 by 55 and Ward 5 by 189.

Cheney had a 47 note advantage over McIntyre in Ward 3 and 93 in Ward 6.

So, in those five wards, McIntyre had a 132-vote edge.

But then came Cheney's home Ward 1 which gave him 2,057 votes to McIntyre's 1,293 and assure him of the third spot. Some 610 of those votes came in his Houghs Neck stronghold, Precinct 5.

McIntyre looks like a comer.

SPEAKING OF COMERS, young Michael D'Amico looks like one, too. D'Amico, who is 18 (going-on-40 we say because of his maturity) gave Ward 4 incumbent Tom Fabrizio a good race running only 277 votes short. He'll be heard from in the future.

D'AMICO

PERHAPS THE MOST disappointed candidate last week was Mary Collins, former Norfolk County Commissioner and school committeewoman, who ran fifth in the city council at-large race.

COLLINS

A consistent top vote getter in the past, many observers thought she would win the third seat—the one occupied by Joe LaRaia. But it wasn't to be.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, 23 and only five years out of high school, came on strong from a fourth place finish in the preliminary election to take the third School Committee seat, edging Sean Barry by just eight votes. The Republican party has great hopes for her.

CEDRONE

RON MARIANO and JoAnn Bragg didn't surprise anyone in their victories. They were considered the two strongest candidates and proved so, taking the first and second spots quite easily.

THE McINTYRE-LARAIA families and forces have been Quincy's political version of the Hatfields and the McCoys for many years.

The late Mayor James McIntyre and Joseph LaRaia were long-time political enemies.

But apparently time changes things and heals old wounds.

On election night last week after the final results were in, Charles McIntyre drove over to LaRaia's home with his wife, Sheila, to congratulate LaRaia on his victory.

"I thought that was a nice gesture," says LaRaia. "That's a fine quality."

through the acquisition of suburban voting blocks.

Under the new plan, the number of Boston-based senators would rise from four to seven.

"The outward push into the suburbs would be unnecessary if Boston would face up to the fact that they have a declining population," Morrissey said. "Boston is now represented by seven senators making up approximately 20 percent of the Senate while the population of Boston is 10 percent of the state total."

Morrissey said he believes the new districting plan was drawn intentionally to hurt some legislators who do not support Senate President Billy Bulger. Bulger is being challenged for the presidency by Sen. William Keating who has the support of Morrissey.

"Politically, it didn't hurt me at all because I still have 80 percent of my district. I'm outraged over the entire process.

"I'm not outraged at what I got. I'm outraged at how they treated the people of Braintree," Morrissey said.

Mariano said he was disappointed to lose a Quincy precinct but realized another plan may have done further political harm to him and the city. He noted Quincy was destined to lose some representation because the 1990 federal census showed the city's population had dipped to 84,985 voters.

New House district is must equal 36,700 citizens within two and a half percent plus or minus. New Senate districts must total 150,411 or fall within the same margin of error.

"There was a plan that had me losing two precincts in Quincy and taking all of Holbrook," Mariano said Tuesday. "That would have been a real nightmare. After the first plan, I was thrilled with the second plan," Mariano said.

"I'm disappointed that I didn't keep six precincts in Quincy but I can live with it," Mariano said, adding he will work hard to learn the issues of Holbrook.

Bellotti and Tobin also gave the new plan lukewarm approval. Each said they welcome the opportunity to meet and represent new constituents.

"I didn't want to lose (Ward) 5 (Precinct) 4 but it's staying in Quincy," Bellotti said. "I'm disappointed because I've enjoyed representing these people but I look forward to representing the people of Ward 4 Precinct 1 and learning their concerns.

"Overall, relative to what has happened to a lot of other districts, I'm not disappointed."

Tobin agreed.

"I think the new redistricting plan is favorable to the City of Quincy and that's what I'm concerned about."

"I think of it as an opportunity to meet the constituents in my new precincts. I look forward to going out over the next couple of months and knocking on doors and meeting my new constituents," Tobin said.

One observer said he believes the governor will accept the House version because it creates three minority legislative districts, including the first Hispanic district. However, Weld may send the Senate plan back because it calls for only one minority district and the governor prefers at least two.

A Tribute To Paul Hogan

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The recent passing of Paul Hogan should be noted by readers of The Quincy Sun because of the important role he played in our city.

At an age when many people would consider retiring from community activities, Paul and his wife, Agnes, became vital and active participants. I first met Paul 15 years ago at the opening of the Hancock St. headquarters of the Bellotti for Attorney General campaign. He subsequently volunteered for all our campaigns and became a cherished friend and valued political adviser.

Besides serving as chairman of our Boston fund-raiser every year, for 10 years he and Agnes coordinated our weekly Friday morning constituent tours at City Hall. In that capacity he handled constituent inquiries and eventually did the same for the City Council.

Mayor McCauley recognized Paul's abilities when he named him to the Rent Grievance Board--a position he filled with the same seriousness and fairness that he brought to all his assignments.

As an honorary ambassador of goodwill, Paul helped host a number of visiting foreign dignitaries to our city and always seemed to "speak their language," although it was Agnes interpreted for him during the reception for the Compte De la Fayette.

He was a man of unique qualities--always someone you were happy to be with. Despite a number of illnesses, he never complained and each setback seemed to make him stronger.

One can never seem to say all the right things in tribute to a deceased friend. We will always remember him--his goodness of spirit, his good example, his intolerance of prejudice and unfairness, his strong religious belief, his youthful sense of humor and his devotion to his wife, children and grandchildren.

Those who were in that circle of family and friends know how fortunate we were to share in the life of Paul Hogan.

QHA Purchases West Quincy Land For Vets Housing

Nov. 11-17, 1947 46 Years Ago

The Quincy Housing Authority signed an option to purchase three acres of land on West St., West Quincy, on which to construct 13 or 14 four-family buildings for a $400,000 veterans housing project.

Frank C. Hendry, executive secretary of the QHA, said the site, which is on land owned by Quincy police officer James J. Sullivan, has been unofficially approved by the architectural advisor of the State Housing Board.

Hendry said the authority decided to build the whole project on one site instead of scattering it around the city because of the construction economies that could be effected.

Meanwhile, the City Council passed a resolution asking the mayor to submit an additional loan order for $600,000 to bring the amount available for veterans' housing up to $1 million.

Councillor Frank N. Orcutt, who introduced the order, pointed out what Watertown was spending $1.4 million, Worcester $2 million and Springfield $1.5 million while Quincy's $4000,000 was far down the list.

Councillor David J. Crowley criticized his colleagues for their refusal to consider Snug Harbor in Germantown as a veterans' housing site, leaving the city faced with a shortage of possible locations.

"The Council did not see fit to pass anything until just before the election," he said. "Now look at some of the sites they are putting pressure on the Housing Authority to purchase — a hole, a rock pile and a swamp."

When Roy and Amy Johnson told us what they were paying to live in their three-room apartment, it didn't make sense to us either. So we took a closer look at Roy and Amy, their payment history, and their life. We saw things in Roy and Amy that other banks failed to see in their numbers. And now Roy and Amy see a future with a home. Their own home. Paying less on their monthly mortgage payment than they used to pay on their rent. If you're like Roy and Amy and would like to see yourself in a home of your own, stop by your local Fleet branch office today. Because sometimes owning your own home isn't a matter of having more money, but spending the money you do have a little differently.

STARTING MONDAY, OCTOBER 25th
QUINCY RESIDENTS RAKE IN THE SAVINGS
ANNOUNCING QUINCY'S 4th ANNUAL LEAF COMPOSTING PROGRAM AND WE WANT YOUR HELP! WHY?
LAST YEAR ... We composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.
THIS YEAR ... We hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.
HOW CAN YOU HELP?
1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES
2. BAG THEM
We recommend using the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores. They're big, easy-to-fill, recyclable and biodegradable. Plastic bags aren't great - but, we'll take them. Bag only leaves, twigs and grass clippings. No trash. No large branches.
3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.
Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!
Thanks for your help!
Program runs October 25 thru December 3

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Since the birth of the republic, millions of Americans have died for their country on the field of battle. Millions more have placed themselves as a living shield between their country and their enemies, emerging unscathed through the benevolence of a Merciful Creator.

On Veteran's Day, we honor the dead and the living whose actions have testified to their courage and devotions to our country. We honor their heroism . . . We give thanks for their sacrifice, and we share if only briefly and inadequately - the grief of loved ones who survive them.

Let us on this Veteran's Day remember that we have preserved our freedom only through the continued willingness of brave men and women to risk the sacrifices of their lives for its sake.

On Veteran's Day, we honor them all; those who wore a uniform in days past and those who wear it today. We honor them with a recognition of a debt that can never be repaid. It is beyond price . . .

Roydon Burke, 91

Award-Winning Photographer, Poet; Owned Insurance Co. In Quincy

A private funeral service for Roydon Burke, 91, of Quincy, was held.

Mr. Burke died Nov. 6 at Quincy Hospital.

Owner and operator of the former Roydon Burke Insurance Co. in Quincy, he retired in 1934. He was formerly associated with the Royal Indemnity Co.

He was the grandson of the late Theophilus King, a Quincy banker and philanthropist and a descendant of Abigail Adams.

An award-winning photographer and poet, he took up photography seriously in 1931 after a winning a bout with tuberculosis. He had many invitational and one-man shows and his works, taken mostly within a 10-mile radius of Quincy, were exhibited in the Synergism photographic gallery on Newbury Street in Boston. His prints are hung in 34 different countries.

A picture he prized was taken of his daughter, Janet Mann of Quincy, on a rainy night at the stairway of the old Quincy railroad station.

He received three prizes in Norfolk Camera Club competition in 1951 and was a five-star exhibitor in the Photographic Society of America. In 1975 his print was chosen as one of 20 to represent the United States in world cup competition.

He was elected president of the South Shore Camera Club in 1952. He was a member of the Boston Camera Club where he learned many of his photographic skills, the Quincy Camera Club and the Royal Photo Society of Canada, and was an associate of the Royal Photographic Society of Great Britain. He was listed in "Who's Who of the East."

Born and raised in Quincy, he was a graduate of Milton Academy. He received a bachelor of arts degree in 1923 from Harvard University where he was a member of the editorial board of the Harvard Lampoon and a contributor to the Harvard Advocate.

He published a volume of verse in 1925 entitled "Fantasy and Other Poems" and received first prize in a contest sponsored by the American Poetry Association in 1929 for his poem entitled "Unity."

A member of the Quincy Poets Group, he also wrote humorous pieces and had his article published in nationally-known magazines.

He was a member of the American Numismatic Club, the Neighborhood Club and the Harvard Club and participated in the Quincy Senior Olympics. He sang with the Wollaston Glee Club, was a member of the board of governors of Stoney Brae Golf Club, and was a member of social and athletic groups in Boston and Quincy.

Besides his daughter, Mr. Burke is survived by many friends.

Burial was private.

Funeral arrangements were by the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

Donations may be made to the Nature Conservancy, 79 Milk St., Suite 300, Boston, MA 02139.

'The Way Up' Director Discusses Teen Violence

The Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, director of the local youth program called "The Way Up," spoke recently to Protestant ministers from across the state on the subject, "Teen Violence: What's Happening and How Can We Help?"

The talks were part of a program for ministers held at Trinity Church in Northborough and sponsored by the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ and the American Baptist Churches of Massachusetts.

The Way Up, a church-sponsored program for young people without a church connection, is located at First Baptist Church of Wollaston. Meetings, which are open to boys and girls age 11 to 17, are scheduled throughout the week.

The Way Up offers teen-agers opportunities for community service, counseling, advocacy, home visits, and programs in Bible study, art and worship. It also provides a chaplaincy service to young people referred by officials as the Juvenile Session of the Quincy District Court.

Dr. Langevin spoke recently at the Maplewood Baptist Church in Malden. He described the work he and a number of adult volunteers are doing with young people from the South Shore in The Way Up.

Raiders Host Taunton With Momentum-Plus

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team, after sloshing its way to its biggest win of the season, a 12-3 decision over Bridgewater-Raynham last Friday night in the pouring rain at Veterans Memorial Stadium and evening its record at 4-4, will host Taunton Friday night at 7 p.m. at the stadium, hoping to take a four-game win streak into the Thanksgiving game with Quincy.

North's defense was spectacular against B-R as it twice stopped the Trojans with outstanding goal line stands and halted the Trojans no less than 14 times inside its 20.

The win, the third in a row for the Raiders, ended any outside hopes B-R had of winning the Old Colony League title.

Taunton comes in with a 3-4-1 record, having defeated Durfee, Silver Lake and Coyle-Cassidy, tying Falmouth and losing to Quincy, Plymouth, Weymouth and Barnstable.

North Quincy was held to 10 plays in the first half but in the second half Shawn Nee showed no concern for the horrible footing as he rushed for 150 yards and both Raider touchdowns.

"It doesn't matter how the footing is, Shawn runs the same way," said Coach Ken McPhee. "You couldn't tell that he was running through all that mud. He did a lot of running behind Brian Raftery (6-5, 260 pounds), but also did a lot on his own.

"The defense was just superb. Dave Pacino played his usual super two-way game and had a key sack on one of our goal line stands. Raftery was just unbelievable both ways and Justin Dilks, Sean Halpin, Glenn Peterson, Dave Carney and Peter Fitzpatrick were outstanding."

Carney had a fumble recovery, eight unassisted tackles and six assists, Nathan Gott had a crucial fumble recovery at the start of the second half and MacNgutter saved a touchdown with a tackle at the goal line. Keith Martinson did an outstanding job at safety. Jason Picardi and Jeremy Gott also played well.

North was in trouble right at the start. On the first play from scrimmage after the opening kickoff, Dan Duncan's pass was intercepted by Jeff DiMarzio at midfield.

The Trojans controlled the ball and drove to the North 19 but were stopped there as Pacino sacked the quarterback.

The Raiders were stopped and Kevin Ross punted and B-R had a first down on North's 44.

B-R again drove downfield and a pass interference call against North gave the Trojans a first down on the one-yard line. Here the Raider defense rose up and held.

North got to the 22 but a holding penalty set it back to its seven. Another punt went to North's 25 and B-R drove to a first down on the Raider six. Again North held and B-R had to be satisfied with a 24-yard field goal by Rich Ennis.

North finally scored in the last quarter. Nee did the bulk of the ball carrying as the Raiders staged a fine drive with Nee scoring from the one.

North got off a short kick and B-R had the ball on the 40. One the first play from scrimmage Nathan Gott fell on a fumble at midfield.

Nee carried eight times in a row but North was stopped and Ross got off a fine punt that rolled dead on the B-R three-yard line.

The second Raider touchdown, with time running out, came the easy way.

On fourth down B-R went to the air and DiMarzio's pass was incomplete and North had the ball on the five. Two plays later, with seconds remaining, Nee scored his second touchdown from the five.

Current officers are president Jim Colclough; secretary Ed Vena and treasurer Giordani.

North Jayvees Win 6th

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team improved its record to 6-1 with victories over Don Bosco and Silver Lake.

The Raiders defeated Don Bosco, 32-14, as Brian Walsh had two touchdowns. Sean Dolbeare hit Brendon Welch with a 40-yard touchdown pass and Chris Geary plunged over from the one for a score.

The Raiders added four points as they nailed ball carriers in the end zone for two safeties.

North had to come from behind to top Silver Lake, 22-14, as the Lakers led, 14-8, at the half.

Silver Lake scored first on a 50-yard run, but Dolbeare tied it up with a 13-yard run.

The Lakers regained the lead but the extra point try was stopped and it was 14-8 at halftime, the Lakers leading.

The second half was all North Quincy. Walsh, a freshman who rushed for 150 yards, raced 65 yards to tie the score.

The Raider defense stopped the Lakers cold and Dolbeare connected on a 20-yard scoring pass to Eric Zimmerman for the winning touchdown.

North has Bridgewater-Raynham, Taunton and Quincy remaining on its schedule.

Presidents Can Spoil Barnstable's Hopes

The Quincy football team (6-2), fresh from its fourth win in a row and third straight shutout, can scramble the Old Colony League title chase when it plays at Barnstable Saturday afternoon at 1:30.

The Presidents, who defeated Silver Lake, 20-0, in the pouring rain last Friday night at Kingston, can spoil Barnstable's hopes of a Super Bowl berth with a victory.

Barnstable's Red Raiders handed Plymouth its first defeat, 14-6, last Saturday and can clinch the Div. 1B Super Bowl berth with wins over Quincy and Falmouth.

Barnstable (6-1-1) also defeated Bp. Stang, Weymouth, North Quincy, Taunton and Silver Lake, tied West Haven, Conn. and lost only Bridewater-Raynham.

"I'm glad this game is meaningful and we are looking forward to it," said Quincy coach Jack Raymer. "We are going to be in a real battle and our defense, which has been amazing (three touchdowns allowed in the last six games), faces a real test in Barnstable's (Jason) O'Neil. He's one of the finest running backs in the league. We watched them defeat Plymouth and they played a great two-way game.

"However, the way our defense has been playing and the way Mike Bartlett has been running the team at quarterback and the way Sammy Brown and Mike Elder have been running, I think we have a real chance of upsetting them."

The defense was again superb against Silver Lake and held the winless Lakers to 79 overall yards. Meanwhile, the Presidents rushed for 168 yards and added 70 passing yards.

"The conditions were horrendous, but Brown ran well again and rushed for 96 yards," Raymer said. "Bartlett played well, rushing for 45 yards and completed only one of three passes, but that was good for 70 yards and a touchdown. Elder also ran well in the mud."

Quincy dominated the second half and Silver Lake ran just nine plays in the half. After the second half kickoff the Presidents drove 88 yards, eating up nine minutes, and scored their third TD.

Defensively the Presidents were led by Kevin Carey, who had eight unassisted tackles; Jason Bennett, sophomore Bill Dunn and Mike Feeley.

Also standing out were John Green, Mike Lombardi, Paul Colleary, Bryan Frazer, who did a fine job replacing the ill Ashley Davis at linebacker; Tim Dowling, Jon Gangi, who had his fourth pass interception in the last three games to halt the Lakers' only threat; and Steve Provost.

Offensively Dave D'Olympio, Peter Kolson, Butch Palazza, Feeley, Jason Sova, Rom Malvesti, Colleary and Bennett had fine games.

Quincy got on the scoreboard first, taking advantage of a Laker fumble on the Laker 40. On the third play, Bartlett raced 33 yards up the middle for the first score of the game midway through the first quarter. Elder kicked the extra point.

Early in the second quarter, despite the running game clicking, Raymer decided to go to the air and Bartlett threw a strike to Sova, who got behind the Laker secondary and went on to score, completing a 70-yard scoring play. Elder kicked his second extra point.

In the third quarter, following the second half kickoff, Quincy staged its time-consuming drive and Elder scored from the one for the final points of the game.

Cross Country

North Girls Third In Title Meet

The Old Colony Conference girls' championship meet was supposed to be a battle between co-champions North Quincy and Falmouth, but Plymouth refused to cooperate, placing five girls in the top 15 to win the meet with 56 points.

Falmouth was second with 63 points and North Quincy third with 69.

"This is the best team I've ever coached and we only got third," said a surprised coach Geoff Hennessy. "This is testimony to the quality of the Old Conference League--we can go nose-to-nose with any team in the state."

Erin Duggan again paced North with a third place finish and her time of 17:37 was only two seconds off last year's meet record. Falmouth star Sara Majka was the individual winner in 17:00.

Other North scorers were Laura Blaikie, sixth in 17:54, only one second off Suzanne Lewis' time of a year ago; Erica Doherty, 19th; Mel Gaziano, 20th; Kelly Duggan, 21st, and Katie McNamara, 24th.

The Quincy girls, led by Liz Sawan, finished seventh in 152 points. Sawan was ninth, Kathryn Lencki 23rd, Lauralee Summer 42nd, Amy Nicklas 47th and Maryann Ashworth 51st.

In the boys' race Quincy finished eighth with 178 points and North Quincy had 227 points.

Quincy was led by Jim Lencki, eighth in 15:14. Other Quincy scorers were Douh Gallagher, 25th; Matt Langille, 44th; Hubie Lam, 50th; and Damon Blaco, 51st.

North's scorers were Eric Torvi, 14th in 15:30; Warren Fong, 52nd; Shawn Piccozzi, 56th; Eric Yu, 57th and Ken Duncan, 58th. Ricky Cheng finished 60th.

Erin Duggan and Laura Blaikie of North and Liz Sawan of Quincy were named to the all-star team as was Quincy's Jim Lencki.

In the junior varsity meet North girls finished fourth with 78 points as Colleen Cotter finished sixth, Ursula Feurtado 13th, Diane Kane-McGunigle 16th, Carrie Jarvie 27th, Diane Jordan 31st; Rebecca Gordon 40th, Christine Sullivan 44th and Danielle Rinella 48th.

The North Quincy boys finished fifth with 132 points.

Steven Cannon finished 24th, Terrance Roche 25th, Brian O'Donnell 35th, Greg Burke 41st, John Duffy 42nd, Billy Graney 52nd, Jimmy Wan 71st, Andy Myers 73rd, Peter Connolly 77th, Ted McGillicuddy 72nd and Billy Nelson 92nd.

Quincy and North took part in the Mass. State Coaches Invitational at Franklin Park with excellent results.

In the freshman girls race North's Kerry Ginty with eighth with Quincy's Kathryn Lencki 10th.

In the sophomore girls meet Liz Sawan was fourth, Eric Doherty ninth and Kelly Duggan 16th.

In junior senior boys Jim Lencki was 23rd and in junior-senior girls Laura Blaikie was seventh.

Both teams will compete in the Eastern Mass. Divisional championships this Saturday at Franklin Park, competing in Div. 11. The top five teams and top seven individuals not on those five teams will advance to the All-State meet to be held at Mt. Northfield Ski Track.

THE OXYGEN SENSOR'S ROLE

Because its failure can lead to poor gas mileage and various engine performance problems, auto manufacturers recommend that oxygen sensors be replaced at regular intervals as part of a preventative maintenance program. The oxygen sensor is a crucial piece of equipment that constantly monitors the amount of oxygen present in the engine's exhaust after the engine has warmed up. The presence of too much oxygen means that the fuel mixture is too "lean," in which case the sensor signals the computer to inject more fuel into the engine. A mixture that is too "rich" causes the sensor to signal the computer to inject less fuel. By controlling the air/fuel mixture in this way, the oxygen sensor ensures optimum gas mileage and low emission of air pollutants.

HINT: Because an oxygen sensor can compensate for inadequate air supply due to a particularly clogged air filter, the filter should be inspected regularly.

Maintaining every system in your car is important because it will also give you better mileage and allow your car to last longer. At today's prices, it is not wise to do anything else. To help you properly care for your car, come into the service department at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, where you will be offered the best service available by people who truly care about you and your family. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) we have both full and mini-serve gas islands and of course, we carry diesel fuel.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

Robert LaFleur To Be Honored As Jewish War Veterans Post 'Citizen Of The Year' Sunday

Robert J. LaFleur of Quincy, a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War and the city's graves registration director, will be recognized as the 43rd annual "Citizen of the Year" by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans.

An awards breakfast will be Sunday, Nov. 14 at 9:30 a.m. at the Beth Israel Synagogue, Quincy.

LaFleur, a graduate of Quincy High School-Quincy Vocational Technical School, served in the Navy from 1969 to 1973 as a gunner's mate, second class-E5.

He has been active in community, civic and veterans affairs for many years. He served as commander of the Morrisette American Legion Post in 1981 and 1982; past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council in 1990 and is presently junior vice commander of the D.A.V. Cavanaugh Chapter.

Vice chairman of the Quincy Cemetery Board of Managers, LaFleur was the president of the Ward 2 Civic Association from 1989 to 1991; chairman of Quincy's Veterans and Memorial Day Parades from 1989 to 1991; and has assisted the veterans' department food pantry drive the last two years.

He received the Law and Order Award from the Sons of the American Legion for saving a person's life in 1988. This marked the first time the award was presented to anyone other than a police officer or firefighter.

LaFleur and his wife, Lillian (Arnone) LaFleur, have two children, Joseph, 22, and Samantha, 16. They are the grandparents of Bryan Robert LaFleur, born last month.

Guest speaker will be Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro. Mayor James Sheets is among the invited guests.

Irving Isaacson, past commander of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans, will be the master of ceremonies.

Deadline Dec. 31 For Ninth Annual Award

Nominations Open For S... Year'

Thomas Crane Public Library
Box 379
Quincy, Ma. 02169

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's ninth annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, was honored. He was selected from 28 nominations sub-mitted by Sun readers.

Cantelli received the award at a reception held in his honor at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center attended by approximately 100 family members, friends, city officials and invited guests.

Deadline to submit nominations is Friday, Dec. 31.

Sun readers have the opportunity to nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

Handicapped Accessibility Campaign Launched

Library So Near Yet So Far For Disabled

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Thomas Crane main public library is centrally located, making it so near for most residents yet so far for the disabled.

The furthest point for the physically challenged is the front door. Trying to get up to it and through it in a wheelchair or with a walker or cane is almost mission impossible.

Library officials and interested citizens want to change that by making the Washington Street, Quincy Center landmark more handicapped accessible within the year.

Plans for the building's immediate future include a new walkway around the grounds, a new front door, and a wheelchair ramp leading to the door.

The library, which was built by architect Henry Hobson Richardson, first opened in 1882. In 1908, Richardson's firm added a rear wing to the building. The last time major architectural work was completed at the site was 1940, when architects Paul and Carroll Coletti built the addition that today includes the building's front door. The outside perimeter of the building today measures approximately 50,000 square feet.

The library was named after Thomas Crane, a former Quincy Point resident whose wealthy family donated the funding for construction of the original building in his memory five years after his death in 1875.

Today, according to Library Director Ann McLaughlin, the library houses 228,978 books, as well as microfilm machines, newspapers, magazines, compact discs, audiocassettes, and a number of other learning materials. About 1,000 people visit the library daily, she added.

NANCY MAGEE, a member of Thomas Crane Public Library Development Committee and the city's Commission on Disability, stares in frustration at the steps leading to the front door of the library's main branch in Quincy Center. The front entrance is virtually inaccessible to anyone in a wheelchair.

McLaughlin said she is looking for suggestions from both city officials and the general public not only on the increased accessibility plan but also on the library's long-range plans for major renovations and the construction of a new addition.

"We welcome public input and will listen to anything anyone has to say," she said.

In fact, McLaughlin noted, the library recently established the Thomas Crane Library Development Committee to increase public awareness of the need to improve and expand the library.

The 14-member committee includes McLaughlin, retired Library Director Warren Watson, who serves as chairman; and the five members of the library's board of trustees including chairman Arthur Ciampa, treasurer John Luongo, secretary Sandra McCauley, Thomas Hurlebaus and Philip Curtis.

There are also seven private citizens on the Sheets Tax Proposals:

$1.11 Residential Hike, $1.81 For Business

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets has proposed FY94 tax classification rates that would mean increases of $1.11 per $1,000 for residents and $1.81 per $1,000 for business owners compared to last year's rates.

A public hearing on Sheets' proposed tax rates of $14.57 per $1,000 for residential and $30.58 per $1,000 for C.I.P.P. (commercial, industrial and personal property) will be held Monday, Dec. 6 at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall.

The tax rates, which were unveiled at Monday night's City Council meeting, would keep the percentages of Quincy's $78.6 million tax levy approximately the same as last year: 60 percent for residential and 40 percent for C.I.P.P.

Although the percentages will remain the same, however, the rates paid will be slightly more than last year because of an increase in the tax levy. In FY93, the levy was $75.8 million, which translated into rates of $13.46 per $1,000 for residential and $28.77 per $1,000 for C.I.P.P.

Therefore, the impact would mean direct increases per $1,000 of $1.11 and $1.81, respectively, for residents and business owners.

Sheets is out of town this week and was unavailable for comment. The mayor outlined his thoughts, however, in his written recommendation on the rates that he submitted to the City Council:

"The tax levy for FY94 is $78,587,550," wrote Sheets. "I am recommending a classification percentage which will allow the percentages of the levy paid by residential and C.I.P.P. (commercial, industrial, and personal property) to remain approximately what they were in FY93.

"By adopting this plan the residential factor would be 80.5317 (percent) and the taxation of commercial, industrial and personal property at 169 percent.

"At 169 percent the commercial, industrial and personal property would be taxed at less than the maximum of 175 percent."

Assessors Chairman Marion Fantucchio confirmed these numbers, noting that Sheets could

To Decide Cedrone Or Barry In Third Spot

Recount Today In School Comm. Race

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A school committee election recount requested by two candidates will get underway this morning (Thursday) at 9 a.m., according to City Clerk and Board of Registrars Chairman Joseph Shea.

School Committee-woman-elect Christine Cedrone and first runner-up Sean Barry each requested a recount in all six wards last Friday. Cedrone captured the third and final spot in the school committee election Nov. 2, narrowly defeating Barry by eight votes.

Shea will oversee the recount which will be conducted inside the second floor conference room of new City Hall by the Board of Registrars and election workers. Candidates, their legal counsel and an observer representing a candidate at each recount table will be allowed to be present at the proceeding.

Depending on how the first three wards go, the recount could be wrapped up by Thursday at 4:30 p.m. However, the recount could continue into Friday if either candidate is not satisfied with the results of committee: Robert Derbes, co-owner of the Derbe Bros. construction company and head of Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library, the library's sole benefactor; Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, former State Sen. Paul Harold, Nancy Magee, secretary of the city's Commission on Disability; Mary Weafer, co-owner of The Ink Spot; Arthur Foley, co-owner of Century 21 Annex Realty and former administrative assistant under Mayor Francis McCauley; and Alfred Toy, a retired engineer and longtime community volunteer.

Ciampa said that while the library is certainly in need of an addition and other renovations, the Development Committee feels that the accessibility problem is a more pressing concern.

"Our immediate goal is to make it more accessible," he said.

McLaughlin said the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), which was signed into law July 26, 1990 and is enforced by the U.S. Justice Department, mandates that all buildings, city-owned and otherwise, must be completely accessible to people of all disabilities by Jan. 26, 1995. Therefore, not only people who use wheelchairs will benefit from the future changes planned for the library.

Among the more long-term improvements, McLaughlin said, will be making books on the higher shelves at the library accessible to all, adding braille to the library's computers and other information access points, making the building's elevator more wheelchair accessible, and installing emergency alarms that have both flashing lights for the deaf and a loud siren to alert the blind.

Another accessibility problem is the fact that a person confined to a wheelchair who needs to do legal research cannot do so without the aid of a library employee. The reason is that the books that contain all of the Massachusetts General Laws and Statutes are stored on second floor balconies that can only be accessed by an aging, narrow, winding wooden stairway which even an able-bodied person must ascend with caution. Employees have to retrieve books from this area at the request of a disabled person, and McLaughlin said this is something else she would like taken care of.

McLaughlin added that while accessibility adjustments will have to be made at the library's smaller branches, they are nothing compared to the changes needed for the Quincy Center facility.

MEMBERS OF THE Thomas Crane Public Library Development Committee are hoping that the library's main branch in Quincy Center can be made more handicapped accessible within the next year. From left, retired Library Director Warren Watson, chairman of the committee; Library Director Ann McLaughlin; Arthur Ciampa, chairman of the library's board of trustees and John Luongo, treasurer of the board of trustees.

But those changes, as well as the addition and other renovations, will have to come later. At this point, the Development Committee will focus on what needs to be done right away.

"What changes are made in the future will depend on the availability of outside (financial) help," said Watson. "We will have to move ahead by (first) making the absolutely necessary access improvements."

Ciampa, listing some of the "absolutely necessary improvements," said the cobblestones on the present walkway around the library are uneven and a number of people have fallen as a result. The front door is extremely heavy and awkward, he added, making it hard for children, senior citizens and women with baby carriages to enter the building, let alone those with disabilities. Without a ramp, the front of the building is virtually impossible to enter for someone in a wheelchair, Ciampa said.

Luongo agreed, noting that those who are wheelchair-bound currently must telephone the library ahead of time to be let in a door to the ground level of the building.

"They can't get in the front door," said Luongo.

McLaughlin added that although there is a doorbell at the ground level entrance--which allows visitors into the library's Art Room--library employees are often not nearby enough to hear the bell being rung. Even once they get inside, disabled visitors are further frustrated by the fact that the Children's Room is the only other room on the ground level and using the elevator to get to the upper floors is usually so much of a chore that it is more trouble than it is worth.

Few people know this frustration like Magee, who has been wheelchair-bound since early adulthood and has limited use of her arms. She said that although she has lived in Quincy for 11 years and has often come to the library with her two children, she has "only been upstairs about three times."

Whenever Magee has needed to go to the building's upper levels, her husband had to remove a front section of her wheelchair so that it would fit into the elevator, after which he would "squeeze in with me," she said.

Once upstairs, Magee said she has noted problems such as low lighting that would make things difficult for anyone visually impaired and stacks of books too high for the wheelchair-bound. However, she added what is more important is the fact that the disabled must obtain complete accessibility at the library and everywhere else so that they will be seen as equals with the rest of society.

"We're going to have to have access in order to be socially accepted," she said. "The key to acceptance is access."

For now, priority for accessibility at the library has been placed on a new walkway and front door as well as the construction of a ramp. McLaughlin noted that those and other changes must first be approved by the Massachusetts Historic Commission and the Quincy Historic District Commission. Watson added that it would also need the "blessing" of Mayor James Sheets.

In terms of cost, McLaughlin said a local architect recently estimated the amounts for the changes as being $150,000 for the walkway, $70,000 for the ramp, and $30,000 for the front door. This could prove difficult, McLaughlin said, because although the library has an FY94 budget of $1,414,565, only $18,000 is set aside for maintenance, while over 70 percent of the budget goes toward salaries and the rest to the building's everyday needs.

Luongo said the project will partially be funded by state and federal grants as well as fund-raisers to be scheduled. McLaughlin said she has applied for several grants in the past, but added that funding from the city, possibly in the form of a bond issue, will be necessary to complete the work. Any bonding for the project would require Sheets' approval.

Watson said that the addition and more extensive renovations, which the library hopes to complete within three to five years, will require a bond issue.

Luongo said that Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library does not have the capital to fund any major projects or renovations. He added, however, that he feels the changes must be made as soon as possible.

"As a trustee I feel an obligation to the residents," he said.

McLaughlin said that while "the city has not been in the position to make capital improvements for a number of years," she would still like more input from Sheets and other city officials on the matter. She added that although Sheets has expressed concern over the library's needs in the past, she would now like to see him take a more active role.

"I'm hoping that together, we will work out some plan of action," she said.

"The mayor has a lot to do, and we understand that," Watson added. "We would, however, like to see the library rate as a high priority in his plans."

In a telephone interview, Sheets expressed concern for the library's situation and said that any public library is a source of knowledge that helps to increase a community's awareness of its past.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR Ann McLaughlin peers up winding stairway which is the only access to second floor balconies at the library that house all of the Massachusetts General Laws and Statures. Disabled persons doing legal research cannot use the stairway and must ask library employees to retrieve books from the upper level.

"A public library is the cultural essence of a city or town," said Sheets, who added that he was "awed" by the beauty of the Crane building when he first saw it years ago.

Sheets said that he is "going to work with the library" in the near future on the accessibility plan and hopes that some of the work can be completed by the end of 1994.

He added, however, that he could not commit to a bonding issue for the library at this point in time, noting that there are other projects, including a new cafeteria for the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy, which rank higher on his list of priorities. Sheets also said he is concerned about the ADA and the future need to make all buildings accessible, since it will cost the city "between $10 million and $15 million" to do so.

Sheets said that there are some Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds that could be used for library renovations, but those funds must be "used equitably throughout the city." CDBG monies may be used, he said, to place handicapped accessible door handles on buildings throughout the city, including the library, in the near future.

The mayor added that the future of the library "depends on how our finances stabilize of the next two to three months," and said he "will know by February" what can be done for the Crane building.

McLaughlin said the library recently received proposals from 19 companies interested in handling the immediate handicapped access construction. The city's Designer Selection Committee has narrowed the field down to three finalists: Stahl Associates Architects in Boston, The Preservation Partnership in New Bedford, and Platt Freeman Fox Associated Architects in Cambirdge. The library's Development Committee will now have to choose the firm to do the job, McLaughlin said.

An exact timetable on the project will be determined by how quickly funding can be secured, but McLaughlin said "we hope to have it done within the next year."

She added that one the library's greatest concerns is that the public sees it as unwilling to make the necessary accessibility changes because of the building's status as a historic landmark. While some people have actually suggested this to her, she said, that accusation is "absolutely untrue."

"We define our role as an access point of information for everyone," she said, "and we are very concerned about the problem."

Watson agreed.

"The need to keep the public library as a point of access for all citizens is paramount," he said.

Schools Get $1,197,873

As a result of the new state Education Reform Law, the Quincy school system received an appropriation of $1,197,873 Monday night from the City Council.

City Auditor Robert Foy said that while an amount of $819,900 for the schools had already been anticipated, and budgeted for, in the city's FY94 municipal budget, an additional $377,973 came to the city as a welcome surprise.

School Business Manager George Umscheid said the funds will be divided up for use in "four or five major categories," including the financing of pay raises, construction projects such as the Early Childhood Center scheduled to open this winter at the site of the former Lincoln Elementary School in South Quincy and the recently-opened addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy, maintenance and other other improvements.

Councillors were unanimous in their approval of the appropriation.

"I'm strongly in favor of this," said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien. "The city's major challenge in the next few years is improving the schools. The schools are the key to our economy."

"It's important to put money back in the schools," agreed Council President Charles Phelan, who added that such investments will help to upgrade real estate values in the city.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and other councillors, however, agreed that the school department should send the council a detailed report on how the funds are spent.

In other business, the council appropriated an additional $421,419 which Foy said was money the city is entitled to under Proposition 2 1/2.

"This amount will bring the budget up to the 2 1/2 limit," he said.

The funds will be set aside in a reserve for appropriation fund that Mayor James Sheets and the City Council will be able to access as an alternative to the city's free cash account, according to Foy.

"We haven't done this (set aside a reserve for appropriation fund) in the last few years," said Foy. He added that the city's free cash account currently holds $2,332,359.

have recommended the maximum of 175 percent of the tax burden allowed under state law to be carried by C.I.P.P. She added that this is the third consecutive fiscal year Sheets has recommended the C.I.P.P. share to be 169 percent.

Fantucchio added that a decrease in property values has necessitated the tax hike. Quincy's total property valuation has dropped from $4,450,597,477 in FY93 to $4,341,548,548,654 in FY94, making this the fourth consecutive year the valuation has decrease.

The average valuation for a single family home in Quincy is $138,350 (up $50 from last year). Based on the $138,350 valuation, a homeowner would pay $2,016 or $154 more than FY93.

New Ordinance To Cut Flood Insurance Rates

Residents in the City of Quincy who pay for flood insurance will see a decrease in their insurance rates in the next few years.

The City Council Monday night passed an ordinance which will allow the city to participate in a Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) program that allows for an annual 5 percent decrease in the rates which tops off at 45 percent.

The program, known as the Floodplain Management Plan, allows for the rates to be reduced in communities that curb development of floodplain areas. The plan also calls for those communities to identify potential flood hazards and increase public awareness.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who introduced the ordinance, said that approximately 1,200 Quincy residents have to pay the insurance because they live in floodplain areas. Those residents are mainly in Wards 1 and 6, although some are also in Ward 5, Kolson said.

Kolson said the affected residents can apply to FEMA for the reduced rates through their banks and credit institutions. Because of a second section that Kolson added to his original draft of the ordinance, which he had introduced at the council's Nov. 1 meeting, the law has gone immediately into effect.

FACTS ABOUT OBESITY

Obese. That's a word many of us shy away from. We might be a little overweight, a bit out of shape, but obese? In fact, if you are just 20 percent over your ideal weight, you are medically classified as obese. The National Institutes of Health have called obesity a disease with serious medical consequences. Those "love handles," as you may call the pudge around your waist, increases your risk of high blood pressure, diabetes, high cholesterol, heart disease, and some types of cancers. Your doctor can help determine whether or not you need to lose weight and, if so, what steps you can take toward a healthier, happier lifestyle. Avoid fad diets and quick-fix programs, which often only make matters worse.

P.S. If your ideal weight is 130 pounds and you weigh 156 or more, you qualify as obese.

Nutritionists are now advising patients to shun diets in favor of incremental changes for the better in their eating and exercising habits. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We specialize in the treatment of heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Sheets And Dynamite

On a scale of 1-to-10 in the political popularity department, Mayor James Sheets has got to be at least a 9 1/2 or 9 3/4.

SHEETS

The fact he had no opposition for re-election for two elections in a row is one indication. He's the first mayor in Quincy history accorded that honor.

But his performance against himself and that political nemesis "blanks" is even a better barometer.

Two year ago running unopposed for a second term he was the top vote-getter with 12,195 votes against 5,409 blanks. The voter turnout in 1991 was 35 percent.

This year, running unopposed for a third term, he was the top vote-getter with 12,651 votes against 4,222 blanks. The voter turnout was 37 percent.

So, with a smaller turnout he got 456 more votes than he did two years ago. And, 1,187 fewer blanks.

Usually, a sitting mayor's popularity begins to dip after two terms. But Sheets' seems to be getting better.

Whether it stays up there for the two years remains to be seen. But right now mayoral hopefuls respect his popularity and residents by far obviously think he's doing good job.

If he should decide to run for a fourth term in 1995, it would give potential candidates something to think about before jumping into the mayoral ring.

Right now, if they wanted to get him out of that second floor office, they would need a few sticks of dynamite.

YOU MIGHT BE seeing the name Bellotti on a statewide ballot again soon.

Peter Bellotti, son of Frank Bellotti, former lieutenant governor and attorney general, is seriously considering a run for secretary of state next year.

Incumbent Michael Connolly has announced he will not seek re-election and that has whet Bellotti's political appetite.

Bellotti, who grew up in Wollaston at the family homestead with politics in his veins, is now a Cambridge attorney and lives in Winchester.

In 1980 he was a delegate for Senator Edward Kennedy to the 1980 Presidential Democratic National Convention.

He was an assistant district attorney under Scott Harshbarger when the latter was Middlesex district attorney.

He is a graduate (1972) of North Quincy High School, University of Connecticut and New England Law School.

"He's taking a very serious look at running," says his brother, state Rep. Michael Bellotti.

DO POLITICAL ENDORSEMENTS sway voters? We asked that question before the Nov. 2 city election. Now here's a check against the results.

Q-Vote, the political action arm of the Quincy Education Association endorsed three candidates for School Committee: Ron Mariano, JoAnn Bragg and Toni Kabilian.

They rode two winners: Mariano and Bragg. The third spot went to Christine Cedrone—pending a recount requested by Sean Barry who lost to her by eight votes. Kabilian finished fifth.

The Central Labor Council endorsed Michael Cheney, Mary Collins and Charles McIntyre for city Councillor at-large.

Cheney was their only at-large winner, finishing third. Tim Cahill and Joseph LaRaia finished one, two, without their endorsement.

The Labor Council also endorsed three ward councillors: Tom Fabrizio in Ward 4 who had a strong challenge from Michael D'Amico; Lawrence Chretien in Ward 3 who had token opposition and Ted DeCristofaro in Ward 2 who was unopposed. Give them one real winner there.

The Labor Council also endorsed Mariano, Bragg and Barry for School Committee. Two wins there. Barry finished behind Cedrone who wasn't endorsed.

In actual contests (not including Ward 2 and Ward 3) the two union groups had four winners and three losers.

So, do political endorsements sway voters? Not much, it would seem.

THIS YEAR'S CITY election was the swan song for Tom Gilmartin, former Ward 6 councillor who has been handicapping and observing Quincy elections for some 60 years, and his wife have sold their Bayfield Rd. home and are moving to Weymouth.

GILMARTIN

Gilmartin, who has had a pretty good batting average with his crystal ball (he claims 91 percent accuracy) went out with a creditable finale.

In predictions submitted to us before the election, he picked Tim Cahill, Michael Cheney and Joseph LaRaia, in that order. He had the right winners but LaRaia topped Cheney.

He had Mary Collins fourth and Charles McIntyre fifth but McIntyre finished ahead of her.

Gilmartin had Lawrence Chretien an easy winner in Ward 3 and Tom Fabrizio a close winner in Ward 4 which is the way it turned out.

Gilmartin who is now 80, says that's it. He's retiring from the political scene. But somehow you can't help wondering if you might see him around City Hall next election night.

Cheney Responds To Bratton On Gun Range

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In his recent newspaper editorial, Boston Police Commissioner William Bratton states that his aim is to "clarify and correct" recent news coverage of the proposed shooting facility on Moon Island. However, the letter creates more confusion than clarity on this issue.

A critical, unanswered question in the letter is: Why must the Boston Police Department's new facility be built on Moon Island? Mr. Bratton says: "We have been on Moon Island for decades." But the argument that "we have always done it that way" is a poor excuse for continuing activities that abuse the natural environment and those who value it.

The proposed Moon Island site is a uniquely fragile natural area, bounded on two sides by protected wetlands. Unfortunately, the Boston Police Department has already proven that it does not care about protecting this unique environment.

Construction has already caused serious and well-documented environmental damage in the form of erosion and siltation, with lead contamination, into Boston Harbor, as well as damage to adjacent Salt Marsh areas. Large areas of Salt Marsh buffer zone have been totally destroyed.

Many respected environmental groups in and around Boston (including the Friends of Boston Harbor Islands, Save the Harbor/Save the Bay, the Conservation Law Foundation, and the Audubon Society) have voiced alarm at this disregard for our environment.

Meanwhile, other agencies in and around Boston are working hard to protect the Boston Harbor Islands. Recent reports released by the Boston Parks and Recreation Department as well as the Joint Beaches Commission emphasize the need to expand recreational opportunities on the Islands and to protect their natural environment.

One report calls the gun range the "largest impediment" to this objective with respect to Moon and Long Islands. These agencies realize something fundamental: while a new gun range can be designed and built in a number of available locations, the Harbor Islands are a unique resource which must be cherished. They cannot be relocated. The City of Quincy has found very little difficulty in relocating its firing range activities to the Braintree Rod and Gun Club facilities.

Commissioner Bratton ends his letter by urging those who question current plans not to "derail efforts to professionalize the Boston Police Department." But, far from derailing such important efforts, we feel we have a major contribution to make. We are convinced that in the long run, Boston's needs would be better served by finding a location where the new gun range would not need to compete with such serious environmental, legal and policy concerns.

Further, Boston and Quincy will both gain when they join together to preserve our precious open spaces for appropriate recreational uses. Therefore, for the good of all parties, I urge Commissioner Bratton to reconsider plans to locate the new facility on Moon Island.

Don't We Rate A Senior Center?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy is a really up and coming city. It has an eye for the future and a fond intellectual tie to the past.

We have a trolley to the historical sites. We have new lights on the downtown streets. We have a new building where the old Bargain Center used to be. We are getting a Marine Museum. There are plans for a new golf course. There are plans for a soccer field. Now there is talk of a convention center at the old Jordan Marsh Warehouse.

But, I don't hear anything about parking at the Thomas Crane Public Library in the Center for seniors. Not even senior parking tickets for street parking! And nowhere do I hear even a whisper of a Senior Center. Other cities and towns have viable Senior Centers. Is it possible we have an invisible population in Quincy?

Seniors, don't we rate a place of our own? We are certainly not shy when there is work to be done in the city. It's our city too and we're proud to live here. Proud to serve her. Seniors don't we rate as nice a place as other communities? A place where we can coordinate all of our expertise and effort? We have a strong voice; let it be heard loud and clear.

Wall Of Honor 'Will Immortalize Them Forever'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Wall of Liberty to be erected in Caen, France (near the invasion beaches, where Allied troops landed on D-Day, June 6, 1944) under the supervision of the mayor of that city along with Pierre Salinger, chairman of the Wall of Liberty and Anthony Stout, president of the Battle of Normandy Foundation, will be the first monument in the world built to honor all Americans who served in the European Theater of Operations (ETO) which includes Europe, Mediterranean, North Africa and North Atlantic, during World War II.

As Mr. Stout stated, "It will be a monument to the living as well as those who passed on." Five million names of Americans will be engraved on the wall. These soldiers started the downfall of Hitler and his hatred and should be remembered forever. This wall will immortalize them forever.

Each veteran's name, city and state will be embedded in white granite. Groundbreaking will begin on D-Day, June 6, 1994 and will be completed on May 8, 1995, the day before the official surrender of the Nazis.

To register a name on the wall will cost $40, a small sum for immortality. Someday, your children and grandchildren could go to Caen, look at your name and smile or cry. It will show that you were there.

Incidentally, there are no monuments in Washington, D.C. on Federal land that honors any veteran from any war. The Vietnam Memorial honors only the dead but not all those who served in Vietnam.

To obtain a registration form, call 1-800-WW2-VETS in Washington, D.C.

Congratulates QHS Team, Coaches

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Jack Raymer, his fellow coaches and the great Quincy High School football team of 1993.

Those young gentlemen who played on the team had to have made their coaches very proud. They responded to a wacky offseason with a very good year.

Unfortunately, some years your teams play very well and other years not so well. You can play well and lose but the true measure of a team, especially high school teams, is going out and giving a good effort.

Sometimes this will pay off in more victories than losses. This year it was a lot more victories. Nice going, team and coaches.

Council Signs Petition To End PR Voting Form

Nov. 18-24
1951
42 Years Ago

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin and his six colleagues on the City Council signed a petition to end proportional representation voting in Quincy elections and Councillor-elect David S. McIntosh said he will ask Rep. Alfred B. Keith to introduce the necessary legislation.

The legislation would not affect the city's Plan E form of government but would restore the simple plurality system of voting.

McIntosh noted that PR, which came in with Plan E in the 1949 election, had lost popularity because it was cumbersome, costly and confusing. In the city's two Plan E elections it had required the services of 130 and 70 counters for a week to determine winners.

DEEGAN FIRING DENIED

City Councillor Frank N. Orcutt denied a report that he and three other members of the incoming 1952-53 Council had reached an understanding that City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. would be fired as soon as the new council had been sworn into office.

"In my opinion it would be a very foolish thing to do," said Orcutt. "Here we have an able man, who, after two years of getting acquainted with Quincy and its problems, is now in a position to render real service to the city."

Burgin, who was retiring as city councillor and mayor, laughed at rumors that he had been picked by the dissidents to succeed Deegan as city manager.

Marie's Kitchen

Baked Polenta With Sausage Sauce

Though she and Jed have been married nearly two years, we still refer to our daughter Nancy as a bride. Anyway, she invited us to dinner last week to try a new recipe she had made with polenta. It was not the usual run of the mill polenta (which is delicious by the way), but a gourmet type.

Baked Polenta With Sausage Sauce

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 small onion (chopped)
1 garlic clove (minced)
2 1/2 cups chicken stock
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 cup cornmeal
4 ounces dried mozzarella cheese
1/4 cup parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
freshly ground black pepper

Prepare a favorite tomato sauce and add two links of Italian sausage with the casing removed.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Slightly grease a nine-inch cake pan.

In a large saucepan, heat the oil, add the onion and garlic. Saute for a couple of minutes until soft. Add the chicken stock, cream and the pepper and heat to boiling. Slowly add the cornmeal whisking constantly. Simmer, and stir until thick and creamy. Remove from heat and stir in cheeses and parsley. Pour into prepared cake pan and bake for 20 minutes. Serve in wedges with the tomato, sausage sauce and some grated cheese. So delicious especially on a cold day.

St. Joseph's Christmas Bazaar This Weekend

St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 550 Washington St., Quincy Point, will hold its annual Christmas Bazaar Friday through Sunday.

The event will begin Friday with a spaghetti supper from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, $2 for children and can be obtained at the rectory or school.

The bazaar will continue Saturday in the G.T. Nickerson Center (parish hall) from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is free.

Among the highlights will be a number of tables including arts and crafts, baked goods, Christmas gifts and white elephant as well as chance and game tables. A food hall will be held in the school cafeteria.

On Sunday, the bazaar will conclude with "Breakfast With Santa" after the 8:30 and 10 a.m. Masses. Tickets are $3 per person and can be obtained in the school or rectory.

The event has been in preparation for several weeks by a committee of parishioners including: Eleanor Fournier, chairperson; Ann and Dave Steinkrauss, Bob Allison, Dick Travers, Ellie Splaine, Margaret Perry, Minnie Coletti, Edith Palumbo, Barbara Page, Sr. Thomas Aquinas, Judy and Joe Kahler, Eunice Ford, Viola Serafini, Betty and Dan Lauretto, Adele Lauretto, Pauline Lauretto, Henry and Barbara Papile, Elaine Mills, Lorraine Paolucci, Jennie Pentz, Marie Caggiani, Margie Pettinelli, Kathy McLaughlin, Mike Hussey, Maureen Tonnello, Sr. Mary Loyola, Bill Luosey, Roberta Foley, Donna Bertrand, Linda Smith, Ann Doherty, Margaret McDonough, Andy Duval, Agnes Pitts and Jennie Nigro.

Beth Israel Synagogue Celebrates 75th Anniversary

Beth Israel Synagogue, 33 Grafton St., Quincy Point, recently celebrated its 75th anniversary at a ceremony held at Temple Beth Am in Randolph.

The building is the oldest orthodox synagogue on the South Shore.

As part of the celebration, Rabbi Jacob Mann was also honored for his 52 years of service to the Jewish community while at the synagogue. More than 200 people attended, including Mann's two sons and daughter, Dr. Jonah Mann and Rabbi Abraham Moses Mann, both of New York, and Esther Mann-Snyder of Israel.

President Bill Clinton sent a letter and citation which were read during the ceremony. Among those who gave speeches and presented citations were Mayor James Sheets, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, State Rep. Stephen Tobin, Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, Judge Charles Black, presiding court justice of Quincy District Court; Jake Comer, past national commander of the American Legion (Mann is chaplain of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post in West Quincy); and Rabbi Halb Finger, chief rabbi of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis.

BETH ISRAEL SYNAGOGUE in Quincy Point recently celebrated its 75th anniversary.

In addition, Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El in Quincy gave accolades to Mann for his many years of dedicated community service.

The entire member of Beth Israel Synagogue gave a $25,000 scholarship to Yeshiva University in New York in Mann's name. The evening also featured an acceptance speech by Mann, dinner and dancing, and Hebrew and Jewish folk music presented by a live band.

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 10 of this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address no later than Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating Project Impact, an innovative program which addresses alcohol and drug problems among youths, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Those nominated the past seven years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Thursday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Here is an opportunity for our readers to voice their opinion as to who should be The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of the Year" for 1993.

Monthly mortgage payment $465 (7.5% APR x 30 years)

When Roy and Amy Johnson told us what they were paying to live in their three-room apartment, it didn't make sense to us either. So we took a closer look at Roy and Amy, their payment history, and their life. We saw things in Roy and Amy that other banks failed to see in their numbers. And now Roy and Amy see a future with a home. Their own home. Paying less on their monthly mortgage payment than they used to pay on their rent. If you're like Roy and Amy and would like to see yourself in a home of your own, stop by your local Fleet branch office today. Because sometimes owning your own home isn't a matter of having more money, but spending the money you do have a little differently.

Kolson Veterans Day Message:

'Remember Veterans Who I

"Veterans are citizens who throughout our history have served, fought and died to secure our future," said Ward 1 Councillor and Vietnam War veteran Peter Kolson in his keynote address during the city's Veterans' Day ceremony.

"When the nation was threatened, they answered the call and stood tall and strong against any and all enemies, " Kolson told onlookers including veterans groups, city officials and citizens at the ceremony held on the lawn of the Adams Academy in the shadow of the World War I "Doughboy" statue.

The city's Veterans' Day parade and ceremony were sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council.

Kolson, a lifelong Quincy resident and 1966 graduate of Quincy High School, attended Arizona Western College before serving in the Army during Vietnam.

In his address, Kolson said veterans are the "very embodiment of America itself.

"They are the composite of our national and all that has made it great," adding veterans come from all races and colors, creeds and beliefs.

"Most are just ordinary citizens who answered the call to duty when it came. They are your neighbor next door, the merchant at

QUINCY RESIDENTS

RAKE IN THE SAVINGS

QUINCY'S 4TH ANNUAL LEAF COMPOSTING PROGRAM IS NOW IN PROGRESS AND WE WANT YOUR HELP! WHY?

LAST YEAR ... We composted over 2,500 tons of leaves, and saved over $200,000 of your tax dollars.

THIS YEAR ... We hope to hit 4,000 tons, and save your valuable tax dollars.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

1. RAKE YOUR LEAVES

2. BAG THEM

We recommend using the paper leaf composting bags sold at most stores. They're big, easy to fill, recyclable and biodegradable. Plastic bags aren't great — but we'll take them. Bag only leaves, twigs and grass cippings. No trash. No large branches.

3. PUT THEM ON THE CURB WITH YOUR TRASH.

Just separate them from your trash and recyclables, so we know which bags are which!

Thanks for your help!

Program runs thru December 3

Died To Secure Our Future'

the mall, the policeman on the corner."

Kolson noted more than 38 million Americans have served in military uniform, of which more than one million died in service. More than 26 million are alive today.

Kolson mentioned two veterans by name: his father-in-law Lawrence S. Butler who served in the U.S. Navy during World War II, and Robert Ryan who served in the U.S. Air Force during Vietnam.

"One man was cut down in his prime, the other man served his country and survived the trauma of war and went onto raise a family and be a productive man of service.

"The reason I mention these two men is this: although they were born generations apart their understanding of democracy is that freedom is not free. We have an obligation you, and, the living to the succeeding generations to tell their stories, to make sure that these days are not forgotten."

Kolson said Americans should always remember the stories of war, not for war sake but for the personal sacrifice that men and women have made.

"We must always remember the young men and women lost to us. The soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen, still in hospitals with unhealed wounds of many wars past still searching for their unfilled dreams.

"It is for us, all Americans, to hear their stories and touch our hearts. Veterans young and old must stand together and march onward remembering what has brought them together.

"Let us give thanks to God for these servants of democracy and be diligent in our beliefs. Remember forever faithful to all our faithful servants."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Children today are faced with pressures and demands we adults sometimes either have forgotten and/or many have never known. They are victims of peer pressures, broken homes, insecurities, identity crisis, society demands and much more. Parents and significant others must take time to listen that God-given alarm bell when something is not quite right. Take time to listen to them, talk to them, and show interest in their activities and interests. Try to find times when you are not hurried or tense and can focus just on them . . .

A child is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is going to sit where you are sitting, and when you are gone, attend to those things which you think are important. You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they are carried out depends on him. He will assume control of your cities, states, and nations. He is going to move in and take over your churches, schools, universities and corporations. All your books are going to be judged, praised or condemned by him. The fate of humanity is in his hands." - Abraham Lincoln

Police To Monitor Liquor Stores During Thanksgiving

Police Chief Francis Mullen has announced that Quincy police officers will monitor package stores during the Thanksgiving holiday season.

Mullen, who made the announcement at Tuesday's meeting of the Quincy License Board, said the monitoring will be done in an effort to prevent alcohol-related tragedies throughout Thanksgiving, particularly on the holiday weekend.

"In history, we've had some tragedies during this season," he said.

The chief said after the meeting that the monitoring will begin immediately.

"We just want to make the public aware that we want them to slow down and we don't want any accidents," he added.

The License Board voted Tuesday that, as in recent years, package stores will be allowed to open Sundays beginning with the Sunday before Thanksgiving and ending with the Sunday before New Year's Day.

Vendors Must Get Permits To Sell At Parade

All vendors who plan to sell items during the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade Sunday, Nov. 28 must obtain all required permits before the day of the parade, announces Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

The commissioner made her comments during Tuesday's meeting of the Quincy License Board.

Gallahue said vendors may obtain all necessary permits from the health, building and weights and measures departments Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 23-24, at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St. Fees vary according to department and what the vendors have to sell, she added.

Gallahue said the departments are trying to make the permit process as simple for all interested vendors.

"We don't want to have to ask anyone (without permits) at the parade to leave the parade," she said.

Salvation Army Kettle Drive Begins Friday

The Salvation Army will begin its Christmas Kettle Drive Friday at noon in the Atrium at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Members of the Army's Advisory Board and representatives of organizations scheduled to assist the Army this season will be in attendance. Capt. James LaBossiere, local Corps Commander announced that his band and timbrel team will perform during the ceremony. Many of the kettles that are located at local supermarkets as well as area shopping malls will be manned by local groups and organizations including Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions Clubs; AARP chapters and others.

Capt. LaBossiere has extended an invitation to other companies and groups to join the effort in ringing a bell at one of the kettle. The kettles raise most of the money that the local Salvation Army corps uses to support the Christmas program and other programs throughout the year.

For more information, call Sue Christensen at the Army's Quincy office, 472-2345.

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s.
Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.

That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

Raiders Defense Strong Offense Needs Tuneup

The North Quincy football team's defense carried the Raiders to a 26-0 victory over Taunton last Friday at Veterans Memorial Stadium and enabled them to take a four-game win streak and a 5-4 record into the Thanksgiving Day classic.

North's offense sputtered throughout the game but the defense once again came up strong with two pass interceptions and three fumble recoveries as it held the Tigers to 37 yards rushing.

North's defense has been strong all season. In the last four games the Raiders have outscored the opposition, 112-27 and several of those points came against North reserves when it was well in the lead.

"We're not close to where we want to be right now," said North coach Ken McPhee. "Defensively we're playing pretty good, solid football but we have to work on our offense for Quincy.

"Tonight the whole defense played great, especially the secondary." He praised his entire team.

Big Brian Raftery (6-5, 260) had another outstanding two-way game and on defense forced two fumbles and made Taunton quarterback Michael Sayce throw many ill-advised passes.

"Brian was just great again tonight. We switched him to defensive end from linebacker a few weeks ago and has been immense out there ever since," McPhee said.

Toby Odom and Mac Ngutter, who had a fine game with an interception and seven tackles, had interceptions and Jeremy Gott, Justin Dilks and Martin Shields recovered fumbles.

Among others who sparkled were Dave Pacino, with his usual strong two-way game; Dilks, Sean Halpin, George Wirtz, Nathan and Jeremy Gott, Dave Carney and Glenn Peterson.

Offensively Shawn Nee had another big night, rushing 19 times for 113 yards and Derrick Epps carried six times for 54 yards. Each scored a touchdown.

Quarterback Dan Duncan threw only two passes, one for a 55-yard touchdown. Taunton had 37 yards rushing and 76 yards passing as it never threatened to score.

North kicked off to open the game and Taunton made a first down on a 12-yard pass but the quarterback was sacked by Pacino and Ngutter intercepted a pass on North's 38.

The Raiders, led by Nee, staged their best drive of the game, picking up four first downs, the last one on the Taunton six. However, the Tigers held and Kevin Ross' 22-yard field goal attempt went wide.

A Taunton fumble was recovered by North on its 44 and North drove to the 15, only to be hit by a holding penalty. Taunton held and the Tigers took over on their 24.

Three plays later Odom intercepted a pass and returned it 30 yards for his first career touchdown and Ross kicked the extra point.

Later in the second quarter, Taunton punted and, with the ball on North's 45, Duncan hit Nathan Gott with a 45-yard scoring strike. Ross again kicked the point and the Raiders led, 14-0, at halftime.

Midway in the third quarter Wirtz stopped the Taunton punter and North took over on the Raider 20. Nee went seven and Epps took it in from the 13.

Later in the quarter Raftery knocked down a Taunton lateral in the Tiger backfield and Shields fell on the ball, giving North the ball on the Taunton 33.

North Quincy Scoring

	TD	PAT	FG	Pts.
Nee	8	0	0	48
Duncan	4	0	0	24
Raftery	3	4	0	22
Epps	3	0	0	18
Ross	0	9	2	13
McGregor	2	0	0	12
Wirtz	2	0	0	12
Martinson	1	0	0	6
Zaniboni	1	0	0	6
Geary	1	0	0	6
J. Gott	1	0	0	6
N. Gott	1	0	0	6
Odom	1	0	0	6
Ragusa	0	2	0	2
Azuonone	0	2	0	2

On fourth down the Taunton punter's knee hit the ground and lost the ball. Mike McGregor picked it up and ran it in for an apparent score. It was first rule a touchdown but the officials, after a discussion, reversed their decision and declared the ball dead. It made no difference as three plays later Nee scored from the nine to complete the scoring.

North lost Ross in the second half with a shoulder injury. It is hoped, with an extra week to rest, he will be ready for the Quincy game.

A WELCOMED SHIFT

Auto manufacturers are increasingly turning to electronically controlled automatic transmissions in everything from entry-level cars to luxury models. The new electronically controlled units use sensors to gather information about throttle position, temperature, engine load, and vehicle speed. This information is then processed to activate shift solenoids, which control the shifting valves. The result is more precise shifting, greater fuel economy, and increased reliability over older hydraulically controlled automatic transmissions. The electronic components in the newer transmissions, however, are vulnerable to excessive heat. Therefore, it is important to change the transmission fluid (which cools internal transmission parts) at intervals recommended in the owner's manual.

HINT: Transmission fluid should be changed approximately every 15,000 to 25,000 miles.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we understand that the science of auto technology has become very advanced and sophisticated. Whether you have a question about your transmission, or need to have us look at another system, trust it to our professional technicians. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) we are a Mass. Inspection station. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Have a safe and Happy Thanksgiving Day Weekend!

North Jayvees Edge B-R, 14-12

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team improved its record to 7-1 with a come-from-behind 14-12 victory over Bridgewater-Raynham.

B-R took an early lead on a 97-yard punt return and the Trojans increased their lead to 12-0 with another TD late in the half.

On North Quincy's first possession of the second half Sean Dolbeare connected with Eric Zimmerman for a 30-yard touchdown. North added the all-important two-point conversion.

North intercepted three passes with Zimmerman, Jerry Fernandez and Derick Epps the alert defenders.

A North fumble on the B-R was recovered by thr Trojans but North forced a fumble and Fernandez recovered in the end zone for the winning touchdown.

Q-N Freshmen, Jayvee Games Saturday

The Quincy and North Quincy freshmen and jayvees will meet in their traditional pre-Thanksgiving Day doubleheader Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Kickoff for the freshman game is 9 a.m. The jayvees will square off immediately after that game.

North Boosters Rally Saturday

The North Quincy High Football Boosters will sponsor a pre-Thanksgiving rally this Saturday at 1 p.m. in the parking lot of McDonalds across from the high school.

Fans and families of all ages are invited to participate, meet the coaches, players and cheerleaders close up.

McDonald's will provide several special menu items, proceeds of which will benefit the NQ boosters.

Presidents Red Hot And Awesome

By TOM SULLIVAN

Win or lose on Thanksgiving, Quincy football coach Jack Raymer will have enjoyed the most satisfying season of his 10-year coaching career.

Picked for last place in the Old Colony League in a pre-season poll, the Presidents have been the hottest team in the league and will take a five-game win streak and a 7-2 record into the Thanksgiving classic.

Quincy staged an awesome offensive display last Saturday at Barnstable and virtually knocked the Red Raiders out of the Div. 1B Super Bowl with a 42-28 victory.

With Plymouth defeating Weymouth, 19-2, the Blue Eagles all but wrapped up the Super Bowl bid as they have only winless Silver Lake left on the holiday. If Weymouth could have upset Plymouth there would have been a four-way tie for the top among Plymouth, Quincy, Barnstable and Bridgewater-Raynham.

"It is too bad Weymouth couldn't have upset Plymouth, it surely would have made things interesting," Raymer said. "We did our part and I think we caught them by surprise.

"We wanted to stop (Jason) O'Neil, their outstanding running back and we held him to less than 50 yards and Barnstable to only 66 yards rushing. We had to give up the pass and their fine passer (Mickey Fein) had a big day.

"He three 38 passes and kept our secondary on its toes. He completed 14 for 267 yards and four touchdowns."

The Presidents, improving every week, had 475 yards total offense, including 272 on the ground and quarterback Mike Bartlett had another fine game and was 8-for-13 for 193 yards in addition to rushing for 36 yards.

Sam Brown, closing in on 1000 yards, carried 26 times for 148 yards and two touchdowns, while Mike Elder rushed 10 times for 101 yards and two touchdowns. He also kicked four extra points.

"Bartlett was just immense again and had two pass completions, including a 50-yard scoring pass, called back by penalties," Raymer said.

"And Tom Malvesti, who has had a super season (he didn't play was a sophomore or junior) had another strong game with six pass receptions for 122 yards and a touchdown. Jason Sova had two receptions for 60 yards."

Raymer praised his secondary, which was kept busy all day long, Tim Dowling, Steve Provost, Jon Gangi and Kevin Carey.

Also sparkling on defense were Paul Colleary, who had 10 unassisted tackles and who blocked a punt and returned it 45 yards for a score; Ashley Davis, Bill Dunn, Mike Feeley, who had nine tackles; Mike Lombardi, Jason Bennett and John Green.

Offensively in the line Dave D'Olympio, Peter Kolson, Feeley, Malvesti, Sova, Jeff Burrell, Colleary and Butch Palazza stood out.

Barnstable surprised Quincy on the first play of the game when Fein three an 81-yard touchdown bomb to Scott Rose. Rose kicked the extra point.

Quincy bounced right back and Brown capped a fine drive by scoring from the three and Elder kicked the point.

The Presidents soon after took a 14-7 lead when Elder scored from the one and again kicked the point.

Barnstable regained the lead early in the second quarter when Rose caught his second TD pass (20 yards) from Fein and Iam McAllister took a pass for the two-point conversion.

Again the Presidents roared back and Brown scored again from the three and Bartlett rushed for the two-point conversion.

Later in the half, Elder scored from the two and again kicked the point and Quincy held a 29-15 halftime lead.

The Presidents continued to roll in the third quarter as Bartlett hit Malvesti with a 16-yard scoring pass but this time the extra kick failed.

Barnstable scored on a third Fein to Rose pass, this one for 14 yards and Rose kicked the extra point.

Colleary blocked a punt in the final quarter and ran it back 45 yards for Quincy's final TD and Elder kicked his fourth extra point.

Barnstable finished off the day's scoring when Fein hit Rich Tibbetts with a 25-yard scoring pass.

Apaches Win Title On 3 Defense TDs, 33-14

By KERRY BYRNE

According to the old football adage defense wins championships.

The North Quincy Apaches proved this with a 33-14 victory over the Quincy Point Panthers in the QYFL title game. The margin of victory came on three touchdowns scored by the Apaches' defense.

The game was scoreless going into the second quarter when a 39-yard punt by the Apaches' Jim Finn pinned the Panthers on their own 1-yard line. On the next play tackle Manny Vasquez hit quarterback Carmen Lorenzano forcing a fumble in the end zone. Vasquez fell on it for an Apaches touchdown. The two-point conversion failed.

"I went right for the QB on that play and the ball fell right in front of me," said an ecstatic Vasquez following the game.

Vasquez and the North Quincy defense went back to work on the next series. On the Panthers second play the Apaches forced another fumble and again Vasquez was there to fall on it, this time only 10 yards from the end zone. After penalties pushed the ball back to the 14-yard line, quarterback Chris Bregoli was able to find Jim Finn for a touchdown reception. Again the conversion failed but the Apaches took the 12-0 lead into halftime.

The teams were scoreless in the third quarter, but were about to explode for a combined 35 points in the fourth.

Early in the final period the Panthers were able to capitalize on a fumble which gave them the ball on the North Quincy 39-yard line. After two running plays moved the ball to the 33, Lorenzano went back to pass. He threw to halfback Steve Roberts in the right flat. Roberts raced up the sideline for the Panthers' first touchdown. A two-point conversion pass to Tom Daley made the score 12 to 8.

Just when it appeared that the momentum had shifted, the Apaches came up big on offense.

Starting from their own 40 the Apaches moved to the Point 44 in two plays. On the next play halfback Pat Egan took the pitch from Bregoli around the right end and outraced the defense to the end zone. Vasquez punched in the two-points to give North Quincy a 20 to 8 lead.

"Someone grabbed my shirt but I broke away," said Egan of his touchdown, " then I turned the corner and there was great blocking downfield."

The high-scoring Apaches defense put the game away on the next series. On the first play the Panthers tried a half back pass with Roberts attempting to throw back to Lorenzano. Finn intercepted on the 30-yard line and sped into the end zone for his second TD of the game. The extra-point kick attempt fell just short. The score stood at 26 to 8 with 4:50 left in the game.

It was here that Quincy Point put together the best offensive drive by either team. Starting at their own 26 the Panthers drove to the North Quincy 1-yard line. Lorenzano then took a QB sneak into the end zone. The two-point conversion was no good.

On the next play the Panthers successfully recovered an onside kick. Any hopes of a comeback were dashed when linebacker Dan Toland tipped a pass into the hands of Vasquez. Vasquez caught the ball on his own 25 and raced 75-yards for his second, and the Apaches' third, defensive touchdown of the game. The extra-point kick was blocked but still found a way to tumble through the uprights to make the final score 33 to 14.

"Our defensive line was the key, we were able to contain the Panthers' passing game," said Apaches' coach Steve Koski while surrounded by his jubilant team after the game.

Indeed, one wonders what the Quincy Point offense would have done if it were not for the Apaches' pass rush. Despite heavy pressure Lorenzano was able to complete five passes for 113 yards and Roberts carried 15 times for 100 yards. Panthers' receiver Tom Daley led all pass catchers with two receptions for 52 yards.

On the other side of the ball Apaches' QB Bregoli completed all 4 pass attempts for 45 yards and a touchdown. Halfback Pat Egan had an impressive 74 yards on only eight carries to lead the North Quincy ground attack. This accounted for almost all of the Apaches' offense as they were able to muster only 136 yards.

Panthers' coach Tom Donovan was gracious in defeat.

"The Apaches came to play today. They just beat us off the ball," said Donovan after the game.

Each team won impressively the week before in order to set up a rematch of last years title game which ended in a 6 to 6 tie.

The Apaches beat the West Quincy Elks 28-0. Egan scored two first half touchdowns and Toland added another in the third quarter. Bregoli capped the scoring with a 65-yard punt return. Finn scored two two-point conversions.

The Panthers topped the Houghs Neck Manets 22-6. The score was 6 to 6 in the third quarter when Roberts ran for a 65-yard touchdown. Lorenzano scored the two-point conversion then added a TD in the fourth quarter. Jim Bennett scored the two points to close out the scoring.

Quincy Freshmen Roll, Bow

The Quincy High Freshman football team is 1 and 1 in their last two games. The big question is which team will show up on Saturday when the Quincy and North Quincy freshman teams clash at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Will it be the Quincy team that ran for over 300 yards in a 38-0 victory over Silver Lake two weeks ago? Or will it be the team that was beaten by Barnstable 30-6 last week?

Six different players scored for the Presidents in the Silver Lake game. Kevin Connolly scored for Quincy on the first play from scrimmage, racing 62-yards off tackle for a touchdown. Joey Mariano added the two-point conversion on a half back pass from Brad Smith.

In the second quarter Mark Glynn scored on a 58-yard run around right end and Connolly added another TD. Glynn had a two-point conversion to make the score 22-0 at halftime.

In the second half Tim Santos and Andrew Byrne had touchdown runs, with Santos and Smith adding two-point conversions to make the final score 38-0.

Santos, Mike Russo and Jason Greenaway each had interceptions to help stifle the Silver Lake offense.

In the Barnstable game Quincy's lone touchdown came in the second quarter. Quarterback Mark Glynn was able to break through the middle of the Barnstable defense then race up the right sideline for a 60-yard TD run.

Quincy committed two costly turnovers in the first half which helped seal their fate. Both turnovers led to short Barnstable touchdowns. Quincy was down 22-6 at the intermission.

In the second half Barnstable scored one more touchdown and added a two-point conversion to finish off the 30-6 victory over the young Presidents.

The Quincy and North Quincy frosh squads face off Saturday at 9:00 A.M. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The J.V. teams will play immediately afterwards at 11:00 A.M.

A pre-bid conference will be held at 10:30 AM on December 1, 1993 at the Quincy Department of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169. It is imperative that prospective bidders have a representative attend. Any request for clarifications and/or interpretations of plans and specifications should be submitted in writing at the same time. Bidders will have an opportunity to inspect the site of the Work following the pre-bid conference.

All Federal, State and City of Quincy Regulations related to low income persons, non-discriminatory practices, Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO), Minority Business Enterprises (MBEs), Women's Business Enterprises (WBEs) are applicable to this contract. The goals for Minority workers, MBE and WBE participation for this project are:

1. The Contractor shall maintain on this project not less than a ten percent (10%) ratio of minority employee labor hours to total labor hours in each job category.
2. A minimum of ten percent (10%) MBE participation and five percent (5%) WBE participation by state certified MBEs and WBEs. The Bidder shall submit completed MBE/WBE forms (Letters of Intent, Schedule of Participation and SOMWBA certification letters) with the bid.

Failure to comply with these requirements may render a proposal non-responsive.

The City of Quincy has residency requirements for workers which provide for preference when hiring local residents on City-supported construction projects.

The City reserves the right to waive any informality or to reject any and all Bids if deemed in the best interest of the City.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

Recount In School Comm. Race

the first three wards. In that case, the recount would begin again early Friday morning and conclude at approximately 4 p.m., Shea said.

Barry and Cedrone each carried three wards in the election. The final tally showed Cedrone with 5716 and Barry with 5708.

Barry initially requested a recount in the wards he carried: Wards 3, 5 and 6. His home precinct is Ward 5, Precinct 4. Barry won Ward 3 by 259 votes (1103 to 844); Ward 5 by 607 votes (1362 to 755); and Ward 6 by 351 votes (981 to 630).

By contrast, Cedrone won Wards 1, 2 and 4. She lives in Ward 2 Precinct 4. Cedrone won Ward 1 by 156 votes (1048 to 892); Ward 2 by 580 votes (1157 to 577); and Ward 4 by 489 votes (1282 to 793).

Barry and Cedrone each submitted approximately 80 signatures, more the required 10 signatures for a recount in each of the city's six wards, Shea said.

Since each candidate requested a recount in all six wards, Barry and Cedrone were each assured that wards they each won would be recounted. Cedrone said she submitted her own recount papers to be sure that the wards that she won would be part of a recount, just in case Barry filed papers in only Wards 3, 5 and 6.

Shea said Barry requested and Cedrone agreed that Wards 3, 5 and 6 would be recounted first.

If Barry does not gain the upper hand after Wards 3, 5 and 6 are recounted, it is possible he will withdraw from the recount and it will end. However, if he pulls away, the recount will undoubtedly continue Friday because Cedrone would ask for the other wards to be recounted.

Shea said the recount will cost the city approximately $4,000 to $7,000.

Shea agreed the eight-vote margin is very close, especially in light of a race where voters voted for up to three candidates. He said all ballots will be examined closely, particularly those where less than three votes were cast. It is possible a vote did not register because it was not fully "punched", he said.

"Eight is as close you're going to get. We've had recounts where the difference has been in the 100s.

"Eight votes is very close in a vote for three (candidates).

Steps Off At 12:30 P.M. Sunday

72 Units Featured In Christmas Parade

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The 42nd annual Quincy Christmas parade will be held Sunday beginning at 12:30 p.m. along Hancock St. from the intersection of School and Elm Sts. to North Quincy High School.

Approximately 200,000 people are expected to line the 2.8-mile parade route which will feature more than 72 marching units, including floats, bands and returning favorites as well as some new attractions.

This year's parade theme is "What Christmas Means to Me." It will feature 20 floats, 22 bands, 17 speciality units and 13 color guards, more than last year.

This year's parade will have a special aura as Charles Scholz, mayor of Quincy, Ill. and Mayor James Sheets will serve as grand marshals. The two mayors were instrumental in organizing this summer's "Quincy to Quincy" flood relief effort.

"Certainly we're pleased. I think it's a wonderful thing," said George White, director of the Quincy Festival Committee. "We certainly look forward to having him serve as a grand marshal."

Scholz accepted the invitation to be a grand marshal so that he would have a chance to meet the many local residents who contributed to the flood relief project. He will participate in the parade along with his wife, Becky, and their two sons, Charles, 13, and Jake, 11. The two boys will carry a banner with a thank-you message throughoiut the parade route.

White said he is pleased this year's parade will be larger than last year's edition. "It's a little larger than last year. I believe we have a couple of more bands than last year. We have more activity in the color guards.

"Overall, I think we have an excellent parade roster," White added.

Parade participants will include some new faces and attractions and as well as some returning favorites. Among the new floats will be entries by The Citizens Bank, Sen. Michael Morrissey; Quincy 2000 and Hibernia Savings Bank.

Other float participants include:

Quincy College, Quincy High School, Quincy Hospital, South Shore Plaza, Bare Cove Fire Museum, Petar's Automotive/Eric's Auto Body, Woodward School, Quincy Point Congregational Church, Jack Conway Real Estate, The Koch Club, Quincy Partnership, Continental Cable, Quincy Fire Department, St. John's Church and McDonald's.

Of course, Santa will wave to spectators from his float sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.

Floats will compete for seven awards. The best overall float will receive the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1,500 cash. Other cash prizes are $750 for first place, $500 second, and $250 each for third, fourth and fifth.

Other awards are the Mayor's Trophy for best Quincy float; best commercial float; and the Christmas Festival Committee Trophy for the best speciality unit.

Judging the floats will be Gilda Barclay of Quincy, a sixth grade elementary school teacher in New Bedford; Marilyn Reisberg, past president of the Quincy Art Association and member of the Board of Governors "Copley Society,"; and Christopher Neil, a member of the Quincy Art Association and the Excalibur Fine Arts Gallery.

Featured bands are:

Lawrence High School, Bourne High, Abington High, Southbridge High, Holbrook High, Agawam High, New Bedford High and New Bedford Junior High, David Prouty High, Douglas Junior-Senior High, Marshfield High, Norton High, Pittsfield High, Silver Lake Regional High, Conant High, Quincy High, North Quincy High, Chicopee Comp. High, Canton Post, Waltham Post, Klassy Clowns and Winthrop High.

Bands will be judged in the vicinity of Cottage Ave. and Hancock St. The winning high school band will be eligible to appear in the 1994 New Year's Day Cotton Bowl Parade. Chief judge is Joseph Nee.

Specialty units are:

Winners of the Festival Committee poster contest, Quincy High and North Quincy High beauty queens, McDonald's characters, Hallamore Clydesdales, Scituate Safety Car, Toys for Tots, costume characters, Police Athletic League, Council on Aging van, Red Cross vehicle, Quincy Fire Department pumper and vehicle, Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, Bare Cove Museum Fire Engine, Quincy Fire Department vehicle and the MBTA.

Another returning crowd favorite will be Rick Cobban who walks the parade route on stilts.

The co-winners of this year's parade theme contest, Linda Saccetti of Weymouth and Sheila McKenna of Wollaston, will also participate in the parade.

The color guard competition will feature the Quincy Police, Mass State Police, George F. Bryan Post, Ladies State Auxiliary, Cambridge Police, Quincy Fire, Randolph Police; Sharon American Legion Post, Weymouth Police, Sons of the American Legion, US Department of Defense Color Guard, McKeon Post and Marine Corps League.

Fifteen minutes before the start of the parade, a contingent of First Night revelers will walk the route informing parade goers about the city's second annual First Night celebration New Year's Eve. First Night buttons will be available at several locations along the route for $5, a 50% savings.

Comfort stations will be located at the Quincy District Court House and Kelly's in the Square. Portable units will be located at Shaw's parking lot and North Quincy High School.

Turning On Christmas Lights Friday

The holiday season will officially begin in Quincy Friday night, Nov. 26 when the Christmas lights are turned on at First Parish Church, across from City Hall in Quincy Center.

Rick Cobban, the "One Man Band," and costume characters will entertain from 6:30 to 7:15 p.m.

Following the introduction of local officials and winners of the elementary school Christmas parade poster contest winners, the lights will be turned on at 7:45 p.m.

Santa Claus will appear briefly. Following the illumination, candy canes will be distributed to children in attendance by Santa and costume characters.

Winning posters will be displayed in the South Shore Bank windows, and other posters will appear in other storefronts along Hancock St.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will take place inside Presidents Place Galleria.

Santa Claus To Arrive By Parachute Saturday

Santa Claus will "drop" into Quincy for the holiday season Saturday, Nov. 27 at 12:30 p.m. when he parachutes from a plane and lands at Faxon Field behind the Quincy Center for Technical Education.

Costume characters will be present to give candy canes to children at noon. After the landing, Santa will be transported by fire engine to downtown Quincy Center.

Nativity Pageant At First Parish Church

The public is invited to attend a Nativity Pageant Sunday, Dec. 12 at 6:30 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The pageant will be conducted by Rev. Cornelius Heery of Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy, and Rev. Sheldon Bennett of First Parish Church.

Santa's Mailboxes Downtown

Santa's mail boxes will be placed in four Downtown Quincy locations Monday, Nov. 29.

Children can write letters to Santa and place them in the boxes. The letters will be mailed to Santa's North Pole address.

Splitting 4-Year Term Proposed

Barry, Cedrone Recount Tie Leaves School Seat Winner Up In Air

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The method of breaking a deadlock in last week's School Committee election recount could be determined Friday.

The Quincy Board of Registrars met Monday to discuss the results of the recount, which ended Sunday evening with Quincy College Director of Public Affairs Sean Barry and office manager Christine Cedrone tied at 5,734 votes apiece. Both candidates had asked for the recount after the city's Nov. 2 election in which Cedrone topped Barry by only eight votes (5,716 to 5,708) for the city's third available School Committee seat.

Board member John Papile suggested Monday that each of the candidates could serve two years of the four-year term. City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said he will examine the feasibility of that proposal and give his legal opinion on it before the Board of Registrars Friday at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall.

Although City Hall will be closed for business Friday, the board's meeting will be open to the public.

SEAN BARRY

CHRISTINE CEDRONE

McGrath said if the two candidates cannot legally share the four-year term, the matter may be determined under the terms of Quincy's city charter. The charter would require a joint body of the City Council and School Committee to appoint someone to the open seat after all elected officials are sworn in Jan. 3, he said.

If that scenario arose, the nine city councillors and five School Committee members would vote on who gets the seat with a majority of eight votes needed to pick a winner. Mayor James Sheets, who serves as chairman of the School Committee, would legally not be allowed to vote because the School Committee is considered to be his employee, McGrath said.

McGrath also noted that the joint body could award the seat to Barry, Cedrone, or any third party of its choice, including someone

Cahill Repurchasing Handshakes

City Councillor Timothy Cahill is repurchasing Handshakes Cafe after selling it last January.

The Quincy License Board was expected yesterday (Tuesday) to approve a request to allow Paul Bast of Braintree to sell the business back to Cahill. Bast had been operating the soup and sandwich shop, which Cahill opened on Granite Street in 1982 with two business partners, since last February.

The business moved in 1984 to its present location at 1354 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, after which Cahill bought out his two partners to become sole proprietor.

Cahill told The Quincy Sun before it went to press Monday that he had sold the business earlier this year because he "wanted to do other things," including writing the book he just completed, "Profiles On The American Dream," and teaching a business course at Quincy College.

He added that he had also been running a new, "low-key" courier business "kind of like UPS (United Parcel Service)" since leaving Handshakes. The courier business will be looked after by a couple of associates upon his return to the restaurant, he said.

Cahill said he had made an agreement with Bast to repurchase the business from him if sales declined, which is exactly what happened.

"It didn't work out for him, and we thought it would be best for me to take it over," he said. "Everybody's happy the way it worked out."

Asked if he had any plans to sell the business a second time, Cahill said he did not know what his future holds.

"All I'm looking at right now is bringing the business back up to where it was," he said.

'Silly String, Snappers' Ban Working Well, Officials Say

A 1991 Quincy ordinance banning the sale of "silly string" and explosive "snappers" by sidewalk vendors during the city's annual Christmas parade has worked well, according to parade officials.

The Christmas Festival Committee seeks the public's continued cooperation with the parade ban on the sale of "silly string" and "snappers."

The Secret Service: Where Were They?

I caught the movie "Kennedy" on TV the other night and it irked me.

It rekindled my strong belief that the Secret Service wasn't doing its job protecting President-elect John F. Kennedy that night Nov. 10, 1960 at the Kennedy compound in Hyannisport.

And makes me still wonder if they were doing their job that day three years later—Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas.

If Lee Harvey Oswald had been in the compound that night, I don't think they would have known it.

A scene in the "Kennedy" movie shows an army of Secret Servicemen at the Kennedy compound and one of them saying "We don't want an assassination."

But that's not the way I remember it.

That night bothered me back then. It still does. And always will.

It bothered me as I stood there in the living room of former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's house in the Kennedy compound waiting for the President-elect to appear.

Where were the Secret Servicemen I wondered. I wasn't even supposed to be in the house but no one seemed to care.

I was a reporter covering the election, but I could have been standing there waiting for Kennedy with a gun in my pocket.

Word among the press was that 18 Secret Service agents had been assigned to protect the next President of the United States. That they had moved in swiftly after Richard Nixon finally conceded defeat in the see-saw election.

But if they were around the house-inside or outside—that night, they were invisible. They sure weren't checking on anyone.

I've written this story before. But on the 30th anniversary of the assassination, I think it's worth another look.

So, let me go back to Nov. 10, 1960 and maybe you might wonder a little more about Nov. 22, 1963.

Earlier that day, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 35th President-to-be had held a press conference at the National Guard Armory in Hyannis which had served as press headquarters during the election.

The headlines kept changing fast all day.

"Hoover, Dulles To Stay"

"Ike Asks JFK Meet Him Soon On Takeover"

"Kennedy Says Election Repudiates No One"

Hyannis and Hyannisport had become international datelines.

Nixon had conceded. The election sweatout was over. Now the whole Kennedy clan had gathered at the armory to hear the President-elect make a short victory statement. Standing proudly at his side was Jacqueline, 31, radiant and expecting their second child in a few weeks.

On the rostrum were his parents, Joseph and Rose Kennedy, his brother, Bobby with Ethel, Ted, sisters Eunice Shriver, Jean Smith, Pat Lawford and somewhat in the background, brother-in-law Peter Lawford.

All listened intently to what actually was a preview of the theme of his inaugural address as he said:

"The election may have been a close one. But I think that there is a general agreement by all of our citizens that the supreme national effort will be needed in the years ahead to move this country safely through the 1960's."

There appeared to be tears in his eyes as he thanked "all those who worked so long and so hard in this campaign."

He made quite an impression on me.

And, I was replaying that scene in my mind as I stood

PRESIDENT-ELECT John F. Kennedy and Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth chat at Barnstable Airport in Hyannis Nov. 11, 1960. Kennedy was departing for Palm Springs, Fla. after his election. Behind them are Kenneth O'Donnell and Pierre Salinger.

there in Joseph Kennedy's living room that evening waiting for the President-elect. Waiting with me were maybe 40 or 50 other newsmen.

But at least three of us were not supposed to be there. We were party crashers. The invitation had been extended to members of the press that had traveled with Kennedy throughout the campaign. No one mentioned the local press.

I was covering the election for the Boston Traveler, Dave Farrell was for The Boston Herald, and the late Frank Kelly of Wollaston, was taking photos for both The Traveler and Herald.

The three of us had decided that this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and we weren't going to miss it.

The bus to take the invited press to the Kennedy compound was parked outside the Hyannis armory. The three of us had proper press credentials — but only to get us into the armory for the actual election coverage.

We walked down the street after eating and stepped aboard the bus. No one questioned us. No one asked to see our credentials. We entered Joseph Kennedy's house. No one checked us.

Anyone could have gotten aboard that bus and rode into the compound that night.

None of the Kennedys were in sight when we arrived so we started browsing around the living room. On the wall were framed letters written by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to Ambassador Kennedy.

On the fireplace mantle was a model of the USS Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. the destroyer named after the son whose planned political career went down in flames in a World War II mission plane crash.

The dining room connected with the living room. On the dining room table was a punch bowl and some cups. Someone said to help ourselves. So we did.

Everyone headed back into the living room. I didn't care too much for the punch and was returning my cup to the dining room table when a screen door leading into the room swung open and in stepped John F. Kennedy.

He walked over to me and we shook hands. "Congratulations, Mr. President," I said. It wasn't the correct protocol. He was still officially Senator Kennedy. But, he seemed to enjoy being called, "Mr. President" and smiled.

We were alone in the room for a few moments. The others then spotted him and we were soon surrounded.

Kennedy was smiling but he looked tired. His eyes were red from the strain of the campaign and the final agonizing hours when the election could have gone wither way.

One reporter asked him what he thought made the final difference in the election.

"He (Nixon) stayed around too long in the South," Kennedy replied. (Stayed wasn't the exact word he used.)

Soon the other members of the Kennedy family joined us: Jacqueline, beautiful and pregnant with John John; Rose Kennedy looking as trim as the Kennedy sisters, Bobby Kennedy and Ted, Sargent Shriver. But Joseph Kennedy was no where to be seen.

The President-elect revealed he was flying to Palm Springs, Fla. the next morning. He said he would relax and "maybe play a little golf."

"But don't mention the golf," he laughed. He didn't want the country to think it was getting another golfer for President.

I got to chatting with Rose Kennedy and we were soon discussing Quincy-born Presidents John and John Quincy Adams. She wanted to know all about them and Abigail, too. I told her all I knew and said when I got back home I would have Quincy's historian, William C. Edwards, send her more information. (He did.)

Someone then produced a number of Christmas gift-wrapped bottles of bourbon, scotch and whiskey from under the counter in the kitchen. And then came a sight you could never forget. There was the next President of the United States pouring drinks and carrying ice cubes for the press.

It was a night to cherish and fondly remember.

The following morning the Kennedy party flew out of Barnstable airport in Hyannis aboard the family plane "Caroline."

I remember seeing Joseph Kennedy there. And Caroline, not then quite three and as cute as little Shirley Temple.

I got one more chance to talk with Kennedy before the plane took off. Pierre Salinger and Kenneth O'Donell were standing behind us as we talked.

"Good luck, Mr. President," I said to him again in farewell as we shook hands. "Thank you," he said, breaking into a wide grin getting a kick out of being called "Mr. President" for the second time.

After the plane was airborne, I kiddingly told Farrell and Kelly that someday I would write the story of how we crashed the Kennedy compound. I would wait until he was out of office, I said, because the party that night was "off the record."

I figured it would not be for at least eight years before I got around to writing the story. I thought for sure Kennedy would be re-elected to a second term. And, of course, he would be a world famed figure for many years to come, sought after for his comments and opinions.

It still pains me on each anniversary of his tragic death in Dallas because on each anniversary I recall telling Farrell and Kelly:

"And do you know what I'm going to write about after he leaves office? I'm going to tell how we got by the Secret Service that night. I'm going to tell how I could have assassinated John Fitzgerald Kennedy over the punch bowl in the dining room of his father's house."

But who could have forseen back then as I said those words what was to happen three years later?

I can't help wondering about the Secret Service that night in Hyannisport. And I can't help wondering about them that morning three years later in Dallas.

It keeps nagging at me. It has for 30 years. It always will.

who did not run in the election.

Another possibility would be for the matter to be determined by a judge in Dedham Superior Court. Attorneys for both Barry and Cedrone, however, said Monday they would like the matter settled out of court.

Barry, after Monday's board meeting, agreed.

"We ought to avoid court at all costs," said Barry, who declined further comment.

A third option would be to hold a citywide special election. City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the Board of Registrars, said a such an election would cost the city around $30,000. Attorneys for both candidates expressed hopes that any solution reached would be as inexpensive as possible for the city.

Cedrone, however, who did not attend the board meeting, said in a phone interview Monday that a special election would be the fairest method of determining the outcome.

"I think it would be the fairest way to determine exactly what the people want in that office," she said. She said the idea of the joint City Council-School Committee body determining the outcome is "too political."

"I wouldn't want to be the person who casts the deciding vote (in that scenario)," she said.

Cedrone added that the whole recount situation could have been avoided if one more person in the city had decided to cast a ballot.

"One vote can make a difference," she said. "You have to vote."

Shea said he believes the recount tie is the first in the city's history. The recount, which encompassed all 30 precincts of the city's six wards, will cost the city roughly $6,000 "give or take $200 either way," Shea said.

Shea added that the recount, which had begun last Thursday, went back and forth between the two candidates throughout the four-day process and Barry led by one vote with only one precinct to go. Cedrone, however, picked up a vote in Ward 6, Precinct 5 to earn the tie.

The Board of Registars is the determining body in such matters based on Quincy's city charter, according to Shea. The city clerk is chairman of the board by virtue of his office, while other members are appointed by the mayor. The board, which must consist of two Democrats and two Republicans, today includes Democrats Shea and Papile and Republicans Louise Randall and Denis Tardo.

McGrath said the board must certify a winner within 10 days of a recount. He added, however, that in the event of a tie, the board must certify the results as "no winner."

Cedrone and Barry were two of six candidates vying for three School Committee seats in the Nov. 2 election. Incumbent Ronald Mariano and tax accountant JoAnn Bragg placed first and second on the ballot with votes of 8,918 and 8,479 respectively.

A 'Thank You' From Quincy, Ill. Salvation Army

[A copy of the following letter to the City of Quincy was submitted to The Quincy Sun]:

Dear Friends of the Salvation Army:

I want to say a special thank you to you for your support of those that have lost their homes, those living in temporary emergency shelter, those unemployed because the river took their place of employment, and the many children that wonder if they will ever have a permanent home again.

It seems like it has been an eternity that we have been fighting the waters of the Mississippi. Many families have been out of their homes since April. The river rose and took all the homes on the lower banks. Now the river owns Meyer, Niota, Dallas City, Hull, West Quincy, and many other towns up and down the river. We have provided food, shelter, clothing, cleaning supplies, transportation, emotional support and many other forms of assistance.

I have served in Alexandria, Meyer, LaGrange, Hannibal, Bluff Hall, West Quincy, Hull, and any other place I have heard a cry for help, and collected food, cold drinks, cookies, fruit, gloves, bug spray, powder, socks, and any other thing that was needed. It has and will only be possible to continue to help those in need because you cared enough to give.

Board members, auxiliary, staff members, friends, and volunteers have helped The Salvation Army help others. Your gift of supplies and/or cash makes sure we have something to give. It has been many long weeks and long hours. There are many more long hours to come and I know with your help those that are affected by this flood will be thankful that someone cared enough to see those long-term needs were taken care of.

My special request is, please pray for us and the flood victims. Pray for the children, for I feel your gift to help mom and dad with food, shelter, and clothing will take pressure from their shoulders and they will be able to give support to their children. God bless you and yours.

23 From Quincy Die In Fire At Coconut Grove

Nov. 24-Dec. 1
1942
51 Years Ago

At least 23 persons from Quincy were killed and three others were reported missing as a Saturday night fire swept the crowded Coconut Grove nightclub in Boston with a known death till of 478 merrymakers.

An ambulance detail of three Quincy firefighters, Lt. Alex McEachern, Waldo Lagerquist and Joseph Maquire, was the first outside unit to arrive on the fire scene and they removed 40 bodies from the charred main lounge of the nightclub.

Ten nurses were dispatched from Quincy City Hospital to Boston City Hospital to assist in treating fire victims and Hospital Supt. Dr. Joseph P. Leone was prepared to ship 84 units of frozen blood plasma from its Civil Defense blood bank to Boston.

Quincy Police Chief John J. Avery, Lt. David L. Farrell and Special Officer Ernest Hodge formed a volunteer team and spent three hours removing dead from the building and carrying the injured to hospitals in stretchers.

Quincy Red Cross workers under Capt. Eleanor Gould and Lt. Lillian Schwab mustered at the Adams Academy and dispatched two mobile canteens to the fire scene to serve coffee to rescue workers who were working in sub-freezing cold.

In the wake of the tragedy, Mayor Willian W. Jenness called a meeting of Chief Avery, Fire Chief William J. Sands and Building Inspector Alrick A. Weidman and promised that a survey will be made of all places where the public gathers in Quincy.

"We must be sure that such a tragedy will not happen in this city," said Jenness.

NEW RATIONING RULES

The Quincy War Price and Rationing Board announced that people who, for whatever reason, do not have War Ration Book One in their possession must register before Dec. 15 in order to receive War Ration Book Two.

The board warned that Book One "will be used to ration coffee. It will also be used to issue War Ration Book Two and may be used to ration other commodities" such as sugar.

Turkey Giblet Stuffing

At our house on Thanksgiving Day, I usually make two different kinds of stuffing, one with giblets and one without. In today's recipe, the giblets can be eliminated as you wish. Here is the basic recipe for either chicken or turkey.

Turkey Giblet Stuffing
About 5 oz. favorite ground meat
1 stalk of celery finely chopped
1 small onion chopped
giblets from the bird (cut up)
1 egg
2 Tbsps. Bell's seasoning
2 Tbsps. oil
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/2 bag stuffing mix
2 Tbsps. grated cheese
1/4 cup white cooking wine
salt and pepper to taste

In hot oil, saute the celery and onion. Add the ground meat, the giblets and the wine. Cover and cook until blended. Add the stuffing mix (which has been soaked in water). Cook for a couple of minutes and then add the seasoned bread crumbs, the egg and grated cheese. Add a little more bread crumbs if the consistency is too watery and the water if too thick. Cool in the refrigerator before placing it either in the cavity of the turkey or chicken or if you prefer, in a casserole dish.

Roast the turkey at 325 to 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes to the pound depending on whether or not it is stuffed.

Happy Thanksgiving!!!

DENTIST ROLE IN SMOKING CESSATION

Patients come to the dentist for oral prevention and treatment procedures. As a part of oral health prevention, dentist should also provide smoking cessation treatment in order to ensure successful outcomes of dental treatment and to help patients in preventing the occurrence or recurrence of dental diseases, specifically oral cancer or pre-cancerous conditions.

Before it was the role of physician or the Surgeon General in helping patients to quit smoking. Now dentists get involved to ensure the quality of dental health of patients as important members of the primary health care providers team.

According to American Cancer Society estimates, approximately 30,500 new oral cancer cases are being diagnosed annually. Deaths from oral cancer are occurring at the rate of about 8,350 per year. The National Cancer Institute estimates that death from tobacco-related diseases are shortening lives by an average of 20 years. It is well known that oral cancer has a higher risk for developing in smokers than in non-smokers. The "smokers" category includes all types of smokers-cigarette, cigar, pipe as well as those who use smokeless tobacco products such as snuff and chewing tobacco.

Smoking contributes to many ill-effects in the oral cavity. The effects of oral tissue related to tobacco's use range from precancerous lesions to halitosis (bad breath) and stained teeth. Smoking is a causative factor in developing periodontal disease. Delayed wound-healing following oral surgery or periodontal surgery may result from the effects of nicotine in cigarettes. A painful condition called Dry socket may occur after tooth extraction when patients smoke due to absence of or delayed clot formation in the extraction site.

Oral Lesions or white lesions in the mouth, nicotine stomatitis or target-shaped lesions on the palate of heavy smokers are commonly seen.

The dentist responsibility includes prevention of oral disease like oral cancer and periodontal diseases. So anything that affect the health of its oral tissue is appropriately the dentist's concern and responsibility.

Patients must not be surprised if they hear from their dentist about Smoking Cessation. Dentists doing this are acting in their patients' interest to preserve oral health and avoid oral diseases and discomfort.

Ayers To Hold Meeting On Standish School Dec. 2

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting Thursday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy, to discuss the future of the Myles Standish Elementary School in Squantum.

The school is currently rented by the Quincy Lodge of Elks but will be left without a tenant in the near future when the Elks move to their new headquarters in West Quincy. School Supt. Eugene Creedon has stated he does not consider it economically feasible to reopen the school due its limited number of classrooms.

Creedon and Mayor James Sheets have suggested utilizing the Myles Standish School as the new headquarters of the Beechwood Community Life Center. The center is looking for a new headquarters after the School Committee's recent vote to reopen the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston, its current home, as a kindergarten center in Sept. 1994.

Ayers said he wishes to give residents an opportunity to offer their input and express their concerns regarding the future of the site. City Council President Charles Phelan will be in attendance along with Ayers to address the issue.

Boy Scout Troop 24 Receives Council Commendation

Members of Boy Scout Troop 24 of Squantum recently received commendations from the City Council for their efforts in refurbishing the Quincy Salt Marsh Trail.

The trail, which was originally designed in 1973 by Council President Charles Phelan as part of his own Eagle Scout project, is located in Grossman Park on Fenno Street near Wollaston Beach.

Phelan, who handed out the commendations, said the trail had begun to deteriorate in recent years and the troop worked to renovate it by adding new signposts and making other improvements.

Members of Troop 24 include: Scoutmaster George Johnson, Alex King, Sean Glennon, Brian McFarland, Tim Keating, Aaron Bassett, Chris Johnson, Adam MacMillan, Brian Radelle, Joe Cote, Jason McGough, and Mike Wilson.

Phelan was surprised when he, in turn, was presented a commendation from Brian Glennon II, field enforcement officer of the Quincy Conservation Commission, for his efforts in founding the site and in acting as a consultant to the boy scouts' recent renovations.

"This is the first one (commendation) I've ever gotten back," he joked.

2 QHS Students In 1994 Merit Program

Two Quincy High School seniors have been named Commended Students in the 1994 National Merit Scholarship Program.

They are: Ashley Lynch-Mahoney and Christopher Sherriff.

A Letter of Commendation from National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which conducts the program, will be presented by the school to both students. The announcement was made by QHS Principal Lloyd Hill.

About 35,000 Commended Students throughout the nation are being honored for their outstanding performance on the 1992 Preliminary SAT-National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, which was the route of entry to the 1994 Merit Program. Commended Students have shown exceptional academic promise by placing among the top five percent of more than one million program entrants.

5 NQHS Students Win AP Scholar Awards

Five students at North Quincy High School have been named AP Scholars by The College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievements on the college-level Advanced Placement (AP) Examination.

They are: Kathleen J. Groom, William W. Sit, Tanya N. Kutasz, Edward J. Wong, and Kevin A. Price.

Only 11 percent of the 424,000 students who took AP Examinations in May performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement: the AP Scholar with Distinction, the AP Scholar with Honor, and the AP Scholar.

Groom and Sit qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning grades of 3 or above on five or more AP exams with an average exam grade of at least 3.50.

Kutasz qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP Examinations with an average exam grade of at least 3.25.

Wong and Price qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations with grades of 3 or higher.

AP Examinations are graded on a 5-point scale, 5 being the highest. There are 29 AP Examinations in 16 disciples, and most of the nation's colleges and universities award students credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher.

The College Board is a national, non-profit membership association of more than 2,800 schools and agencies in higher and secondary education committed to promoting educational opportunity and improving economic standards.

WHAT IS CARDIAC CATHETERIZATION?

Say you have been having some worrisome symptoms, like shortness of breath, palpitations, even chest pain. As one of a number of diagnostics, your doctor may recommend cardiac catheterization. This procedure calls for inserting a tiny, flexible tube called a catheter into a blood vessel and easing it gently toward the heart. X-ray cameras can help the doctor guide the catheter accurately. Among the tests that may be performed during catheterization include measuring the heart's electrical activity, retrieving blood samples and taking pressure readings. A contrast medium may also be injected into the catheter to enable X-rays to show the blood flow, locate blockages, and study the heart's pumping action.

P.S. Cardiac catheterization can also be used to insert temporary pacemakers, dissolve blood clots, and widen blood flow channels.

Cardiac catheterization has proved an invaluable tool for cardiologists. If you would like to learn more about the new technology, or about what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. We treat the patient, not just the disease.

Wollaston Business Association Holiday Celebration

Nearly $1,000 In Prizes To Be Awarded At Wollasto

Nearly $1,000 in prizes will be awarded during the eighth annual Wollaston holiday celebration on Saturday.

A total of 27 Wollaston Business Association members have included coupons in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun which can be dropped at the appropriate businesses during Saturday's festivities. A drawing for the winner will be held at each store at the end of the event.

The event will feature special offers from Wollaston businesses, the annual lighting of the Wollaston Christmas lights, and, of course, an appearance by Santa Claus himself. What better way to kick off the season?

The celebration will begin at 3 p.m. and will kick into high gear with a performance by The Quincy All-City Elementary School Band, which will perform holiday music for all to enjoy from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Santa Claus will arrive on the scene by fire truck at 5 p.m. A number of special guests, including Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Charles Phelan, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti, have been invited to join Santa in welcoming neighbors to Wollaston. Parents wishing to have their children's picture taken with Santa are asked to bring their own cameras.

At 5:15 p.m. the Wollaston Christmas lights will be switched on, giving Beale St. the cheery glow of the season.

During the celebration, free lollypops, balloons and hot chocolate will be handed out to the children. As in the past, there will also be special holiday bargains from a number of Wollaston businesses.

The festivities will end at 6 p.m. when the participating businesses from the Wollaston Business Association draw the prizes from the coupons.

The participating merchants and their prizes are:

Balloons & Stuff, 690 Hancock St., free balloon delivery in the Quincy area.

Barry's Deli, 21 Beale St., free lunch for one for a week.

Beale St. Fish Market, 35 Beale St., $20 gift certificate.

ENC To Perform 'Messiah' At Nazarene Church Dec. 4-5

Eastern Nazarene College will present the 59th annual performance of George F. Handel's "Messiah" Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 4-5 at Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, 37 East Elm Ave.

The concert will be performed by the ENC Choral Union and Orchestra directed by Timothy Shetler, professor of music and Robert J. Howard, conductor emeritus.

Soloists will include Penny Rubenfield, soprano; Dianna Daly, mezzo-soprano; Frank Ragsdale, tenor; Matthew Malloy, baritone and Roy Miller, trumpet.

There is no admission charge, but a free-will offering will be received.

For more information call 773-6350 ext. 262.

Raymond Daigle Attends Principals' Convention

Raymond Daigle, principal of St. Ann's School, 1 St. Ann Rd., Wollaston, recently attended the Archdiocesan Elementary School Principals' Association (AESPA) convention at Guest Quarters in Waltham.

Daigle, now in his fourth year at St. Ann's, was a featured speaker at the convention. His topic concerned changing trends in society and how they will affect schools, and he addressed many education issues which will necessitate change in the coming years.

"Schools need to be more flexible," said Daigle. "St. Ann's School is trying to address this need, adding extended day care, summer camp, study skills, and student-based tutoring to its offering."

Raymer: 'We Are Playing As Well As Any Team In The State'

Quincy Hot With 5-Game Win Streak

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy football team's slim hopes of at least tying for the Old Colony League title were all but ended two weeks ago but the Presidents, among the hottest teams in Eastern Mass., hope to end the season with a victory over North Quincy on Thursday and finish with an 8-2 record, coach Jack Raymer's best record since 1990 when they ended at 8-1-1.

It would take a shocking win by winless Silver Lake over Plymouth Thursday plus a Quincy win to give the Presidents a possible shot at the Super Bowl.

"Right now we are playing as well as any team in the state," said Raymer, whose team takes a five-game win streak into the holiday classic.

"The kids are clicking well both on offense and especially on defense and are really playing together."

Defensively Quincy has been super. Before giving up four touchdown passes to Barnstable last week when the Presidents stopped the Red Raiders' ground game cold, they had given up just three touchdowns in five games.

Quincy virtually knocked Barnstable out of a Super Bowl spot with its win in the last game and Plymouth put itself in a position to make the Super Bowl with a win over Weymouth.

"This should be a great game as I feel North Quincy is right now one of the top teams in the league," said Raymer. "They have won four games in a row and their defense has been outstanding all season."

Quincy is led by the running of junior Sam Brown (902 yards rushing) and the passing and running of quarterback Mike Bartlett.

"Mike has been just fantastic and his passing and rushing had given us a well-balanced attack," Raymer said. "Brown and Mike Elder (the leading scorer with 52 points on six touchdowns and 16 extra points) have been rushing well and we will have Terry Bowman, a fine sophomore who has missed several games with an injury, back and he will add depth to our running game."

Tom Malvesti has had a fantastic season as a pass receiver and is also a fine defensive back. Jason Sova is another top receiver.

Offensively the young line has done a tremendous job with only one senior, center Dave D'Olympio.

The offense will have Paul Colleary at tight end, Sova and Bowman wide receivers, Butch Palazza and Jeff Burrell tackles, Mike Feeley and Peter Kolson guards, D'Olympio center, Bartlett quarterback, Brown tailback, Malvesti wingback and Elder fullback.

Also scheduled to see action offensively is sophomore Mike Sheffer at wide receiver.

On defense will be Feeley and Jason Bennett ends, John Green and Mike Lombardi tackles, Colleary, Ashley Davis and sophomore Bill Dunn linebackers and Kevin Carey, Tim Dowling, Steve Provost and Jon Gangi defensive backs.

Malvesti, Sean McDonald and Brian Frasier will also see service on defense.

Raymer praised the work of his assistant coaches, Bob Noble, Bob Keuther, Mark Giordani and freshman coaches Chris Noble and Kerry Byrne.

Going into Thursday's 61st game, Quincy has won 29 games and North Quincy 26.

Five games ended in ties including four scoreless ties in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983, while the 1987 game ended in a 14-14 tie.

Quincy has the longest win streak in the series, winning five in a row from 1954 through 1958. Quincy also won four straight from 1946 through 1949.

North's first five teams were unbeaten in the series, winning in 1933, 1935 and 1936 and playing to scoreless ties in 1934 and 1937.

Conroy's 1970 Quincy Team 9-0-0

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, has a spotless 9-0-0 record and won the Greater Boston League championship.

The Presidents defeated North Quincy that year, 16-6.

McPhee: 'We Have Been Playing Well And We Will Be Ready'

North Coming On With 4 Straight Wins

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team has no Super Bowl to shoot for this year, but the Raiders have been coming on strong and take a four-game win streak and a 5-4 record into Thursday's game.

"We have been playing well and we will be ready," said coach Ken McPhee. "We are going to be in for a real tough one as I rate Quincy as strong as any team in the Old Colony League. They have a well-balanced attack with good passing and fine running.

"Defensively they have been fantastic and our offensive line will have to be at its best if we hope to run against them. If they stop our running attack, Dan Duncan has proven he can pass when he has to."

Leading the running attack is junior Shawn Nee who, despite missing two games, has rushed for 948 yards. He is backed up by Derick Epps, Mike McGregor, Glenn Peterson and Jamie Karvelis.

Duncan has several fine pass receivers, including big Brian Raftery (6-5, 265 pounds), who has been brilliant both ways; George Wirtz, Nathan and Jeremy Gott and Eric Zimmerman.

Defensively Raftery, Dave Pacino, Jason Picardi, Justin Dilks, Sean Halpin and Mac Ngutter have been outstanding.

"I just hope it is good day and the footing is good," McPhee said. "If it is a good day, the fans are going to see quite a ball game. We have won four in a row and Quincy has a five-game win streak."

Offensively Raftery will be the starting tight end and Wirtz, Nathan and Jeremy Gott and Zimmerman will see action at wide receiver.

Dave Carney, Sean Halpin and Matt Kielty will be at tackle, Dilks and Pacino at guard and Picardi at center.

Duncan will be the quarterback, McGregor and Peterson the fullbacks, Nee tailback and Karvelis wingback.

On defense it will be Raftery and Picardi at end, Peter Fitzpatrick and Dilks at tackle, Pacino at nose guard, where he is one of the best in the state; Carney, Halpin, Keith Martinson and Peterson linebackers and Ngutter, Nathan and Jeremy Gott, Toby Odom and Wirtz in the secondary.

The status of Kevin Ross is uncertain. The tight end does the punting and does it well and kicks the extra points and field goals (he has two of them). He suffered a

1946 Game Drew The Biggest Crowd

There has always been an argument as to which was the biggest crowd to watch the Quincy-North Quincy game.

It appears the 1946 game drew the biggest paid attendance, reported to have been 18,065, while the paid attendance at the 1947 game was 18,003.

Many estimated that close to 25,000 saw the 1946 game, counting the many watching from the walls and trees and those who lined the then Eastern Mass. bus garage yard near the MBTA garage.

The biggest crowd previously was 15,000 which watched the 1939 game.

MIKE BARTLETT, who has had an outstanding season as Quincy's quarterback, is set for his final game against North Quincy.

NORTH QUINCY quarterback Dan Duncan is one of the Raiders' major hopes on offense against Quincy.

MIKE ELDER, Quincy's leading scorer, is ready for the Thanksgiving game.

Elder, Nee Top Scorers

Mike Elder is Quincy's top scorer going into the Thanksgiving game with six touchdowns and 16 extra points for 52 points, followed by Sam Brown with seven touchdowns for 42 points.

Shawn Nee tops North Quincy's scorers with eight touchdowns for 48 points, followed by Dan Duncan with four touchdowns for 24 points.

The total scoring:

Leone's 1966 North Team Had Perfect Record

A year ago North Quincy enjoyed its best season in history, going 11-0-0, winning the Old Colony League title and topping Arlington in the Div. 1B Super Bowl.

The season including a 20-0 blanking of Quincy during the Thanksgiving Day game.

The 1966 team, coached by the late Carl Leone, had a perfect 9-0-0 record, won the Greater Boston League title and shared the Class A crown with Arlington.

North defeated Quincy, 8-0, that year. Among the Raider players on that team was present coach Ken McPhee.

Quincy Won First Thanksgiving Day Game, 19-0

The first Quincy-North game on Thanksgiving was played in 1938 and was the first to be played at the new Municipal Stadium.

Quincy won, 19-0, for its first win of the series after three losses and two scoreless ties.

Lanny Lombardi scored two touchdowns and Jackie Pettinelli one for the Presidents.

North Won Only Overtime Game In Rivalry

North Quincy's first Super Bowl appearance in 1975 came as a result of the only overtime game in the long Quincy series.

North had a 9-1 record, losing only to Brockton. That was the year of the tie-breaker for North. The Raiders won three games in overtime twice on field goals by Ed McAleney, who was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy Hall of Fame Tuesday night. North defeated Quincy, 15-8, in overtime.

That marked Dave Burke's first season as North's head coach.

As a player, Burke led North to wins over Quincy in 1945 and 1946.

Sullivan Had 6-2 Record Against North

Bill Sullivan, who coached Quincy from 1952 to 1959, enjoyed a 6-2 record against North Quincy and led the Presidents to five successive wins over the Raiders.

Sullivan, who had been assistant to the late Munroe McLean from 1939 through 1951, enjoyed wins over North from 1954 through 1959 before North won in his final season.

North Won First Game In 1933, 6-0

The first meeting between Quincy and North Quincy was played on Armistice Day, 1933, with North winning, 6-0.

Two of the first five games were played at Pfaffman's Oval, the present site of Veterans Memorial Stadium. Another was played at Coddington Field.

Plaques For Rows And Seats Available

The Veterans' Memorial Stadium Seating Committee announces that persons who wish to purchase a row or seat plaque will be able to pick up a plaque request form at the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving football game.

The fund-raiser continues to receive support. One hundred and two rows and an additional 10 rows of individual seats have been purchased, totaling 167 seats with plaques in place on the new aluminum seating.

Class reunion committees continue to be the most productive purchaser of rows and seats.

The donation for a row is $300 and $25 for a seat.

Name plates are affixed to the end of each row designating the donors. Many of the plaques are engraved "In Memory of" former teachers, classmates, or coaches who had great fondness for their activities at the stadium. Persons may select their own row or seat location.

All proceeds are tax deductible and go toward the renovation of the stadium. The Quincy Schools' Athletic Contribution Committee is a non-profit committee sponsoring the drive.

On Thanksgiving Day forms and information will be available at the rear of the home side press box and all concession stands. Persons may also call Frank Santoro at 472-5285 or Barry Welch at the Quincy Recreation Department at 376-1394 for additional information.

Purchased rows that have not been previously acknowledged are:

Class of J'32 QHS, In Memory of Joy Hanlon, age 10 QTC members, Pilgrim Health Care, Quincy Youth Arena, Century Bank, Wollaston Business Association, In Memory of Hank Smith, NQHS Class of '67, and Harvard Community Health Plan.

Burke Won 1945 Game For North

North's Dave Burke fell on the opening kickoff in the end zone as the confused Quincy players watched and it turned out to be the only touchdown in North Quincy's 7-0 win in the 1945 game.

North's win ruined Quincy's chances for the Eastern Mass., Class B championship.

North Jayvees Beat Quincy, 30-16

By PETE ZOIA

The North Quincy junior varsity football team lost no time in scoring against their arch-rival Quincy last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium, winning by a score of 30-16.

Minutes into the game, Quincy fumbled and North recovered on the Presidents' 45. Two quick thrusts by Tim Zaniboni, a 15-yard gain and a 30-yard touchdown up the middle, put North ahead 6-0. The rush for the two point conversion failed.

A brilliant punt return of 70 yards by Derick Epps, who started to his left and made a complete U-turn, outrunning everyone down the right side line to score. Again the conversion run was stopped North leading 12-0.

Quincy retaliated with Jeff Russell doing some nice passing. Two successive passes put the Presidents on North's 11. Another pass got Quincy their first score, Russell to Mike Sheffer. The two points were added and Quincy cut the margin down to four points at halftime, 12-8.

A 27-yard pass from Sean Dolbeare to Jerry Fernandez started the Red Raiders on another touchdown jaunt. Epps made seven yards, Zaniboni went for five more, and here Fernandez made a leaping catch with two Quincy defenders dropped over him for a 32-yard score.

Quincy couldn't move the ball and North scored a gain after a short Quincy kick. From the Presidents 12, Epps carried twice first for 10 yards then for the final two yards to score, making it 24-8, North.

One play after the kick-off, Dan Reynolds of North recovered Quincy fumble on their 13-yard line. Epps recovered for his third touchdown of the morning, going in from 11 yards out.

Quincy came back as Greg Santoro went 45 yards on a great cutback run to his left to score Russell proceeded to hit Mike Flagg for the two points to end all the scoring for both sides.

The win for coaches Pete Chrisom and coach Tom Carter was the ninth of the season with only one loss.

After School Recreation Program Underway

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces the department's supervised after school recreation programs are underway at neighborhood school locations.

Supervised recreation activities on various days and times are scheduled for boys and girls age eight through the fifth grade. Activities include relay races, floor hockey, basketball, games and contests. Weather permitting, outdoor activities such as touch football, slug and soccer may also be played.

The program is free and open to Quincy residents, who may attend in the location of their choice. Registration is done at the program site. Participants must wear sneakers at all locations.

The fall schedule is:

•Atherton Hough School, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Tuesday.

•Beechwood Community Life Center, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Wednesday.

•Daniel Webster School, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Monday.

•Lincoln-Hancock Community School, coed, 2 to 4 p.m., Thursday.

•Merrymount School, coed, 2 to 4 p.m., Wednesday.

•Montclair School, coed, 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., Monday.

•Parker School, boys, 3 to 5 p.m., Wednesday.

•Parker School, girls, 3 to 5 p.m., Thursday.

•Snug Harbor School, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Monday.

•Squantum School, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Tuesday.

•Wollaston School, coed, 3 to 5 p.m., Thursday.

The start of this program at the Bernazzani School is delayed pending the completion of the new gym. An early December date is anticipated.

St. Moritz Devils Blast Islanders, 10-0

The St. Moritz Devils blasted the Middlesex Islanders, 10-0, last Saturday in Middlesex.

The Devils quickly got on the scoreboard with a goal from defenseman Pat Balaconis. Steve Segalla of Quincy followed with a putback of his own miss. Tom Hughes of Quincy and Nick Sarno added a goal apiece and the Devils led, 4-0, at the end of the first period.

The second period was more of the same as Segalla scored again and Sean Sullivan, Brett Wood and Corey Rosenfield each had a goal apiece to bring the lead to 8-0.

In the third period, John Segalla of Quincy scored early and Steve Segalla added another goal for a hat trick. The Devils' Kevin Lynch stopped a breakaway to keep the Islanders off the scoreboard, and goalie Kevin Regan earned his second shutout of the season.

The Devils will now gear up for their upcoming Thanksgiving Tournament in Lake Placid, N.Y.

North Freshmen Blank Quincy, 14-0

The North Quincy freshmen football team defeated the Quincy frosh 14-0 last Saturday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The game was the first part of a doubleheader which was followed by the matchup of the two schools' junior varsity squads.

Brian Walsh of North scored from two yards out in the second quarter. The extra point try was no good.

A highlight of the period was a blocked punt by Sean O'Toole against Quincy. Penalties against the Red Raiders ruined their chances to score more as North led at the half, 6-0.

Quincy's best offensive threat came in the third quarter. From their 45, they reached North's 30-yard line only to stall and lose the ball after a series of incomplete passes.

It was here on the Raider 40 that the final score came. After Walsh picked up five yards, O'Toole took a hand-off, ran to his left and cut back to his right, outracing the Presidents' secondary for 55-yard touchdown run. Walsh added the final two points carrying the ball in to make it an earned 14-0 North win.

North's head coach Dick Meyer was well-pleased with the win.

"They were stronger than we figured. It was a hard-fought game," he said.

North freshmen finished up with six wins and four losses.

Dudek, Zoia North 1980 Standouts

Joe Dudek led North Quincy to wins over Quincy in 1980 and 1981, rushing for three touchdowns in a 27-20 win in 1980 and scoring the only touchdown in a 7-0 decision in 1981.

Also in the 1980 game North's Dean Zoia scored on a 93-yard run, surpassing his father, Hall of Famer Pete Zoia, who had a 90-yard touchdown run in 1935.

ANSWERING A KNOCK

Gasoline's octane rating is simply a measure of its ability to resist "knock" (or detonation), which is uncontrolled combustion in the cylinder. If the sharp metallic sound of knocking is heard coming from the engine under normal driving conditions, a switch to a higher octane fuel is recommended. Under normal conditions, the spark plug ignites the fuel/air mixture to crate a wall of flame that spreads evenly through the combustion chamber. If fuel with too low an octane rating is used, part of the compressed fuel/air mixture may ignite prematurely. This creates two points of combustion within the cylinder, with the abnormal one producing a sharp explosion that has the effect of striking the piston top with a hammer.

HINT: As a car gets older, its octane requirement is likely to increase.

If you are having questions about the right gasoline for your car or having a particular problem, don't hesitate to come into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. OBITUARIES

Peter E. Dunn, 99

Owned Wholesale Fruit Co.

A funeral Mass for Peter E. Dunn, 99, of Acton, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Nov. 16 in St. Mary's Church.

Mr. Dunn died Nov. 12 at the Jamaica Plain Veterans Administration Hospital after a brief illness.

He was owner and operator of Dunn Brothers Wholesale Fruit & Produce Co. for 50 years. He operated the business out of his home on Dunn's Hill Road, which is named after his father.

When Mr. Dunn marked his 99th birthday July 6, Mayor James Sheets declared the day "Peter Dunn Day" in recognition of his extensive community service and Navy service during World War I.

At city functions, former Mayor Francis McCauley would often introduce Mr. Dunn as "the unofficial mayor of West Quincy."

The state deputy commander of World War I Barracks 458, he graduated from the first naval aviation course offered at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., around 1917. He specialized in hands-on service of military aircraft, including blimps and observation balloons.

He was involved in building and servicing many of the first fixed-wing airplanes capable of carrying weapons. He was discharged from the Navy in 1919.

He was a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post and the Town River Yacht Club, both in Quincy.

Born in West Quincy, he attended Quincy schools and lived in Quincy with his grandson, Peter Hunt, for many years before moving with him to Acton two years ago.

Husband of the late Winifred V. (McDermott) Dunn, he is also survived by a daughter, Patricia E. Hunt-Scopa of Weymouth; a granddaughter, Patti Ann Leahy of Quincy; and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

William A. Broll, 51

A funeral service for William A. Broll, 51, of Brockton, formerly of Quincy, was held Nov. 20 in St. Mary's Church.

Mr. Broll died Nov. 17 at Glover Memorial Hospital in Needham after a brief illness.

He was a former welder at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

A Navy veteran of the Vietnam War, he served aboard the USS Altair in the Mediterranean.

Born in Boston, he lived in Quincy most of his life and briefly in Needham before moving to Brockton 10 years ago.

He is survived by a brother, Francis Broll of Needham; a sister, Margaret MacDonald of Hudson; a niece and a nephew, and several cousins.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Funeral Home, 326 Copeland St.

Donations may be made to the charity of one's choice.

Robert J. Granahan, 78

Retired Quincy Fire Captain

A funeral Mass for Robert J. Granahan, 78, of Quincy, was celebrated Nov. 17 at Sacred Heart Church.

Mr. Granahan died Nov. 14 at the Ellis Nursing Home in Norwood after a long illness.

A retired Quincy fire captain, he worked the 36 years for the fire department before retiring in 1980. He was secretary for the International Firefighters Association Union Local 792 for 11 years.

He was an Army staff sergeant during World War II.

Born in Norwood, he lived in Quincy for 70 years. He was a member of the Quincy Citizens Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mary P. (Cole) Granahan; three daughters, Barbara J. Champnee of Hopkinton, Patricia L. Granahan-Johnson of Southboro and Joan Delaney of Norwood; two brothers, Frank Granahan of Florida and Bill Granahan of Connecticut; three sisters, Marjorie Granahan, Marion Minton and Jean Moynihan, all of Quincy; six grandchildren, and a great-grandson.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the building fund of Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02171.

George E. Little, 83

A memorial service for George E. Little, 83, of Quincy, was held Nov. 19 in Quincy Community United Methodist Church.

Mr. Little died Nov. 15 at a Braintree nursing home.

A member of the Quincy Masonic Lodge, he was a fireman 2nd class in the Merchant Marine during World War II.

Born in Glenholm, Nova Scotia, he lived in Quincy for most of his life.

Husband of the late Irene (Buhrig) Little, he is survived by a son, Steven G. Little of Illinois; two daughters, Joanna M. Little of Arizona and Georgeana M. Little of Quincy; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was private.

Funeral arrangements were by the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St.

Mildred Nelson, 84

A funeral service for Mildred (Johnson) Nelson, 84, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, was held Nov. 18 in the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

Mrs. Nelson died Nov. 14.

Born in Quincy, she lived there for 50 years before moving to Braintree.

Wife of the late Folke Nelson, she is survived by three daughters, Shirley Doogue of Braintree, Marjorie Dunbrack of Quincy and Nancy Burns of Virginia; a sister, Ebba Jacobson of Needham; five grandchildren, and a great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Charles F. Fawcett, 39

President Of Dependable Cleaners

CHARLES FAWCETT

A funeral service for Charles Frederick "Fred" Fawcett, 39, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, was held yesterday (Tuesday) in Wollaston Baptist Church.

Mr. Fawcett died Nov. 18 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after collapsing while playing hockey.

He was president of Dependable Cleaners, his family's firm, for the last eight years. The company runs 14 shops in Quincy, Boston, and throughout the South Shore.

He was director of the Hingham Youth Hockey League and director of the New England Fabricare Association. He also belonged to the Hingham Yacht Club.

Born in Quincy, he was a graduate of Hingham High School and Deerfield Academy. In 1977, he received a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Pennsylvania, Wharton School of Business, where he majored in marketing and management.

An enthusiastic hockey player, he played on the varsity at Penn State and after graduation, was drafted by the Long Beach Sharks of the Pacific Coast Hockey League. He played one season with them.

He later returned to the family business which was then being run by his father, the late Donald Fawcett, and his brother, Donald C. Fawcett Jr. of Weymouth.

He attended the International Fabricare General Course in Joliet, Ill. in 1979 and graduated from Harvard University's Owner, President, Management Program.

Among his favorite pastimes were woodworking, power boating. water and snow skiing, and traveling.

He is also survived by his wife, Patricia (Ryder) Fawcett; three children, Charles Frederick Fawcett Jr., Courtney Ann Fawcett, and Wesley Chase Fawcett, all of Hingham; a sister, Leslie Vickers of Hingham; and eight nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were by the McDonald Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Ada Johansen, 85

Clerk For 25 Years

A funeral service for Ada (MacLeod) Johansen, 85, of Quincy, was held Nov. 17 in the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St.

Mrs. Johansen died Nov. 15 at home.

She worked as a clerk for the R.H. Stearns Co. for 25 years before her retirement.

She was a member of the North Quincy Senior Citizens.

Born and educated in Milton, Nova Scotia, Canada, she lived in Boston before moving to Quincy 43 years ago.

Wife of the late Halfdan Johan Johansen, she is survived by two brothers, Sidney MacLeod of South Carolina and George MacLeod of Watertown; four sisters, Marion Benjaminsen of Holbrook and Edith Handy, Helen Campbell and Dorothy Leonard, all of Somerville, and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Donations may be made to The Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Our Facade Remains Circa 1800s.
Inside, We're All Set for 2000.

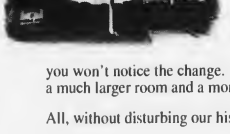
When the Blackmur residence was purchased by Dennis S. Sweeney in 1929, Quincy had a new place to pay its respects. At the time, residents liked the intimate parlors and separate visiting areas.

They still do. But today, some families prefer a larger, more modern visiting area. Other issues, like handicapped and elderly access, have become important, too.



That's why we're constructing a 1,645-square-foot addition to our Elm Street location. From the front of the building, you won't notice the change. But, inside it will mean a much larger room and a more accessible entrance.

All, without disturbing our historic roots.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It's that time of year that nearly everyone pauses to give thanks for all the goodness that has passed their way during the past year. Some give thanks for their neighbors, to their Lord, and thanks are usually given for so many things.

We at Deware are thankful, too, for many things. We're thankful for the love of both family and friends in our community and state in which we live.

We're thankful too for the opportunity to be part of your life each week, and for the trust you place in us for allowing us to be a part of your weekly reading.

We're especially thankful for the trust and confidence that you have shown to us at our home and toward our services.

We at Deware wish all of you a very happy Thanksgiving ...

INVITATION FOR BIDS

INVITATION FOR BIDS
CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS

The Department of Public Works for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will receive sealed bids for the DEMOLITION/CLEARANCE of the TEAL BUILDING until 10:00 AM local time on December 9, 1993 at the office of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169 at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud. A pre-bid site inspection will be held on December 3, 1993 at 10 AM local time, at the Teal Building, 135 Newbury Avenue, Quincy, MA.

The work under this contract consists of removal of the building's content, including hazardous waste materials, the dismantling/demolition of one (1) story steel building, including demolition of concrete slab foundation, grade beams, piling caps and grading with non-organic fill. The work is estimated to cost $35,000.

All work shall be performed in accordance with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, CMR 780 (State Building Code), CMR 748 (State Plumbing Code), CMR 527 (Electrical Code), as last revised* (*Quincy Zoning Ordinance, Chapter 24) as amended and Quincy Order Fire watches and Rodent Control). All work under this contract shall be completed within thirty (30) calendar days from a Notice to Proceed issued by the City.

The Contract Departments are available beginning November 24, 1993 during the business hours 8:30 AM to 4:30 PM at the Offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, Engineering Division, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169. Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall include a non-refundable $15.00, cash or check payable to the City of Quincy, to cover the costs of shipping and handling.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total bid price in the form described in the Instructions to Bidders.

The successful bidder must furnish a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Performance Bond and a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Payment Bond with a surety company acceptable to the City.

All prospective bidders must obtain pre-bid Qualification Certification from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Department of Capital Planning and Operations, Contract Regulations Division, 10 Park Plaza, Room 7552, Boston, MA 02116. In addition to CDPO certification, the prospective bidder must hold a City of Quincy Demolition License, prior to bid submittal.

Bidder's attention is called to the conditions of employment to be complied with and the minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract. The bidder may withdraw his/her bid within sixty (60) days after the actual date of the bid opening. This contract, to be awarded as a result of this Advertisement of Bids, is to be funded through the City of Quincy's Community Development Block Grant Program (CDBG), administered through the Department of Planning and Community Development.

The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with the Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised. Failure to comply with these requirements may render a proposal non-responsive.

THE CITY RESERVES THE RIGHT TO WAIVE ANY INFORMALITY OR TO REJECT ANY OR ALL BIDS WHEN SUCH AN ACTION IS DEEMED IN THE BEST INTEREST OF THE CITY. NON-RESPONSIVE AND/OR UNBALANCED BIDS MAY BE REJECTED.

Preventing Childhood Illness
Keeping South Shore children healthy is a goal of South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services. In Holbrook, parents can bring their children to one of our well child clinics, where our nurses and a physician provide physical examinations, tuberculosis screenings, immunizations and hepatitis-B vaccines. Here, Karen Touzos, RN, checks the temperature of Holbrook resident Joseph Acker.

PREVENTION

With health care reform the byword of the day, we couldn't agree more that preventing illness is as important as dealing with it head-on.

At South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services, that's how we've approached health care for years — since 1911, in fact, when we were known as the Braintree Friendly Aid Society.

For more than 80 years, our services have ranged from treating illness in people's homes to teaching patients and their families how to get better, live healthier and prevent further complications. When our staff members walk into patients' homes or out into the community, they are stepping into the role of educator as well as healer and helper.

Ours is a straightforward mission, one that has never wavered despite health care's many changes. We know all about change. Through the years, we've made sure the specialized services patients need are available in their homes through the development of specialized nursing care teams.

Our role in the community is also one of prevention and education. For example, for children we regularly provide physical examinations, tuberculosis screenings and immunizations at our well-child clinics. Our Morning Mile walking program at Hanover Mall helps seniors enjoy the healthy benefits of walking. Other community services include blood pressure and cholesterol screenings, community education seminars on violence in the schools, cardiac management and stress programs.

Teaching Proper Medication
Can I take this medication with that one? Is it all right if I eat immediately before I take this pill? Home health care patients often take a multiplicity of medications prescribed by different health care providers — and remembering the proper dosages and times to take them can be overwhelming. Nurses like Patricia Farrell, RN, take the time to educate patients about their medications, as in this instance with William Gear of Braintree. Our nurses make sure patients understand the safe, proper way to use their medications to maximum benefit, preventing patient worry and possible accidental misuse.

Teaching About Life
Enjoying friendly conversation and walking around the back yard is good medicine for Hospice patient Buddy Grund, seen here with Bennett Hill, RN. Hospice provides pain and symptom management to terminally ill patients, and seeks to make the last days at home with their families as comfortable as possible. Although Hospice can't prevent a family's eventual loss, it can teach the family how to make the remaining days together as meaningful as possible.

Through Home Health Education and Services

And our AIDS caregivers support group helps individuals cope with the obligations of caring for someone with AIDS.

Helping people faced with catastrophic illness is also the mission of Hospice of the South Shore, our comprehensive program of care for terminally ill patients and their families. Hospice helps patients and families cope with pain — physical and emotional — by supporting families as they help their loved ones live their lives as fully as possible, and also through bereavement support for children and adults. Bereavement support continues for up to one year following the loss.

We also founded Home & Health Resources to provide care not covered by insurance. Services, which range from nursing care to household management, prevent costly stays in nursing homes and other institutions while also helping family members cope with their responsibilities. A special program for new mothers accommodates today's hectic and demanding lifestyle.

This past year Main Street Pharmacy in South Weymouth became part of our family of services. Our pharmacists are happy to answer questions about medications, respiratory therapy services and other medical equipment.

Now with more than 600 employees, SSVN&HS is one of the largest home health agencies in Massachusetts. We will make more than 250,000 home visits in 1993, or 1,050 visits each day — never dispensing a pound of cure where an ounce of prevention will do.

Preventing the Flu
The flu season hit early and hard this year, but many area residents have been spared by attending one of our flu shot clinics. Violet Fries of Holbrook seemed relaxed when she received her shot from Arnold Goldberg, MD, at a recent clinic as Blanid Regan, RN, looked on.

Monitoring Infant Health
Vanessa Thompson and two-month-old son Vaughn know how SSVN&HS nurses make a difference to young families. Maternal health nurses, such as Marianne Moore, RN, regularly visit new mothers and their infants who are born prematurely or are ill to monitor babies' heart rates, breathing, temperatures and general health. Nurses are also an important resource for new mothers who have questions about their babies' health or need advice on parenting. By making these visits in the home, we help keep young families together and prevent infants from being hospitalized unnecessarily

Preventing Further Injury, Teaching Recovery
Elise Ahearn of Weymouth, 78, suffers from severe osteoarthritis of her left knee. Her condition made walking so difficult that she fell several times in her home. After Elise had an operation for her condition and came into the care of rehabilitation nurse Donna Cogswell, CRRN, things took a turn for the better. Donna assessed Elise's home and provided her with special equipment such as a new wheelchair, a walker and a lift to help her get in and out of bed easily and safely. Now Elise confidently moves about in her own home.

Educating Consumers
Answering customers' questions about their medications is just one service pharmacist Nate Sides, RPH, provides on a daily basis. Nate manages the Main Street Pharmacy at 780 Main Street, South Weymouth, an affiliate of SSVN&HS. The Main Street Pharmacy provides prescriptions and durable medical equipment, such as wheelchairs, to customers — and even delivers prescriptions to patients' homes.

November 25, 1993

Dear Neighbor,

It has been encouraging to hear the rhetoric on health care reform issues that emphasize home care and health promotion and prevention. Health prevention and promotion have been hallmarks of our home health services since 1911. Home care promotes independence and healthy lives — it always has.

In the 1920s it may have been castor oil and nutrition. Today it is rehabilitation exercise, nutrition and medication management. As much as anyone in the health care system, home health providers have had to teach their patients how to cope with illness and be independent so they, the patients, can function in their home environments.

Home care by its very nature has had to be holistic and take care of not only the patient's disease, but the patient's ability to live at home. It would be gratifying if health care reform moves beyond rhetoric and actually expands health prevention and home care.

South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services continues to grow to meet our communities' home health care needs. The demands of taking care of patients in their homes are increasing. We continue to struggle with an outdated payment system that rewards those who make the most visits rather than those who take care of the patient and help them to become independent, not dependent.

It has been a struggle to continue to fulfill the ever-increasing needs and demands of our patients while saddled with a restrictive payment system. In particular, Medicaid has caused us considerable financial difficulty. It seems ironic that we who care for the most Medicaid patients are the least financially rewarded of all Medicaid providers. We survive only because of the support of South Shore Health and Educational Foundation (an affiliate of South Shore Hospital), United Way of Massachusetts Bay, and, most of all, the many businesses and individuals in our community who support us.

We're reaching you through your local newspaper to honor the memory of the more than 800 individuals in whose names donations were made to our agency this past year.

Thank you for your continued support. We are here for you because you are there for us.

Sincerely,

Stephen D. Marini
Chairman, Board of Directors

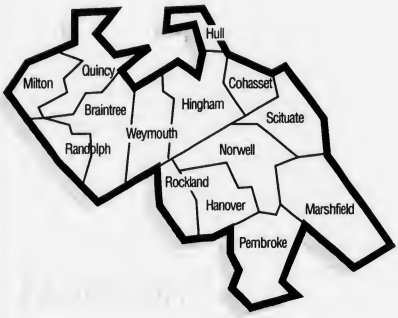
Communities We Serve

South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services cares for residents of the South Shore communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Pembroke, Quincy, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.



As a not-for-profit agency, SSVN&HS is governed by a community-based board of volunteer directors. They are our eyes and ears in the communities we serve, to assure that we are listening and responding to local health care needs. Under their guidance and direction, SSVN&HS is able to keep a steady course in an increasingly dynamic health care environment.

Thank You, Volunteers

Whether they provide companionship to patients in their homes, assist in special events and fundraisers, help at health screenings for children or offer support in our offices, volunteers help us care for a growing number of patients. In 1993, volunteers donated more than 11,000 hours to the agency. They come from a variety of backgrounds — retired professionals, high school students and even individuals who are employed but wish to give their time to others. We thank them for their commitment and dedication to the agency, and most important, to our patients.

A Winning Team
Our managers guide our staff in providing quality home health care services and assure we are providing the types of services which benefit our patients most. Clinical supervisors such as (l-r) Nancy Vincent, nursing supervisor, and Kay Kellen, director of nursing, meet on a weekly basis to discuss patient care and find better ways of meeting patients' needs.

We Need Your Support

Did you know that last year, South Shore Visiting Nurse & Health Services provided nearly $528,000 in uncompensated care?

Payment for services is covered by most private insurers, HMOs, Medicare and Medicaid. However, patients of limited means receive services through the generosity of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay and private donations.

You can help patients in need receive care by supporting our programs and services.
Your support can bring care to:

a baby born with a congenital defect.

a young mother facing a difficult pregnancy.

a middle-age man needing care after surgery.

an elderly couple struggling to remain at home together.

a family trying to honor its mother's wish to die at home.

Hospital Plan Seen Saving City Over $3 Million

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The refinancing of a $60 million Quincy Hospital bond issue will save the city approximately $3.5 million which will be funneled into the city's free cash account as well as the police, fire and school departments.

Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane explained to the City Council Public Health and Hospital Committee Monday night that the hospital's planned refinancing of its 1986 Federal Housing Authority (FHA) bond issue will allow the hospital to begin assuming responsibility for its annual pension liability that the city has funded since 1988. Under the current bonding, the hospital did not expect to meet the pension covenant provision until 1997.

The FHA set up the pension covenant at the time of the original bond issue, which was obtained by the city for the construction of new hospital facilities and the improvement of some already existing, in exchange for its guaranteeing the bonding.

Once the refinancing is approved, the hospital will be able to contribute $500,000 to the pensions in FY94, $1 million in FY95, and $1.5. million in FY96 before assuming responsibility for the full annual pension funding of $2 million in FY97. Total savings to the city will be approximately $3.5 million, Zane said.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that the $500,000 that the city saves in FY94 will have to be put toward the city's free cash account because the FY94 budget is already set. Sheets added, however, that funds saved in FY95 and beyond can be put directly into Quincy's budget to benefit city departments.

"It takes some pressure off the budget," Sheets said of the bond refinancing. "It will probably go right into the budget to offset regular governmental costs. Specifically it would go to the police, fire and school budgets because those are your three big budgets."

Zane said the hospital has chosen now to refinance because of substantially declining interest rates. She noted that while the interest rates of the hospital's

Seniority Cited As Deciding Factor

Cheney Council President On Ayers' Swing Vote

Councillor Michael Cheney will be the new City Council president.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said Tuesday he will give his vote--the deciding one--to Cheney mainly on Cheney's seniority in the council.

Cheney and Councillor Tim Cahill had been deadlocked 4-to-4 for the presidency. Ayers held the swing vote.

Lining up with Ayers for Cheney are Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio.

Pledged to Cahill were Councillor at-large Joseph LaRaia, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan.

Phelan is the current council president but under council rules cannot succeed himself.

MICHAEL CHENEY

This marks the second time that Ayers has held the swing vote in the city council presidency election. It was his vote that gave the presidency to Phelan two years ago.

"It was really a tough decision and an awkward situation to be in," said Ayers, who added that both Cheney and Cahill are qualified to be president and both have given consideration to the issues affecting the northern part of the city where Ayers is ward councillor.

Ayers said, however, that the fact that Cheney has served one more two-year term on the council than Cahill was the main reason for his decision.

"Mike is the senior man in tenure, and I feel he should be the president," he said.

Ayers also suggested that in the future, the council should consider seniority as the basis for selecting council presidents.

"I think it's something we should look into," he said.

Quincy, Ill. Mayor May Return

Postponed Christmas Parade Set For Sunday

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

It will be a week late and a perhaps a bit smaller but organizers promise a fun and entertaining family event when the 42nd annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade steps off Sunday, Dec. 5 at 12:30 p.m.

And, although last week's weather washed out an appearance by Quincy, Ill. Mayor Charles Scholz as a parade grand marshal, there was a strong possibility that he would return this Sunday to take part in the parade.

Mayor James Sheets and aides were busy Tuesday trying to make travel arrangements for Scholz to fly out Sunday for the parade. Scholz was in Orlando, Fla. Tuesday and he was supposed to call Sheets to inform him whether he could make Sunday's parade. The Quincy, Ill. mayor had not contacted Sheets' office before the Sun went to press.

However, there were indications that Scholz would be able to make it back Sunday. Sheets said he had learned from speaking with Scholz' office that he told Quincy, Ill. media that if he could find a way to return to Quincy, Mass., he would. Scholz' secretary also told Sheets' secretary, Helen Murphy, that he seems "pretty gun-ho to do it," provided he can clear up his Sunday schedule.

Murphy booked a tentative seat for Scholz on a round-trip flight from St. Louis to Boston Sunday. Scholz, who had a whirlwind time in Quincy last weekend, would have an even busier travel schedule if he came back to Quincy Sunday.

The scenario shapes up this way:

Scholz was due to leave Florida later this week and drive back to St. Louis for an engagement Saturday. If he were free Sunday, he would fly out of St. Louis Sunday morning and arrive in Boston at 11:25 a.m., approximately one hour before the start of the parade.

After marching in the two-hour parade, Scholz would be transported to Logan Airport where he would depart for St. Louis at 3:55 p.m.

Scholz and other officials were disappointed that bad weather forced the parade's postponement. However, when Scholz left Quincy for Florida Sunday afternoon, he said he would return to the City of Presidents if his schedule

College Governance Public Hearing Topic

The School Committee was scheduled to hold a public hearing last night (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The topic of the hearing was the proposed governance change at Quincy College.

All interested residents were invited to attend and speak at the hearing.

current bonds, including its mortgage insurance premium, are 8.65 percent, rates are likely to be at 6 percent or less at the time of the refinancing.

In addition to its annual interest savings, Zane said the hospital will also save an approximate $4.5 million in principal payments, and an additional $5.5 million in funds currently held by the FHA bond issue trustee.

The amount of the new bond issue will depend on whether the hospital can receive the backing of an insurance company to replace the FHA backing it will lose in the refinancing. Zane said she was hopeful to hear today (Thursday) from the insurance company FSA ("I think it stands for Financial Security Associates, but I always call it FSA") in New York on whether it would back the hospital.

Zane said she also expected to hear this week from local investment firms Standard & Poors and Moody's which will give the hospital an investment grade rating. Zane said with the backing of the insurance company, the hospital would automatically receive an AAA rating, but "without insurance there's no way we would receive an A." She added, however, that the hospital is hopeful it will receive a BBB rating even without insurance.

Ultimately, Zane said, the new 20-year bond issue would likely be between $63 and $65 million. The current outstanding debt from the 1986 bond issue is $58, she added.

"It's a weird situation," she said. "If we get insurance, the figure will be higher (around $65 million), but we'll be spending more money to save more money."

Zane also noted that even without insurance, the new bond issue would be backed solely by the revenues of the hospital and therefore the city would have no legal or financial obligations in the case of future default by the hospital, which suffered significant financial losses from 1989 to 1991 before turning its fiscal situation around in the last couple of years.

Members of the council's Public Health and Hospital Committee Monday night were generally enthusiastic about the proposed refinancing.

"It's obviously a winning situation for the hospital and the city," said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien. "You have my support."

City Council President Charles Phelan, who also expressed support, said "the bottom line is, it's like refinancing your house. The hospital used to be in turmoil, and in the last couple of years, it has begun to turn around. I don't want to go back to where we were six years ago."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, chairman of the Public Health and Hospital Committee, called it a "win-win situation."

Councillor Michael Cheney agreed that "it really is as simple as refinancing your own house" and made a motion that the committee take a vote on the issue.

Other councillors, however, said the committee should take more time to look at the refinancing plan before taking a vote.

"I think it's a bit premature to act on a motion," said Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who added that he does plan to support the refinancing in the future.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said he also intends to support the plan but added "if we vote on this tonight, I'm going to vote present. This is a hell of a lot more intensive than the simple refinancing of a house."

Other councillors, however, felt that since had met with Zane to discuss the issue before Monday night's meeting that a vote should be taken. Both Cahill and LaRaia said they had met with Zane before Monday night.

Councillors also pointed to the opinion of City Auditor Robert Foy, who said that he is "delighted" with the refinancing plan and agreed that it would benefit both the city and the hospital.

The Public Health and Hospital Committee voted 6-0 to approve the refinancing, with LaRaia, Cahill and Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio voting present. The City Council as a whole is expected to take a formal vote at its Dec. 20 meeting.

In addition to the refinancing issue, Zane also Monday night sought council approval of a home-rule petition which would allow the hospital to establish an investment committee to better organize the management of its cash assets. While currently all hospital cash is managed at the direction of the city treasurer, the investment committee would include the treasurer as well as the city auditor, hospital director, hospital chief financial officer, two hospital board of manager members and two community representatives with investment expertise.

Council members indicated that they would approve the home-rule petition once it comes to them in its final form, and Sheets said Tuesday he would sign in its final form. The petition, after receiving council approval and the mayor's signature, would then require state legislature approval and the signature of Governor William Weld in order to take effect.

Quincy Hospital, a non-for-profit entity, was founded in 1890 and run by the city for almost a century. The city, however, decided in 1981 that the hospital would be better served by a professional management company. Quorum Health Resources Inc. now manages the hospital with a five-member administrative team headed by Zane.

From 1989 to 1991, the hospital's financial woes forced the layoffs of 200 employees. Last year, the hospital showed a $1.5 million profit.

Barry Won't, Cedrone May Seek Court Suit In School Board Race

By MICHAEL WHALEN

School Committee candidate Christine Cedrone said Tuesday that while she disagrees with what has transpired since the November election, she is unsure what her next course of action will be.

Cedrone would likely have to take legal action to overturn the Quincy Board of Registrars' decision last Friday to abide by the city charter and allow a joint body of the new City Council and School Committee to decide who will fill the open School Committee seat that she and Sean Barry are competing for.

Cedrone defeated Barry in the Nov. 2 election by a margin of only eight votes, 5,716 to 5,708. A recent four-day hand recount asked for by both candidates, however, resulted in a tie of 5,734 votes apiece.

After the recount, Board of Registrars member John Papile suggested that the four-year term be split evenly by the two candidates. City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, however, said in a legal opinion that the city is under legal obligation to follow the city charter in the case of a tie vote, which he said constitutes a "failure to elect."

McGrath said his opinion was formed after both examining the city charter and Massachusetts General Laws and also seeking advice from the secretary of state's office.

Under the city charter, the Quincy Board of Registrars must in the event of a tie certify the election for the School Committee seat as being "no winner," according to McGrath. The charter also calls for a joint body of the newly-elected City Council and School Committee to choose someone for the seat after the city's Jan. 3 inauguration ceremonies.

If that does happen, all nine members of the City Council and five of the remaining six School Committee members will receive one vote apiece in choosing the person to fill the open seat. Mayor James Sheets, who serves as chairman of the School Committee, will not be allowed to vote. McGrath said because Sheets is on leave from a teaching position at Quincy College, he is not legally allowed to vote in this situation because the School Committee is considered to be his employer.

Cedrone said at press time that she does not think the Board of Registrars' decision was a fair one.

"Fourteen people making a decision, to me, is not a democracy," she said. Cedrone would not confirm that she is considering a filing a lawsuit against the city, but added that "I'm keeping all of my options open at this point."

Asked what other options she had besides filing a lawsuit, Cedrone said she had not time to discuss them in depth with her attorney.

Sheets has publicly stated that in his opinion, the city should hold a special election to determine who gets the four-year School Committee seat. Neither the mayor nor the Board of Registrars, however, has the authority to call a special election to break the tie.

The person chosen by the joint body could be Barry, Cedrone, or anyone else, McGrath said. That person would hold the four-year seat for two years, and the person elected to the seat in the city's 1995 election would also occupy the seat for two years. After that, it would again become a four-year term, McGrath said.

Cedrone's attorney, Thomas Mason, said before the board's decision last Friday to abide by the charter that the laws regarding a tie vote in such a race are "vague and unclear" and that a tie between two candidates should not be considered a failure to elect, but a "failure to choose." Mason said possible alternatives to abiding by the city charter would be holding a special citywide election, following Papile's suggestion that the term be split, or simply appointing Cedrone to fill the seat since she won the initial election.

He also hinted at the possibility of a lawsuit being filed.

"It may be impossible to avoid going to court on this issue," said Mason.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the Board of Registrars, noted that a judge could review the "60 or 70" contested ballots from the recount and either choose someone to fill the seat or rule that a special election is necessary.

Shea said he is unsure what would happen in the event of a 7-7 tie among the 14 members of the City Council and School Committee.

Atty. Dennis Harrington, who represents Barry, disputed Mason's suggestion of a "failure to choose," saying that if the final result was a tie, than neither candidate was elected which constitutes a failure to elect.

Following last Friday's Board of Registrars meeting, both Barry and Harrington said they were willing to abide by the city charter and allow a joint City Council-School Committee body to choose the person to fill the open seat. Barry said he would not initiate any legal action because he cannot afford a court battle and does not want to cause any further expense to the city.

Shea said the recent four-day recount cost the city approximately $6,000. He added that if a judge ruled that Quincy should hold a special election to break the recount tie, it would cost the city around $30,000.

After last Friday's board meeting, each side also brought forth accusations that the other was attempting to make the matter into a partisan battle between Democrats and Republicans. Cedrone is a Republican and Barry a Democrat. Shea noted that all of the members of the newly-elected City Council and School Committee are Democrats.

Mason suggested that Barry is trying to turn the situation into a partisan battle because he already feels he has enough support on the City Council and School Committee to defeat Cedrone. Barry denied that, saying he is "not sure" whether he has such support, and said that if anyone has attempted to instigate a partisan battle it was members of Cedrone's campaign and not his.

Among the supporters of Cedrone's campaign was her cousin Darren McAuliffe, executive director of the state Republican party. While some Democrats have charged that the Republican party is grooming Cedrone for higher office, she has denied those charges, saying she only sought her cousin's advice.

Cedrone and Barry were two of six candidates vying for three School Committee seats in the Nov. 2 election. Incumbent Ronald Mariano and tax accountant JoAnn Bragg placed first and second on the ballot with votes of 8,918 and 8,479 respectively.

Postponed Christmas Parade Set For Sunday

permitted.

The relationship between Scholz and Sheets grew stronger, as did the bond between their respective cities, during the "Quincy to Quincy" flood relief effort this summer. The two were selected to serve as parade grand marshals by the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.

Scholz drove 1200 miles with his wife, Becky, and their two sons, Charles, 13, and Jake, 11, to be present at last week's parade He wanted to personally show his thanks for the tons of food and thousands of dollars that were donated by Quincy, Mass. residents to help aid citizens in their sister city of Quincy, Ill.

Sheets and his office held out hope Tuesday that Scholz would return.

"We'd be delighted for him to return on Sunday to be grand marshal along with Mayor Sheets," said Tom Koch, Sheets' executive secretary. "At this time of year, it would be so meaningful for him to be a part of the parade."

Commenting on the parade's postponement, Scholz said "I hope I didn't bring this rainy weather with me."

Lawsuit Planned Over Lead Paint In Apartments

Lawyers for six families under the jurisdiction of the Quincy Housing Authority have threatened to file a class action lawsuit if the QHA does not move the families to lead-free apartments within 30 days.

Rainier and Rainer, a Boston law firm representing the tenants, formally notified the QHA Monday of its intention to sue over lead paint contamination in the Snug Harbor apartments.

The firm is seeking $1 million for pain and anguish suffered by residents, and thousands of dollars in back rent for the six families.

Lead paint was discovered on windowsills, doors and in closets at the Snug Harbor complex last May. The law firm notified the QHA last month of its intent to sue but was not satisfied with the QHA's response.

State law requires that the residents notify the QHA six months before filing a lawsuit. The lawyers, however, have said they will seek an emergency injunction in Superior Court if the families are not moved to lead-free homes within 30 days, saying that residents' safety--and children's in particular--is threatened by the presence of lead paint in the apartments.

QHA officials have said they were told by the previous administration that the city's public housing apartments were free of lead. They have begun preparations to delead all of the 639 family units in the city, which they say should have been done 20 years ago.

The QHA has hired an architect for the deleading job, but is still waiting for money from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. QHA Director John "Jake" Comer, who estimated the deleading pricetag at $900,000, has said that the QHA's hands are tied until it receives the state money.

Comer also said that while QHA records show that some housing units were deleaded 20 years ago, windowsills were left out.

City officials have said that the levels of lead found in the apartments were relatively low. Health officials have disagreed about what level of level causes health problems, although elevated levels of lead, while not officially considered poisoning, have been known to lead to health and behaviorial problems.

Hannon Gets New Top Massport Post

Former Mayor Walter Hannon has been named to a new high management post at the Massachusetts Port Authority.

Hannon, 62, was appointed director of maritime development for the port of Boston starting with a salary of $65,000. A five percent raise will take effect in January.

Hannon's appointment yesterday, approved by a 4-2 vote, raised charges that the Massport board, now dominated by Gov. William Weld appointees, has been naming Republican friends as political favors.

WALTER HANNON

Hannon was a Republican when he served as mayor from 1972 to 1975 and as a state representative from 1967 to 1972. However, he has been a registered Democrat since 1976.

Hannon, who lives on Forbes Hill Road in Wollaston, has been director of real estate and management at Marina Bay since 1979.

In addition to serving as mayor and state representative, Hannon at one time was also Quincy planning director for a year.

Kathryn St. John, a spokeswoman for Massport, said the new post to which Hannon was appointed was created to focus on bringing new international shipping to Boston.

First Night Buttons On Sale At Parade

Admission buttons for Quincy's second annual First Night celebration on New Year's Eve will go on sale Sunday during the 42nd annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade, announces First Night Chairman Michael Cheney.

Buttons will be sold at 12 locations along the parade route on Hancock St. from School St. to North Quincy High School. There will be tables manned by volunteers to handle button sales.

Buttons, which will admit people into the city's First Night celebration Dec. 31, will be sold in the areas of:

Finnian's Restaurant, Hancock Tobacco, Quincy Center Plaza, City Hall, Presidents Place, Central Middle School, all in Quincy Center; Veterans Memorial Stadium, Hibernia Savings Bank, Papa Gino's and Deware Funeral Home, all in Wollaston; and Balducci's Pizza Shop and Sacred Heart School in North Quincy.

Buttons at Sunday's parade will sell for $5, a 50 percent savings off the regular $10 price. Cheney said the parade will be the only time the buttons will sell for $5.

From Dec. 6 through Dec. 24, buttons will be available for $6 at local retail outlets. From Christmas Day to New Year's Eve, buttons will sell for $10.

Cheney said this year's celebration will feature 21 entertainment locations with more than 225 entertainers as well as ice sculptures and a fireworks display at midnight.

"We hope that as many families as possible will join in this fun-filled, non-alcoholic community celebration," he added.

WHAT EXACTLY IS AN INTERNIST?

Great attention is being paid these days to the need for every person to have a primary care physician. Often that care provider is called an internist, but what does that title mean? An internist is a board-certified specialist whose expertise is the diagnosis and treatment of disease and trauma. As a primary care physician an internist can help monitor all aspects of your health, recommending other specialists as needed. Using an annual physical, an internist can construct an overall picture of your health based on your lifestyle and medical history. With such a foundation of mutual trust and experience, you can be assured that the care you receive during a medical crisis will be the most appropriate possible.

P.S. People often put off choosing a doctor when they are healthy, but that's the best time for making such an important decision.

Your internist can function as the overall coordinator of your wellness plan. For more information on this, or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Bullets And Ballots

The historic tie vote for the third Quincy School Committee seat may have been a case of "Bullets and Ballots."

Sean Barry and Christine Cedrone wound up in a dead heat with 5,734 votes each.

BARRY

CEDRONE

The decision as to which one of them gets to sit in the seat is now dumped into the reluctant laps 14 members of the School Committee and City Council at a joint convention in January.

But it might not have been that way if someone who didn't bother to vote in the Nov. 2 election, did.

Or if someone who cast a "bullet"—a vote for just one of the six School Committee candidates instead of the allowed three—hadn't.

There was bulleting for both Barry and Cedrone.

But there was also bulleting for other candidates. If just one of those voters had also given a vote to Barry or Cedrone, he or she would have won by a single vote.

A single vote winner would have been better than a tie dilemma.

For one thing, it wouldn't have put the School Committee and the City Council on the spot in January.

The two Democrat dominated boards will be called on to decide between Barry, a Democrat and Cedrone, a Republican.

Trying to keep partisan politics out of the final choice may be difficult.

Cedrone's attorney who represented her at the recount and is now considering taking the matter to court for a judge to decide is Thomas Mason, a member of the Republican State Committee. Cedrone's cousin, Darren McAuliffe, the Republican state party's executive director, was among other Republicans appearing at the recount process.

What was a non-partisan election has now taken on a partisan look.

City Solicitor Steve McGrath cites the city charter that indicates a tie vote constitutes a "failure to elect."

McGRATH

And in that case, the charter, calls for the members of the School Committee and City Council to meet in joint convention "and elect a suitable person to fill the vacancy."

Apparently that "suitable person" could be someone other than Cedrone or Barry.

John Papile, a member of the Board of Registrars, proposed that Cedrone and Barry split the four year term, serving two years each. An interesting suggestion that would have made both Barry and Cedrone winners but it got shot down because of the charter provision.

Some—including Mayor James Sheets who is School Committee chairman by virtue of his office—feel the fairest way to settle it would be through a special election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea estimates a special election would cost $30,000. But some think it would be worth it "to let the people decide."

A special election is still a possibility if the matter goes to court. A judge might throw the final decision back to the voters.

There will be nine councillors and five School Committee members noting in a joint convention. That's a total of 14 votes.

It's unlikely, but what if there was another tie, this one 7-to-7? Would they need a marathon session, to break the deadlock? Or could a third party become a compromise choice?

This election should long be remembered for at least two things:

The historic tie. And proof positive that yes, every vote does count.

Quincy 2000 Needs A Single Standard

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Apparently, there will still be no Shaw's Supermarket at the site of Boston Gear works ("Supermarket Plans To Be Re-Submitted, Quincy Sun, Oct. 28). Officials from the supermarket chain saw the handwriting on the wall and requested the right to take the proposal off the table before the City Council had a chance to soundly defeat it. Shaw's says that it might be back with a new proposal but the overwhelming response from the immediate Wollaston-North Quincy neighborhood was quite loud in its opposition, now or in the future, to a supermarket at that site.

However, apparently, Mark Dickinson, president of Dickinson Development Co. still doesn't get it when he states, "We want to do a Shaw's Supermarket there..." Joining the Dickinson choir is Chuck D'Aprix who told The Patriot Ledger (Oct. 26), "This gives us the opportunity to bring the neighborhood into the process." D'Aprix, who is executive director of the public-private Quincy 2000 Partnership, sounded more like a cheerleader for Shaw's than the head of an agency created to encourage the economic revitalization of the City of Quincy. The people of Quincy have spoken and the City Council heard them loud and clear. Shaw's Supermarkets heard them loud and clear, too. Isn't it time for Quincy 2000 to listen to the voice of the people?

As someone during the 1980s over in Charlestown elected to the executive board of the Charlestown Economic Development Corporation, I stand committed to the future of Quincy. The economic revitalization of Quincy should be supported by all. However, it doesn't mean blindly supporting something that has little community support.

Recently, Quincy 2000 officials said they were skeptical about a proposal for a convention center being proposed by US Venture Group of Waltham for the site of the former Jordan Marsh Warehouse in Squantum. D'Aprix chastised the developers (Patriot Ledger, Oct. 26) for, among other things, failing to meet with residents. D'Aprix sees "a protracted fight in the neighborhood." Probably the very same kind of protracted fight he helped fuel over in the North Quincy-Wollaston area with his foursquare support for a project not desired. The Squantum neighborhood near the old Jordan Marsh Warehouse site needs to be wary when Chuck D'Aprix is supportive of them. Certainly, a different approach from the one he took with residents surrounding the Boston Gear site.

Quincy 2000 needs a single standard. Either we respect the opinions of neighborhood people across the city or we don't. The agency's credibility was injured by those pro-supermarket public remarks by its chairman. Apparently, he couldn't see the neighborhood opposition. These are apparently none so blind as those who will not see and there are some who will always allow the trees to block the view of the forest. Quincy 2000 made a mistake in supporting Shaw's against the neighborhood. But Quincy 2000 hasn't apologized for that miscue. As Kenny Rogers says, "You gotta know when to hold and when to fold."

[P.S. I do support Chuck D'Aprix and Quincy 2000 pushing for a first-rate hotel in Quincy Center at Presidents Place. What about searching for a second hotel developer for the Boston Gear site as well? Just an idea you might want to run by the North Quincy-Wollaston area. If they didn't object, a second hotel at the northern end of the city might assist in creating a viable tourist industry within the city's borders. Quincy 2000 should give this idea a looksee.]

Deciding The Future Of The Myles Standish School

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As the City of Quincy decides the future of the Myles Standish building over the next few months, let's look at all of the consequences of the proposal to lease the building on a long-term, low-cost basis to the Beechwood Community Life Center (BCLC).

When we started BCLC in 1981, the city had closed many schools, and educational programs were being cut due to Proposition 2 1/2. The primary goals of the BCLC were (1) to save a school building from disrepair until it was once again needed by the school department and (2) to offer educational programs to offset the cutbacks in the humanities that were taking place in our schools at that time.

Our first goal was recently accomplished, with the Beechwood Knoll School to reopen as a citywide kindergarten in the fall of 1994. As an architect of the original BCLC idea, I feel personally satisfied that this will be accomplished at a lower cost to the city than refurbishing an abandoned building.

Unlike other neighborhood centers in the city such as the Fore River Clubhouse and the Atlantic Community Center, BCLC is not a neighborhood center but a private, non-profit business. Unlike BCLC, the neighborhood centers offer low cost, city-run programs from the recreation department and elder services.

Look at BCLC's costs. Its executive director receives over $50,000 in pay and benefits, compared with less than $20,000 for the other centers. Despite its $1 annual rent to the school department, BCLC has the highest tuition of any day care center in the city, according to the State Office for Children. The cost of every program at BCLC is much higher than comparable programs at other sites. Aerobics is $30 per session at Fore River (3 days per week, run by the city's Recreation Department), while BCLC charges an exorbitant $70 for its twice a week session. If you are a senior citizen in BCLC's Elder Action program you had better bring a stack of dollar bills with you, as every activity, including walking and volleyball, now involves the paying of fees. Beechwood nickels and dimes our seniors and charges everyone else the highest rates around.

Quincy residents pay for BCLC whether they use the center or not. The City Council gave BCLC $15,000 last year, supposedly for its Elder Action program. That amount is more than the Elder Action's entire annual budget, which begs the question, where did all the money actually go?

In recent years, BCLC has not been a good neighbor to the City of Quincy.

When Superintendent Creedon requested gym time for Parker students at BCLC for four hours a week, he was told to pay $8,000 in fees. This is a building owned by the school department and rented to BCLC for $1 per year. I think a parent from the Parker School best summed up the sentiment toward the BCLC at the public meeting last month regarding the reopening of the Beechwood Knoll School. "You are holding the education of our children at ransom."

There are many great city programs and neighborhood centers in Quincy that deserved the Myles Standish funding much more than BCLC does. As I stated at October's public meeting, every program at BCLC could be saved and incorporated into the neighborhood centers around the city at a lower cost. Since we already have neighborhood centers close to the Myles Standish site at Squantum and Atlantic, it makes sense to spread services to other parts of the city.

If we contemplate giving BCLC any kind of deal on the Myles Standish property, at the very least they should be required to make a complete independent financial disclosure to the taxpayers of this city.

Former Mayor Ross Dies At Age 74

Dec. 2-8 1956 37 Years Ago

Former Mayor Charles A. Ross, one of the most powerful figures in Quincy politics when he served as city councillor from 1912 to 1926 and as mayor for nine years until he retired in 1949, died in City Hospital at the age of 74 following a brief illness.

A native of Scotland, he came to South Quincy when he was 9 months old and was a piano salesman when he became the youngest member of the City Council at the age of 30. His 37 year political career ended with the advent of Plan E government in 1949.

HN FIRE PROTECTION SOUGHT

A delegation of Houghs Neck residents appeared before the City Council to demand more adequate fire protection in the wake of a tragic fire that snuffed out the lives of a mother and two of her four children in their home at 254 Manet Ave.

"It is high time that Houghs Neck received a fair shake," said Herbert Morgan, spokesman for the group. "Nowhere else in the city of Quincy would a fire engine be allowed to stand so long unrepaired. Too long has Houghs Neck been neglected."

Morgan was referring to the ladder truck at the Houghs Neck station which was out of service at the time of the fire. Fire Chief Thomas F. Gorman said he is trying to obtain a second hand motor for the truck while steps were being taken to buy a replacement.

Meanwhile, Francis McMilles, who survived the fire that claimed the lives of his wife and two children, was released from City Hospital after being treated for burns. Two other children, Francis, 6, and Diane, 5 months, also survived.

Chester Weeden, president of the Quincy Trust Co., said a fund being raised for the McMillen family was nearing the $4,000 mark.

JOHN QUINN

John Quinn Celebrates 100th Birthday

John Quinn, a longtime Quincy resident, recently celebrated his 100th birthday at The Neighborhood Club and at the William B. Rice Eventide Home, where he now lives.

Born in New York City, Quinn moved to Quincy in 1922 where he lived most of his life on Glendale Road. He was president of the former Quincy Citizen's Gas Co., which later merged with Boston Gas. He retired as vice president of sales at age 68.

He served as president of the Quincy Rotary Club and was president and secretary of the Boston Rotary Club. He remains an honorary member of both organizations.

Quinn and his late wife Kitty raised four children: Robert Quinn of Braintree, Joan Jones of Brunswick, Me.; Paul Quinn of Omaha, Neb. and the late Rev. Richard Quinn who lived in Hanover. He has 10 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

Quinn, who attributed his longevity to an active lifestyle, continues to walk the Eventide Home grounds on a regular basis.

GAIL CROWLEY and RICHARD MINCHELLO

Gail Crowley Engaged To Richard Minchello

Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Crowley of Quincy announce the engagement of their daughter, Gail, to Richard C. Minchello. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Minchello of Medford.

Miss Crowley is a graduate of Fontbonne Academy and received a B.S. degree from Suffolk University. She is employed by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts in Boston.

Mr. Minchello is a graduate of Medford High School and Bunker Hill Community College. He is manager of Herman's Sporting Goods in Braintree.

A June 1994 wedding is being planned.

Squantum Women's Club Christmas Dinner Dec. 9

Squantum Women's Club will hold its Christmas Dinner Thursday, Dec. 9 at 12:30 p.m. at First Church of Squantum, Bellevue Rd.

The event will feature Italian cuisine catered by Grazioso's and entertainment by pianist Mary Murdock and vocalist Dori Klock.

For reservations call President Ann Clarke at 328-1126.

Mr., Mrs. Michael Halloran Parents Of Son

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Halloran of Canton are parents of a son, Patrick Joseph, born Oct. 21 at Norwood Hospital.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. George Salibe of Weymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Halloran of Quincy.

Mr., Mrs. William Stacy Parents Of Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Stacy Jr. of Quincy, are parents of a daughter, Patricia Teresa, born Oct. 1 at South Shore Hospital.

Grandparents are Bill and Ethel Stacy of Pembroke, and Bill and Lorraine Rooney of Quincy.

Colleen Cooper Named Miss South Shore

COLLEEN COOPER

Colleen Cooper of Quincy was recently named Miss South Shore at a Miss America preliminary pageant.

She will go on to compete for the state title in June. The winner of the state pageant will compete at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City.

Cooper, 20, graduated from Archbishop Williams High School in 1991 and is now a junior at Curry College where she is majoring in English. Her ambition is to teach young children with delayed English abilities. She is employed by Quincy Pediatric Association and is also a cheerleading coach for both Archbishop Williams and the West Quincy Elks of the Quincy Youth Football League.

Pageant contestants are judged in four areas: interview, talent, physical fitness in swimsuit, and evening gown. Cooper's talent demonstration was a lyrical jazz dance.

During the evening gown portion of competition, each contestant is asked a question based on her platform. Cooper told pageant judges her platform was on assisting terminally ill patients by initiating more support groups for them and their families. These groups would consist of all families dealing with a terminal disease.

The Miss Brockton-Miss South Shore Pageant is sponsored by the Miss Brockton Scholarship Pageant Foundation, a non-profit organization now in its 17th year. It is directed by Sue Riordan, founder of LaFemmina Modeling and Finishing Schools, and produced by Lisa Matta Paze.

The Miss America Pageant Organization is the single largest source of scholarship money for women in the entire world. More than $10 million in grants is available to young women at the local, state and national levels. Cooper received a $500 scholarship which goes directly to Curry College, along with some gift certificates for her personal use.

She is the daughter of John and Diane Cooper and the granddaughter of Anthony Primavera and Francis and Eunice Cooper, all of Quincy.

Holiday Food Drive For Quincy Community Action

Marina Bay Chiropractic of Quincy is sponsoring a holiday food drive to benefit South West Quincy Community Action.

Canned and dry goods, which are being collected at Marina Bay Chiropractic's 500 Victory Rd., North Quincy offices, will be donated to the group just before Christmas. Individual servings of food, including oatmeal, are appreciated.

Quincy Community Action provides food to more than 400 people a month. Fifty percent of their clients are under the age of 12. They also send food to homeless families who are living in hotels or motels; run a senior assistance program; fuel assistance program; GED program; and arrange for job trainings.

Marina Bay Chiropractic offers physical treatment and therapies which help people who are permanently disabled to work at their professions and also pursue their recreational outlets. For more information, call 471-8300.

Quincy Savings Bank Food Drive For Salvation Army Underway

Quincy Savings Bank's annual food drive to benefit the Salvation Army Food Pantry began Monday and will continue through Dec. 17.

Donations of non-perishable food items may be made at any Quincy Savings Bank Office.

"There is a tremendous need for food this year. We've already had many calls from people in need and we anticipate serving 350 - 400 families and individuals this year," said Sue Christensen, a social worker with the Salvation Army in Quincy.

"Quincy Savings Bank has been sponsoring this food drive for the past six years. Our staff and customers have always donated generously to the 'food bank'. This generosity helps make the holiday season easier for those in need," said Charles R. Simpson, Jr., president and chief executive officer of Quincy Savings Bank.

Quincy Savings Bank has 14 branch locations in Quincy, Braintree, Brockton, Hanover, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and West Plymouth.

Ayers Conducting Toy Drive

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers is conducting his second annual toy drive to help families who cannot afford to purchase toys for their children this year.

"I know many of us have good toys, games, and children's clothing in our basements, attics, and garages collecting dust. This Christmas season, as in the past, I ask all of you to take a few minutes of your time and sort through these items.

"They would make a terrific gift for a child who otherwise may have none," Ayers said.

To donate to the toy drive, items should be dropped off at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, the Squantum Community Center, or the Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. weekdays between noon and 3 p.m. Pickup can be arranged by calling Ayers at 472-9877.

Anyone in need of a toy or clothing should contact Ayers to make arrangements to receive a gift for their child or children.

Food Drive Benefits Three Local Hunger Relief Agencies

Three Quincy-based hunger relief agencies will benefit from the Food Drive for the Hungry, sponsored by the American Red Cross of Mass Bay and Project Bread.

The Quincy Crisis Center, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition and the Salvation Army Quincy Temple Corps are among 23 South Shore agencies which will share in the food drive which has delivered more than 10 million pounds of food since 1990.

The food drive is a free program which delivers food to the emergency feeding network, comprised of more than 300 food pantries and soup kitchens in Eastern Massachusetts. The program was formed by the American Red Cross and Project Bread to give agencies that feed the hungry access to greater food supply.

Alarm System Shopping Guide

When shopping for an alarm system, the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit suggests the following:

•Check out the company. It is a local company? If so, how long has it been in business in this area?

•Check with the local Better Business Bureau to see if there have been any problems with the company.

•Get a list of references of people that have had this alarm installed. Ask: Was the work done professionally? Has the alarm worked as advertised? Has the company responded to any problems in a timely fashion?

•All good alarm company's offer free security surveys and estimates. Check with several companies before picking the best one. DON'T GIVE IN TO HIGH PRESSURE SALES TACTICS.

•What is the background of the company's installation personnel?

•Does the company offer 24 hour services in case of false alarms?

•Is the system electrically or battery operated? If electrically operated, does it switch automatically to battery power without activating the alarm in the event of power failure?

•If the system is activated, will it automatically shut off after a reasonable alert period (10 to 15 minutes)?

•After the system is activated will it automatically reset after being set off?

•If it is a hardwire system, are the wires protected from attack and unnecessary wear by the elements?

•If it is a local system (audible in the immediate area), does it sound loud enough to attract the attention of your neighbors?

•Is the alarm monitored by a central station?

•Is the system Underwriters Laboratories (UL) approved?

Remember, a good alarm system is an investment in your security and personal well being. The mere presence of an alarm is often a deterrent. Advertise the fact that your home is equipped with a security alarm by using warning decals and small signs provided by the company that installed your system.

Homework Telephone Line At Broad Meadows School

Broad Meadows Middle School began operation this week of a new telephone homework assignment pad.

Each grade level now has its own answering machine line that is operational from approximately 3:30 p.m. until 7:30 a.m. the following morning.

"We are hopeful that this electronic assignment pad will increase communications between home and school, provide a means for absent students to access their home assignments, provide a reminder of homework assignments for forgetful students, and provide a method for parents to confirm the 'I didn't get any homework' message," said Broad Meadows Principal Gerald Butler.

The telephones numbers of the service are: Grade 6, 984-8724; Grade 7, 984-8907 and Grade 8, 984-8908.

McPhee: 'Anytime You Can Beat Quincy You Have To Be Happy'

For North, 'A Great Finish' To Season

By TOM SULLIVAN

What started out as a disappointing season for the North Quincy football team (1-4 after five games) turned into a happy one as the Raiders ended Quincy's five-game win streak and topped the Presidents, 14-7, at frigid Veterans Memorial Stadium.

It was North's third straight Thanksgiving Day win and its 27th victory against 29 losses and five ties in the 61-year-old series.

The victory, on probably the coldest day in the history of the long series, was the Raiders' fifth in a row and gave them a 6-4 record while the Presidents, who had won five in a row, fell to 7-3.

"This was a great finish to our season," said North coach Ken McPhee. "The kids came back strong after a slow start and anytime you beat Quincy you have to be happy. Both teams played strong defense and I would say we won the battle of the defenses. And again Shawn Nee came up big. We just kept giving him the ball and he gave us another great effort. We made some big plays on both sides of the ball but Quincy hung in there until the last dying breath."

Nee was the only ball carrier who wasn't affected by the hard turf as he carried 29 times for 183 yards and a touchdown. He finished up the season with 1,131 yards rushing, despite missing two games, and nine touchdowns.

In contrast, the Raiders' defense shackled Quincy's Sam Brown, who went into the game with 902 yards rushing but was held to 36 yards. Quincy was held to 70 yards rushing and Mike Bartlett passed for 92 yards, despite being under terrific pressure the entire game.

"Nee is just an amazing runner and it doesn't matter how the footing is," said McPhee. "He's awfully hard to stop and today he was apparently stopped several times, but broke away for extra yardage."

"There are a lot of disappointed Quincy kids right now," said Quinch coach Jack Raymer. "But I was proud of the way they came back. North owned the first half but we won the second and went right down to the wire. We gave them some anxious moments at the end, but give North credit, they came to play and their defense was outstanding. We made some mistakes which cost us and we handed them their first touchdown."

Defensively the entire North team was outstanding, but McPhee has special praise for Jeremy Gott, who had a key interception in the end zone, linebackers Dave Carney and Sean Halpin ("they were in on practically every tackle"), Dave Pacino, and big Brian Raftery.

"One boy who hasn't received the notice that others have received is Jason Picardi," said McPhee. "He has been a strong two-way player all season long and he made a great play today that I felt was one of the key plays of the game. With third and long on Quincy's last minute drive, Picardi was blocked out of the play but got up and sacked Bartlett, one of two straight sacks for him."

Others who sparkled for North were Peter Fitzpatrick, Justin Dilks, Nathan Gott, George Wirtz, Mac Ngutter, Keith Martinson, Glenn Peterson, Nathan Gott and Toby Odom.

"They stopped us offensively, but our defense played another fine game," Raymer said.

Among those who stood out on defense were Mike Feeley, Jason Bennett, John Green, Mike Lombardi, Paul Colleary, Ashley Davis, Bill Dunn, Kevin Carey, Tim Dowling, Steve Provost and Jon Gangi.

North received a big break in the opening quarter on a high snap from center as Mike Elder was back to punt which gave the Raiders the ball on Quincy's 21. Three plays later Nee broke away and scored from the 10. Kevin Ross, whose playing time was restricted to kicking due to a shoulder injury, kicked the extra point and North had a 7-0 lead.

In the second quarter Quincy's Tom Malvesti was fortunate to get off a punt but received a Quincy roll and the ball was downed on North's 10-yard line.

Here the Raiders staged a 90-yard scoring drive, started by a 45-yard Nee run to Quincy's 45. Nee did virtually all the ball carrying but it was quarterback Dan Duncan who scored from the 11. Ross again kicked the extra point.

"The great thing about Duncan's touchdown was that the play was called by an offensive guard (Pacino) on an audible," said McPhee.

Nee had a 25-yard run nullified by holding penalty and Ross kicked the Quincy's 30 late in the third quarter. Quincy was held and Elder kicked to North's 28. Quincy held and Ross got off a short punt to North's 38.

Brown picked up 11 yards and Bartlett threw a bomb meant for Jason Sova, but Jeremy Gott made a spectacular interception in the end zone.

Malvesti returned a punt 19 yards to North's 31 in the final quarter and made an outstanding catch of a Bartlett pass for 20 yards and a touchdown. Elder kicked the extra point.

With less than six minutes left in the game North tried to run out the clock and picked up three first downs. However, Dowling fell on a Nee fumble on the Quincy 10 and the Presidents had one last chance.

Terry Bowman made a dazzling catch of Bartlett's pass for a 30-yard gain and Bartlett, unable to get a pass off, scrambled for another 18 yards. He fumbled but Feeley recovered for the Presidents.

Here Picardi came through with his two great defensive plays on Bartlett and the Presidents gave up the ball on downs.

North had its big win.

QUINCY fans don't look happy as their team trails in the Thanksgiving game.

18,003 In 1947 Largest Game Crowd

Steve Moynihan, who played for North Quincy's football team in the 1947 game, reports that the crowd at that game was the largest in the 61-year Quincy-North Quincy series.

It had been thought for years that the 1946 crowd was the largest, but Moynihan points out that the paid crowd for the 1947 game was 18,003, while the paid crowd at the 1946 game was 16,065.

"I happened to play on the losing side in that game and we ended up at 8-1-1 after the loss," said Moynihan. "Quincy finished at 5-2-2. If we had won we would have won the state championship."

Hadfield, Tracy In Hall Of Fame

Two Quincy residents, Jim Hadfield and Ralph Tracy, were recently inducted into the Boston Park League Hall of Fame.

Hadfield played in the late 1940s and 50s and Tracy in the 1950s.

Hadfield was an outstanding pitcher with the Hamilton Club and Roslindale Royals, while Tracy was a fine catcher for the Kelly Club.

North Girls Breeze To Sectional Title

The North Quincy girls' volleyball team, seeking its third straight state championship, appears to have reached its peak in the state tournament and breezed to the East/Central sectional title without losing a game.

The North girls faced their biggest hurdle last night (Wednesday) at Brockton High when it faced South sectional champion Barnstable in the state semifinals.

The other sectional North champion Lawrence faced West/Central titleist Marlboro.

The state championship game will be played this Sunday night at 7 p.m. at Wheaton College in Norton.

North Quincy, which lost four matches this season, more than the last three seasons combined, had a lot to avenge in last night's match against Barnstable. Barnstable handed North two of its four losses during the regular season.

North Quincy defeated Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 3-0 (15-3, 15-5, 15-1) last Saturday to win the division crown.

Senior captain Maureen McCarthy led the way with eight kills and sophomores Sara Stanton and Linda Jellison combined for 16 kills.

"We're pretty enthusiastic right now and feeling good," said North coach Jim Rendle, whose team reached 20 wins for the third year in a row. "Our offense is starting to click and we've progressed since the tournament started."

In the sectional semifinal North breezed past Melrose, top-seeded team in the sectional, 3-0 (15-8, 15-6, 15-5).

Rendle received the usual strong play from McCarthy, six kills, four blocks; Jellison, 12 kills, and Stanton, four kills, two blocks. Also playing well were Wendy Sweetser, four kills; Ami Li and Kerry Ginty.

"Wendy Sweetser had her best offensive game tonight and that was a big lift," Rendle said. "I was pleased we got so many people into the match and I was pleased so many contributed, especially in the serving."

North Quincy opened tournament play by topping Boston Latin, 3-0 (15-11, 15-5, 15-4).

North looked sluggish in the first game before defeating a stubborn Latin squad.

McCarthy, who was a standout throughout the season, had another fine match. "She kept us alive," Rendle said. "Every time we slowed down, she jump started us with her steady influence."

After that hard-fought first game the North girls had little trouble winning the second and third games.

Among those playing strong games were Jen Teahan, Anh Ho, Sweetser, Stanton, Heather Simmons, Jellison, Karen Shea and Erica Crawford.

Cross-Country

Erin Duggan Wins Medal At State Meet

North Girls End Year On High Note

The North Quincy girls' cross country team finished its season on a high note with a fifth place finish at the Division I all-state championships at Mt Northfield Recreation area.

Erin Duggan ran her finest race to finish 14th for a medal. She now belongs to North's Wall of Fame, reserved for those who receive a medal at the all-state meet (top 15 finishers).

North scored 167 points, finishing behind Newton South with 55, Durfee with 123, Plymouth with 135 and Falmouth with 154.

Erin was ninth in team scoring, followed by Kelly Duggan, 34th; Mel Gaziano, 37th; Laura Blaikie, 41st; Erica Doherty, 46th; Katie McNamara, 49th; and Chrissy Herman, 108th.

This was an improvement over last year's sixth place and the best team performance since Geoff Hennessy took over as coach in 1988.

For Erin Duggan, this meet concluded a "rags to riches" story as she began as the sixth best freshman four years ago, not even qualifying to be listed as an alternate for the state meets.

"She is by far the most improved runner in the state," Hennessy said. "She paid the price for excellence with hard work and dedication. This is a kid with minimal speed but a big heart and lots of desire.

"I see college running in her future where she'll be a major player at the Division II or III level. She's a quiet leader who communicates well with her teammates and is a favorite with coaches and athletes around the league."

Duggan was selected for the Old Colony League's Sportsmanship Award by the league's coaches.

Other members of North's Wall of Fame are Sheila Barrett, 1981 and '82; Linda Kennedy, 1982; Maryann Kelleher, 1983, '84 and '85; Tricia Barrett, 1984 and '85; and Suzanne Lewis, 1991.

Central Boys, Girls Undefeated Champions

The Middle School cross country championship meet was held recently with Central winning both the boys' and girls' titles and finishing unbeaten seasons.

In the boys' varsity meet Mike Lencki of Broad Meadows was the individual winner, followed by Jared Downey and John Caliri of Central, who tied for second. Lencki finished in 7:21 and Downey and Caliri in 7:22.

In the girls' meet Kathleen Burke of Central came from behind to win in 8:21. JulieAnn Battaglia of BM was second at 8:30 and Jen Morton of Central third at 8:31. Burke was undefeated this season.

In the junior varsity boys meet Q. Pratt of Sterling was the winner in 8:15, followed by teammate Mike Hanlon at 8:19 and Matt Lebo of Central in 8:21.

In the girls' jayvee meet Colleen Nichol of BM was the winner in 9:03, followed by Pam Gray of Central at 9:04 and Elizabeth Carten of Central at 9:11.

Central's boys were followed in order by BM, Atlantic and Sterling, while the Central girls were followed by BM, Sterling and Atlantic.

Swimming

North Girls Second In Pilgrim Championships

The North Quincy girls swim team finished second in the Pilgrim Conference championships for the third year in a row despite a shoulder injury suffered by Marianne Blaikie, the team's leading sprint freestyler.

The girls' strongest event was the distance freestyle. Capt. Justine Fagerlund won the 500 free and took second in the 200 free. Sarah Radell finished third in the 200 and 500 free. Jamie Meade finished eighth in the 200 free and 10th in the 500 free.

Capt. Zoe Bohl won the one-meter diving and Alyssa Cobban finished eighth.

Michelle Hamilton took fifth in the 100 butterfly and 12th in the 50 free. Nancy Walker was seventh in the 200 free and 10th in the 100 backstroke. Julie McDonald took eighth in the 100 breaststroke and ninth in the 200 individual medley. Sophomore Christina Amata was 12th in the 200 individual medley, Katie Callahan fourth in the 100 butterfly, Amey Riley sixth in the 100 breaststroke and Cara Mulcahy 12th in the 100 butterfly.

North's Fagerlund Wins 200, 500 Freestyles

The North Quincy girls' swim team made an excellent showing in the South Sectional championships with Capt. Justine Fagerlund winning both the 200 and 500 freestyles.

Capt. Zoe Bohl placed eighth in diving and both girls will compete in the state championships.

A relay team of Sarah Radell, Nancy Walker, Fagerlund and Julie McDonald finished 12th in the 200 freestyle relay.

Also taking part in the meet were Christine Amate, Amey Riley and Katie Callahan.

Track Club Qualifies Two For National Junior Olmpics

The Quincy Track Club qualified two athletes for the National Junior Olympics to be held at Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I., Saturday, Dec. 14.

Nine-year-old Kelly Rose O'Brien and 14-year-old Kerry Ginty were part of 15 QTC athletes who took part in the New England Junior Olympics recently.

O'Brien's 9-10 Bantam team of Maureen O'Brien (no relation), Brenda O'Brien (Kelly's sister), Emily and Jeanine Poles and Erin Croke placed fifth with 114 points. Kelly Rose finished 19th. The top 20 finishers and the top three teams advance to the Nationals in each age group.

Ginty, a North Quincy freshman, took the final qualifying spot by placing 20th in Youth (13-14) girls.

Ginty has won numerous awards in freshman races with North Quincy's cross-country team and has seen tournament action as a member of the volleyball team. She excels in basketball and softball as well.

In the special Olympic 2000-meter race the QTC's Kirk Vaughan was the winner.

Other QTC members in the New Englands were Matt Gardiner, Ryan and John Lynch, Dante Poles, Nancy Gardiner, Ashley Crawford, Genevieve O'Brien, Erin Barry and Erin Djerf.

Mite B's Win, Lose, Tie

The Quincy Mite B hockey team, sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters, had a win, loss and a tie in recent GBHL action.

Quincy beat South Shore #4 at St. Sebastian's in Needham, 2-1, behind the stellar goaltending of Andrew Patten and the offensive effort of Ryan Tobin. Tobin had two goals, each scored on break-aways.

Bob Donovan played strong defensively and Pat Maloney was effective along the boards to stop the South Boston breakout.

Quincy and Charlestown played to a 5-5 tie with Matt Alleva scoring two goals and Robert Mooney, Joe Norris, and Dan Durocher one each. Tim McMahon had two assists, Brendan Craig, Pat Casper, Lindsey Langille, Alleva and Norris had one apiece. Andrew McDonough and Stephen Price played solid offense for Quincy, carrying the puck into the zone for the wings to finish the play.

In the loss to South Boston #3 Richard Stone, Robert Mooney and Chris Sheehan each scored one goal. Despite the loss, Patten was again solid in the net.

Quincy will face Wellesley and Needham before the end of the first half schedule. Quincy's record stands at 4-1-1.

Satkevich, Joyce B.C. High Soccer Sparkplugs

The Boston College High soccer team recently completed its most successful season since 1987, winning the Catholic Conference title with a 8-0-2 mark and finishing 12-2-4 overall.

Two Quincy players, senior Tom Satkevich and junior Andy Joyce, both products of the Quincy Youth Soccer League, were outstanding for the Eagles.

Satkevich, a strong offensive midfielder, had seven goals and 11 assists. The Eagles allowed only four goals in conference play with fullback Joyce doing a fine job.

B.C. High opened with an 8-0 win over Archbishop Williams, edged St. John's Prep, 1-0, on Satkevich's goal and tied New Bedford, 1-1, and Marshfield, 3-3.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

For centuries, letters were a principal means of communication between people. Many letters of the past have found their way into literature, and the early forms of the modern novel were written in the form of letters to and from the principals in the story.

During World War II, Kate Smith, one of our country's greatest singers, urged folks on the homefront to write military people to keep up their spirits during one of the worst wars in history. She made the famous statement: "If you don't write, you're wrong."

This statement still rings true today. Writing to people is a concrete way to touch them. There's something about a nice letter that continues to bless with the passing years. A person can read a letter over and over again; meaningful phrases can be re-read. Letters can be "tucked away" and be brought out when a person needs assurance; sometimes a feeling of togetherness; sometimes a feeling of love.

Wouldn't it be a good time to sit down and send a few thoughts to a friend or a relative?

Special Swimming Schedule At Lincoln-Hancock Pool

The Quincy Recreation Department will have a special swimming schedule this month at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said the pool will open Sundays, December 5, 12, and 18 from 1 to 3:50 p.m. for children age 6 - 18. Children may swim all or part of this period, while parents take advantage of the Sunday store openings and shop at local stores.

From 4 to 5 p.m., the normal adult swim will remain in effect. Regular pool memberships can be used or $1 for youth and $3 for adult guest fees can be paid at the door.

All swims will be supervised by the American Red Cross trained personnel from the Quincy Recreation Department. Adults may also swim in the extended hours and family groups are encouraged to participate.

" In the past years, this program has proven popular to parents and participants alike and I am pleased that we can offer it again," Welch said.

For more information, call the Recreation Department at 376-1394.

Prayer Through Apllication
TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, You who solve all problems, light all roads so I can attain my goals; You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life You are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank You for all things as You confirm once again that I never want to be seperated from You, even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with You in eternal glory. Thank You for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer for 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the favor requested will be granted. Even if it may appear difficult, this prayer must be published immediately without mentioning the favor. Only your initials should appear at the bottom.

32 Quincy Residents Entitled To Unclaimed IRS Refund Checks

Thirty-two Quincy residents are among 1,690 Massachusetts residents who are entitled to unclaimed refund checks from the Internal Revenue Service.

The undelivered refund checks range in size from $1.00 up to $27,293.

Taxpayers who did not receive a federal refund within the last three years should call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-TAX-1040, said Boston IRS District Director Gerard Esposito.

Near the end of the each year, the IRS tries to locate taxpayers whose refund checks were returned as undeliverable. Every year, thousands of checks are returned because the address on the tax return was not legible or the taxpayer moved and did not leave a forwarding address.

Quincy names as they appear on this year's list are:

William F. Anderson, decd; L. Paul Marine Exec.; Yung-Hung Cheng, Greg Riley, James W. Carpenter, Douglas G. Lehmann, George & Janice A. Sakulich, Virginia F. Santos, Anna M. Haddad, Maria Y. THE EFFECTS OF INFLATION

Among the most ignored elements of automobile maintenance is tire inflation. Gasoline mileage can decrease as much as .8 percent for every one pound per square inch (psi) of under-inflation. For this reason alone, it makes food sense to check tire pressure regularly as an inexpensive means of wringing the most mileage out of every gallon of gas. Because heat causes air within tires to expand (increase pressure), tire inflation should be checked when tires are cool. For every 10 degrees F. rise in temperature, tire pressure increases one psi. Ideally, pressure should be checked with a pocket-type tire gauge, which is likely to be more accurate than the gauge on a service station air hose. When adding air to tires, never exceed the maximum inflation pressure indicated on the side of the tire.

HINT: The lower the tire pressure, the higher the tire's operating temperature.

The safety of our customers is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. Their Protests In Vain

SOUTH SHORE CHAMBER of Commerce President and CEO Ron Zooleck voices opposition to Mayor James Sheets' proposed tax rates for residential and business properties at a hearing Monday. "The process pits the business community against homeowners. The very nature of it is wrong," Zooleck said.

BOB CURRY, owner of Curry Hardware, said the business and commercial tax rate proposed by Mayor James Sheets and approved by the City Council is "way out of whack" during a hearing Monday in the City Hall Council Chamber.

DAN JOYCE of 95 West Squantum St., Quincy, speaks out against tax classification plan proposed by Mayor James Sheets. Joyce said the plan, which was later approved by the City Council, is unfair to business.

New Tax Rates Approved By Council

Homes Up $1.11 Business $1.81

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council has approved Mayor James Sheets' FY94 tax classification rates which call for increases of $1.81 per $1,000 for business owners and $1.11 per $1,000 for residents.

The unanimous 9-0 vote was taken during the council's meeting Monday night.

Sheets' FY94 tax rates are $14.57 per $1,000 for residents and $30.58 per $1,000 for C.I.P.P. (commercial, industrial and personal property). The FY93 rates per $1,000 for residents and businesses were $13.46 and $28.77 respectively.

The rates keep the percentages of Quincy's $78.6 million tax levy approximately the same as last year: 60 percent for residential and 40 percent for C.I.P.P. However, the rates paid will be slightly more because of an increase in the tax levy, which was $75.8 million in FY93.

At a public hearing held earlier in the evening, eight people spoke against Sheets' proposed rates and five signed in opposition. No one was recorded in favor of the mayor's proposal.

Most of those at the hearing spoke on behalf of the business community, saying that businesses are asked to share too much of the tax burden.

"Quincy is not a bedroom community, it has been a business community from Day One," said Ron Zooleck of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. "Jobs will only be provided by the business community. Profit

Home Rule Petition Going To Legislature

City Seeks Special Election To Fill Deadlocked School Seat

The City Council has passed a home-rule petition asking for a special election to break the tie in the recent School Committee recount.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday morning that he would sign the petition, which was introduced by Councillor Timothy Cahill as a means of breaking the recount tie between Sean Barry and Christine Cedrone. The petition was expected to reach Sheets' desk by Tuesday afternoon.

If the petition is not passed by the state legislature before Jan. 5, the beginning of the new legislative session, the City Council would have to resubmit it.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said Tuesday he is in full support of the petition and "will try to put it on fast-track" so it can be passed before the end of the session.

Rep. Steve Tobin said that he, also, supports the petition and will do what he can to guide it through the legislative process.

While Morrissey said he is "cautiously optimistic" about the petition's chances at the State House, he noted that the legislature must schedule a public hearing on the issue before it can pass. He added that he is hopeful the legislation can be printed and filed and a hearing held in a week to 10 days, although he said many similar matters can take from 30 to 90 days.

Morrissey also said because the legislature is nearing the end of its session, "a lot of important legislation" is currently being worked on.

"But it's well worth the shot," he said.

Cahill said a special election is the fairest way to determine who will occupy the one remaining School Committee seat from the Nov. 2 election. Cedrone had edged Barry by eight votes (5,716 to 5,708) for the third and final seat in the election,

Council Favors Naming Childhood Center For Della Chiesa

The Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center?

The new center, which is being built at the site of the former Lincoln Elementary School in South Quincy, could possibly be named after the late Quincy mayor and state representative. The City Council Monday night passed a resolution in favor of the name.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, who introduced the resolution, said the city should remember its more recent historical figures in the same manner it honors its patriotic forefathers of 200 years ago.

"We have a contemporary history as well as a colonial history," said Fabrizio.

According to the Quincy city clerk's office, Della Chiesa was Ward 3 city councillor from 1945 to 1949 and councillor at-large from 1949 to 1955 before serving as mayor of the city from 1955 through 1965. He also served as state representative from the First Norfolk District from 1954 to 1958.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon has said he would like the Early Childhood Center to be named after Abigail Adams. Asked about the center Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets remained neutral.

"Both are worthy, and I would support either name," said Sheets. "I'm going to leave it up to the two of them (Fabrizio and Creedon) to name the center."

Sheets said because the center will be a school building, the matter will ultimately be decided by the School Committee.

After 3-Year Delay

10 Year-Old Cited As Hero By City Council

A 10-year-old boy who saved several neighbors from a fire three years ago has finally received recognition for his heroic deed.

Joseph Bartlett of Quincy Point was awarded a special commendation from the City Council Monday night for his brave actions on Aug. 29, 1990.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who presented the commendation, said Joseph was seven years old when leaking gasoline from a weed trimmer started a fire at 45-47 Grafton St. DeCristofaro said the boy was playing in the yard at the time when he spotted the fire and alerted the families living in the building of the danger.

"This is a little man who probably saved a lot of lives," said DeCristofaro. "He may be small, but he's a big hero."

The commendation also praises Joseph for "quick thinking and sheer courage" in his handling of the situation and expresses wishes for his continued happiness and success.

DeCristofaro expressed regret that it has taken this long for Joseph to be recognized.

"It's just one of those things that slipped through the cracks," he said.

Council Supports Sheets' Beechwood Center Proposal

A resolution in support of Mayor James Sheets' plan to relocate the Beechwood Community Life Center to the former Myles Standish Elementary School in Squantum was passed by the City Council Monday night.

The center is currently located at the former Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Squantum. Because of the School Committee's recent decision to reopen the Beechwood school as a kindergarten center next September, however, the community center is in need of a new home.

Sheets has proposed relocating the Beechwood Center to the Standish building. Although the site is currently rented by the Quincy Lodge of Elks, it will be vacant after the Elks move to their new headquarters in West Quincy early next year.

The council passed the resolution, which was introduced jointly by Council President Charles Phelan, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and Councillor Michael Cheney, by a unanimous 9-0 vote.

Hearing On Home Depot Garden Center Plan Dec. 20

The City Council will hold a public hearing regarding the Home Depot store in West Quincy Monday, Dec. 20 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said the hearing will focus on the company's proposal to expand its garden center at the site.

All interested residents are invited to attend.

Public Hearing Dec. 15 On Jordan Marsh Site

The Planning Board will hold a public hearing on the proposed rezoning of the former Jordan Marsh warehouse site in Squantum Wednesday, Dec. 15 at 7:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The City Council held a public hearing on the matter Monday night in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers has proposed rezoning the property from Business "B" to Planned Unit Development (PUD), which would make the City Council the special permit granting authority over the site. Under PUD, the council would have the final say on what business or businesses move to the site.

Under Business "B," most uses for the site other than multi-family units and heavy industrial uses need only approval from the Quincy Building Department, according to Planning Director Richard Meade. Multi-family and heavy industrial uses would also require approval from the zoning board of appeals, he added.

Ayers made the PUD proposal because of a recent plan by U.S. Venture Group in Waltham to build a 1 million square-foot convention center at the site. Although it was noted at the meeting that the group recently disbanded, Ayers said he would still like the site rezoned to give the residents of his ward the most protection possible as well as a voice as to what ends up at the site.

At Monday night's public hearing, two people spoke in favor the proposal and two against it. Six others signed in favor and no one else was recorded in opposition.

Priscilla Connolly and Susan Bykowski, both of 90 Quincy Shore Drive, said they would like residents of their apartment building and throughout the ward to have a say in what happens at the former warehouse site.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix and Atty. Robert Tegan, legal counsel for Jordan Marsh, said that while PUD was a good way of combatting the U.S. Venture Group proposal, there is no longer any need for the site to be rezoned. Both expressed fears that businesses may be discouraged from moving to the site if the PUD proposal is passed.

The council continued the public hearing so that it may be resumed at a later date.

If the Planning Board decides at its public hearing to send an affirmative recommendation to the City Council, six of the nine councillors would have to vote for the zoning change in order for it to be approved.

Council OKs FHA Bond Refinancing

Hospital To Establish Investment Committee To Manage Cash Assets

Quincy Hospital will be allowed to both refinance its 1986 Federal Housing Authority (FHA) bond issue and to establish an investment committee to manage its cash assets.

The City Council voted unanimously to support both requests at its Monday night meeting.

Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane told the council's Public Health and Hospital Committee last week that the hospital has chosen now to refinance because of substantially declining interest rates. The refinancing will allow the hospital to begin assuming responsibility this fiscal year for its annual pension liability that the city has funded since 1988.

Under the original bonding, which was obtained by the city to build new hospital facilities and improve some already in existence, the hospital did not expect to meet the pension covenant provision until 1997.

Zane told the council Monday night that since she met with the Public Health and Hospital Committee last week, the hospital has been guaranteed to be backed by the insurance company FSA ("Financial Security Associates, I think") in New York, something she was originally unsure of. The insurance will replace the FHA backing the hospital loses in the refinancing.

Zane said after the meeting that the backing of the insurance company guarantees investment grade ratings of AAA, the highest possible, from local investment companies Standard & Poors and Moody's. She added that while it was originally believed the hospital would save $3 to $4 million from the refinancing, the insurance increases that projection to an approximate $7 million savings over the next three years.

Zane said the new 20-year bond will be between $63 and $65 miliion. The current outstanding debt from the hospital is $58 million, she added.

In addition to the savings to the hospital, Zane has estimated the city will save $3.5 million as a result of the hospital taking over its pension responsibilities. Mayor James Sheets has said that the money the city saves in FY94 will go to the city's free cash fund and in subsequent years will benefit Quincy's police, city and fire departments.

The council also approved the hospital's request for a home-rule petition which would allow the hospital to establish an investment committee to better organize management of its cash assets. While all hospital cash it currently managed at the direction of the city treasurer, the committee would include the treasurer as well as the city auditor, hospital director, hospital chief financial officer, two members of the hospitals board of managers and two community representatives with investment expertise.

Sheets has said he will sign the petition when it reaches his desk. After that, it would need the approval of the state legislature and Gov. William Weld in order to take effect.

Invited By First Night Committee

Quincy, Ill. Mayor May Return For New Year's Eve

While the weather twice washed out an appearance by Quincy, Ill. Mayor Charles Scholz in the city's Christmas Parade, he may return again for Quincy's First Night celebration Dec. 31.

First Night Chairman Michael Cheney said he had casually invited Scholz to the New Year's Eve celebration when the mayor was in Quincy for the Christmas Parade Sunday, Nov. 28. The parade was later postponed and scheduled for Dec. 2 and Scholz planned to fly out from St. Louis last Sunday for the parade.

However, for the second straight week, heavy rain prevented the parade from happening. For the first time in the parade's 42-year-history, the event was cancelled.

Scholz, who was told the parade would not be held and did not fly out Sunday, had planned to serve as a parade grand marshal along with Mayor James Sheets. Scholz looked forward to the parade as a way to show his thanks to the many Quincy and South Shore residents who donated food and money to the "Quincy to Quincy" flood relief program this summer.

CHUCK SCHOLZ, left, mayor of Quincy, Ill., will be invited to attend the city's First Night celebration Dec. 31 by the First Night Committee which is chaired by Councillor Michael Cheney.

And while the weather did not cooperate with his return, the Quincy, Ill. mayor is considering coming back to Quincy, Mass. for First Night.

Cheney said he will formally invite Scholz to First Night this week. He and Sheets said Scholz is interested in starting a First Night celebration in Quincy, Ill.

"By returning to Quincy, that would give him an opportunity to view First Night first hand. It's not out of the realm of possibility," Sheets said.

The parade was intended to help kick-off this year's First Night celebration. Organizers had planned to sell admission buttons at half price--$5--along the parade route.

Because of the parade cancellation, Cheney said buttons are sale this week for $5 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the First Night office in old City Hall (James McIntyre Government Center).

Volunteers will also sell buttons for $5 Sunday, Dec. 12 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in front of City Hall.

The button allows admission into 21 entertainment locations. Events will begin at 4 p.m. Dec. 31 and continue until 12:01 Jan. 1.

Post Offices To Adjust Hours, Collections For Holidays

Local post offices will adjust retail window operations and collection schedules in December to help postal customers with their holiday mailing.

Most area post offices will be open later Saturdays, Dec. 11 and 18 and some will be also be open Sundays, Dec. 12 and 19. Mail will be collected and processed on the two Sundays before Christmas.

In addition, Boston's Fort Point Station (South Postal Annex) is open 24 hours daily.

Through Easy Stamp Services, customers can have stamps delivered within five business days. Customers may pick up a "Stamps by Mail" form at the post office or get one from their letter carrier. The form is postage paid and there is no additional charge for handling.

Credit card telephone orders for stamps may be placed by calling 1-800-STAMP-24 and using VISA, Discover or MasterCard. A $3 handling charge is added to orders up to $85 and handling for larger orders costs slightly more.

Studds To Host Student Financial Aid Forum

Cong. Gerry Studds will host a three-hour forum next month to help students and parents cope with the soaring costs of higher education.

THE HOME FRONTLINE OF HEMORRHOIDS

When hemorrhoids become swollen and irritated, a person's first line of defense is generally a carefully planned offense. After an exam to determine the nature and extent of the condition, a doctor may recommend a number of things that can be done at home to ease or even cure the hemorrhoid problem. On the list will likely be the addition of high-fiber foods to the diet and drinking six to eight glasses of water a day. Exercise, sitz baths, and improved bowel habits may also be encouraged. Sometimes, however, home treatment isn't enough. If hemorrhoids are persistently painful, your doctor may recommend one of several outpatient treatments, which usually take only minutes to complete in an office or surgical center.

P.S. Use laxatives and enemas only on your doctor's advice. They can actually make constipation and hemorrhoids worse.

Eating high fiber foods, like whole grains and fresh fruits and vegetables, is an important part of staying healthy through better nutrition. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-0255. The Political Elevator

Politics is like an elevator: it has its ups and downs.

CAHILL

It was Councillor Tim Cahill's turn to push the "up" button in the Nov. 2 city election as he easily topped the City Council at-large field for the third consecutive time.

It was a "down" button for Councillor Michael Cheney who finished a disappointing third behind former Mayor-Councillor Joseph LaRaia who most observers considered more likely to finish third.

CHENEY

Cahill and Cheney have mayoral aspirations and aren't pussyfooting around that fact.

Cahill's impressive win positioned him for a strong bid for mayor in 1995. Cheney's third place finish took some wind out of his political sails as far as setting a course for a mayoral run was concerned.

Last week, however, Cheney got to push the "up" button as he won the key vote for the needed five-vote bloc for the City Council presidency.

Cheney and Cahill had been deadlocked for the presidency with four votes each and both were wooing the man with the deciding vote, Ward 6's Bruce Ayers.

AYERS

Ayers, who had kept everyone guessing for a month—including Cahill and Cheney—finally made his choice: Cheney.

This is the second time in a row that Ayers held the ace in the political poker game for the council presidency. Two years ago his deciding vote went to Charles Phelan.

This was Cahill's turn to be disappointed.

"It would have been the frosting on the cake," he said, if he had won the council presidency.

But, he notes, it's the people—not the council—that elect the mayor and losing the council presidency, he feels, is not going to hurt his chances of being elected mayor.

Meanwhile, Cahill is pledging his support to Cheney as the council president. Indications are that he will move to make Cheney's election unanimous in January.

Cheney says he will work closely with all the councillors--including Cahill--to move the city ahead and will make every effort to kep council proceedings from getting bogged down.

"Times are beginning to get better and we have all got to work together to take advantage of opportunities for the betterment of the city," he says.

How important is the council presidency?

Quite important, most agree, especially if you go to sleep nights dreaming of the mayor's office.

He is the most visible of the councilors, appoints committees, presides over (and sometimes controls) council meetings, is more often sought out by the press for comments on issues and gets to be acting mayor in the absence or illness of the mayor.

It's the second most powerful municipal elective office.

Most observers consider the council presidency as a stepping stone or springboard to the mayor's office.

A number of council presidents have gone on to become mayor but not always directly. Some were elected two or several years after serving as president.

Among council presidents who made it to the mayor's office were Charles Ross, Thomas Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets.

But you don't have to be a council president to be mayor. Two recent mayors—Walter Hannon and Frank McCauley—were never council presidents.

Recent council presidents who did not become mayor include George Burke, Vincent Smyth, John Quinn, Leo Kelley and John Lydon. (Burke opted to run for district attorney, did and won.)

Whether the next mayor is named Cahill, Cheney—or someone else like Paul Harold or Daniel Raymondi—only time will tell.

But there is little doubt that Cheney had his thumb on the "up" button last week.

DeCRISTOFARO

COUNCILLOR Ted DeCristofaro has a new address—after 70 years. He and his wife, Betty, have moved from their home at 17 Murdock Ave. to 1000 Southern Artery. The move was an emotional one for Ted. He was born in that house and had lived there all his life until moving. "That house is filled with many, many fond memories," he says.

TARDO

DENIS TARDO says he's "very serious" about running next year for Secretary of State—the post being vacated by Michael Connolly.

Tardo, a Republican member of the Quincy Board of Registrars, will seek the GOP nomination, fully realizing he has his work cut out for him.

One big problem facing him is trying to convince the Republican State Convention to select him over bigger GOP names.

Tardo says the Republican party needs new faces and new blood at the statewide level—and he has both.

"We should have somebody new," he says, "not a retread or some incumbent in some other state office."

Tardo has run for the Quincy City Council and for state representative and is still looking for his first win.

Suggests Splitting Of School Committee Term

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We have just had a quiet but interesting election that has left one office unfilled. For the first time probably anywhere we had a tie after a recount. Many suggestions were tossed about, but nothing concrete. Actually nothing could happen until the election was certified. Since the election is now certified and the office declared vacant, there are many possibilities that can happen to fill the vacancy including a law suit.

Any solution should satisfy both candidates and those who voted for them, yet follow legal guidelines and hopefully stay away from politics and friendship.

According to our charter the choice will be made by a joint meeting of the CIty Council and School Committee. This says who makes the choice but does not necessarily say how the choice is made.

One suggestion would be to appoint both candidates to the position with each candidate splitting compensation and formally sitting on alternate meetings each month, chosen by a flip of a coin. Both candidates can enter into any discussion at any meeting but only vote on any item brought up initially while they were formally sitting. This method saves the cost of a new election, does not increase the present compensation and always provides for a seven member board at any meeting. This would be the fairest solution to both candidates and their voters and not cost the city any extra money, or result in a law suit.

There does not seem to be anything against this type of action and is presently used by the Zoning Board of Appeals. Both candidates have worked hard for this opportunity and both would be a credit to the school committee.

Hopefully this solution will be considered.

Granite Ball Should Be Relocated At City Hall

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy Point has many years of history in shipbuilding and with the planned United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard, with the entrance at the Fore River traffic rotary, I agree with the "Sunbeams" column Nov. 4 that the granite ball at the rotary be relocated to the area at City Hall. A ship anchor and a propeller bounded together would be a very simple display related to shipbuilding.

The granite ball belongs on the area at City Hall, where outstanding craftsmanship in different forms of Quincy can be seen. The front of City Hall, the four large granite columns at the First Parish Church and the entrance to South Shore Bank are all polished granite with four large columns. The granite ball should also be paid its historical due.

Mr. H. Hobart Holly, historian from the Quincy Historical Society, states in a letter to The Patriot Ledger (June 30, 1990) that the granite ball was presented to the city by the Granite Manufacturers Association in 1925. The granite block came from Swingles' Quarry, a contribution of the Swingles.

The polished granite ball would be a great attraction to local people and tourists and no danger for the kids to get hurt. I agree with the "Sunbeams" column that the time to relocate the ball is now while the work has begun on the "Walk of Names" at City Hall.

Granite Ball Is 'Just Beautiful'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Enjoy your articles in The Sun.

Especially the one of Nov. 4 about the Granite Ball. That ball is just beautiful and it has irritated me to no end that the "Welcome to Quincy" sign has so spoiled the effectiveness of the "ball" in that very attractive location. Personally I'd hate to see it moved, but will go along with your idea of a ship model there--only if it's raised enough so the sign does not distract from it.

Mentioning that "monstrosity of rock known as the Constitution Sculpture," I'm delighted to know it's being moved, and I have yet to know anyone who has liked it. I feel that's a shame too because Mr. Monti's work is truly beautiful and wish there were something in Quincy that showed his wonderful talent, that was understandable.

Parking Rules Suspended For Christmas Season

Dec. 9-15
1925
68 Years Ago

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce and city officials worked out a plan under which "nobody coming into any of the Quincy trading centers for legitimate shopping need fear that his car will be tagged or any inconvenience be imposed upon him."

"We want shoppers from Quincy and surrounding districts to understand that they can come here this Christmas season to do their shopping and leave their cars wherever they can find room without interference," said Chamber President Dennison.

"This city will cooperate with the shoppers because we expect also that the shoppers will cooperate with us and do all in their power to avoid dangerous crowding or long delays in the parking of cars."

The move came after businessman A.H. Remick assailed the city for lack of action in suspending parking restrictions, saying "Brocton has not only suspended its rules but has published the fact up and down the South Shore.

"I believe it is only reasonable for our city to take action that will put us on a par with our competitive cities in this matter."

EX-MAYOR BATES LOOSER

City Hall followers of Mayor Perley E. Barbour rejoiced in the fact that all bur one of the candidates for City Council supported by former Mayor Gustave B. Bates went down to defeat in the municipal election.

Only John P. Flavin in Ward 2 among the Bates-supported candidates won, ousting incumbent Frank D. Coffman. Re-elected were Thomas S. Burgin in Ward 1, Alexander Clark, Ward 3, William P. Hughes, Ward 4, Robert E. Comins Ward 5 and Welcome G. Young Ward 6.

6 QHS Students Win AP Scholar Awards

Six students at Quincy High School have been named AP Scholars by The College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievements on the college-level Advanced Placement (AP) Examination.

They are: Michael Kavanaugh, Sarah Nelson, Elizabeth Crispo, Erica Curtis, David Goodman, and Maureen Lind.

Only 11 percent of the 424,000 students who took AP Examinations in May performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

The College Board recognizes three levels of achievement: the AP Scholar with Distinction, the AP Scholar with Honor, and the AP Scholar.

Kavanaugh and Nelson qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP Examinations with an average exam grade of at least 3.25.

Crispo, Curtis, Goodman and Lind qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations with grades of 3 or higher.

AP Examinations are graded on a 5-point scale, 5 being the highest. There are 29 AP Examinations in 16 disciples, and most of the nation's colleges and universities award students credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher.

The College Board is a national, non-profit membership association of more than 2,800 schools and agencies in higher and secondary education committed to promoting educational opportunity and improving economic standards.

Holiday Fire Safety Tips

The Christmas Season is one of the most festive, joyous times of the entire year. Unfortunately, it is also the time of year when tragic fires occur. In order to ensure that your family enjoys a safe holiday this year, the Quincy Fire Department offers the following fire safety suggestions:

1. When selecting a Christmas tree try to choose a fresh tree, one without shedding needles. Christmas trees become extremely flammable when cut log in advance and brought indoors where heat can accelerate drying. To reduce this hazard, keep your tree indoors only as long as absolutely necessary. After cutting approximately one inch from the trunk, put the tree in a non-tip stand, away from exits and sources of heat, and keep it in water at all times. If you choose a man-made tree, make sure it has a fire retardant label, and read any warnings carefully--especially about the use of lights.

2. Before buying a set of lights for the tree, make sure they have a safety label from a testing laboratory. Checks all lights for worn insulation or loose connections. For outside lighting, be sure to use special insulated lights made for outdoor use. Inside your home, be careful not to overload circuits, and always unplug everything before you go to bed or leave the house.

3. When buying toys for children, don't buy any toy that can burn easily or that uses flammable liquids. Make certain that all electrical toys are labeled for fire safety.

4. If you should use real candles in your home, never place them on the tree or a window sill, make certain that lit candles are never left in a room that is unattended, and make sure that candles are out of reach of young children.

5. Remember that the Massachusetts Fire Safety Code considers cut Christmas trees, wreaths and branches to be flammable decorations. Their use is prohibited in the public areas of theaters, restaurants, schools, institutions, businesses, hotels and stores, as well as in the public areas of apartment buildings and condominiums.

If you should have questions on any of these holiday fire safety tips, call the Fire Prevention Bureau at 376-1015. All of us on the Quincy Fire Department wish each of you and your families a happy, joyous, and above all fire safe, holiday season.

QPIC Pancake Breakfast Fundraiser For Restoration Of Two Playgrounds Dec. 19

The Quincy Park Improvement Committee (QPIC) will hold its second holiday season pancake breakfast and launch a fundraising campaign to refurbish two more Quincy playgrounds.

The breakfast will be held Sunday, Dec. 19 at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School cafeteria from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Admission is $5 and children and their parents will have an opportunity to have their pictures taken with Santa for $2.

For tickets or further information, call Michelle Lydon at 471-5780 or Lynn Houghton at 479-2600.

QPIC's newest park and playground project will be the restoration of two playgrounds: Flaherty Field on Quarry St. and Grasso Playground on Columbia St.

QPIC Chairwoman Michelle Lydon said, "Our aim is to replicate the successful restoration of Collins-Rest-A-While at other parks and playgrounds throughout the city and with the able assistance expressed by Ward 4 City Councillor Tom Fabrizio, we are enthusiastic about moving forward to brighten up two popular playgrounds in West Quincy.

"There are a lot of committed people sprinkled throughout the city who care about the playgrounds and parks in their neighborhood who will be joining in our efforts this time around. Collins-Rest-A-While looks spectacular since its restoration last spring, record numbers of children have enjoyed it.

"We are hopeful that our efforts this time will bring the same results to these playgrounds," Lydon added.

QPIC is a community-based, non-profit organization with a growing membership whose commitment to Quincy's children, parks and playgrounds has inspired city-wide support.

QPIC has raised more than $40,000 since 1991 and last spring, the committee's fundraising efforts paved the way for the grand re-opening of a newly refurbished Collins-Rest-A-While, located on Southern Artery across from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy Schools, Businesses Partnerships To Promote Growth

Quincy Public Schools and local businesses are forming links to promote mutual growth and understanding.

Staff members of the State Street Bank and Trust, Boston Financial Data Services and North Quincy High School gathered recently to celebrate a school-business partnership program at North Quincy High School

Each of the speakers commended fellow partnership participants for their dedication and hard work.

Quincy School Superintendent Eugene Creedon called the city's business partnership concept "the best there is in site-based decision making."

North Quincy High School Principal Peter Chrisom spoke of the "important and personal" ties that would be shared by North's students, staff and parents because of the unique program.

Senior Vice President of State Street Bank George A. Russell spoke of a possible future program, the Stare Street Minority Scholar's Program.

Senior Vice President of Boston Financial Data Systems Paul O'Neil noted the benefits of this partnership. "It takes a community to raise a young adult," O'Neil said.

Mayor James Sheets emphasized the foundation for learning within partnerships. He reiterated his commitment to continue to invest in the educational future of Quincy students. His goals include making school buildings technologically accessible for students as they enter the 21st century.

An informal reception followed the ceremony.

Service Clubs Participate In Salvation Army Red Kettles

Members of three Quincy service clubs will volunteer at Salvation Army Red Kettles during the Christmas shopping season.

On Saturday, Quincy Lions Club members will be outside the Osco Drug store on Granite St., Quincy. Rotary Club members will be at the Super Stop &Shop on Southern Artery.

Members of the Quincy Kiwanis Club will be stationed outside both the Super Stop &Shop and Osco Drug Saturday, December 18. They will be joined by members of the Key Clubs at both Quincy High and North Quincy High Schools. Key Clubs are the High School Division of Kiwanis International.

Salvation Army Advisory Board members will be stationed at Jordan Marsh and Sears at the South Shore Plaza this Saturday

The Army encourages groups to volunteer time at the kettles. For more information, call Sue Christensen at the Army headquarters, 472-2345.

QHS Observes World AIDS Day

Students and faculty at Quincy High School observed World AIDS Day last week (Dec. 1).

In recognition of the event, Principal Lloyd Hill and Health Educator Georgina Valante held a student assembly.

A young woman who is HIV-infected spoke to the students who received literature in five languages (English, Spanish, Cambodian, Cantonese and Vietnamese) educating them on the disease.

Red ribbons were also distributed to demonstrate the students' support for AIDS victims throughout the world.

First Baptist Church

The congregation of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston observed the Lord's Supper and heard a bouquet of Christmas music, last Sunday.

Virginia Grimes led the Chancel Choir. Alto soloist Martha McMahon sang and Francis J. Grimes accompanied several of the choral selections with his viola and played a prelude and postlude.

Rev. Dr. Richard C. Malmquist, pastor, preached on the subject, "An Advent List."The congregation sang several hymns. Greeter was Laurie Craig. Ushers were Ed Hazel and Larry Pratt.

Sunday School begins at 9:15 a.m. Junior choir rehearsal is at 10:30 a.m. The morning worship service starts at 11 a.m.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Rev. Alicia Corea will preach a sermon entitled, "Jesus of Nazareth" at the 9 a.m. service Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Dr. Peter V. Corea will give the sermon "Steps to Peace" at 10:30 a.m.

Michael Whalen Named Assistant Editor At Sun

The promotion of Michael Whalen to assistant editor at The Quincy Sun is announced by Publisher Henry Bosworth.

Whalen has been a staff reporter at The Sun since September 1991 with a variety of assignments.

He has been covering City Council meetings the past year and will continue to do so in addition to his new duties as assistant to Editor Robert Bosworth.

"Mike has done a nice job for us since joining the staff a little over two years ago," said Robert Bosworth. "I am looking forward to working with him in his new role as assistant editor."

"Although Mike has been with us just two years, his association with The Sun goes back much further than that," Henry Bosworth recalled.

MICHAEL WHALEN

"Mike at age 11 and a sixth grader at Sacred Heart School School in 1978 won the city spelling championship in a spelling bee sponsored by The Sun and the Muscular Dystrophy Association. It was the largest spelling bee for the MDA in the country that year. To which I would just like to add, that good spelling is a big plus in the newspaper business."

Whalen, who is 26, graduated from Sacred Heart School, North Quincy in 1981 and North Quincy High School in 1985. He attended Northeastern University from 1985 to 1987 studying print journalism and graduated from Emerson College in 1990 where he studied broadcast journalism.

Whalen, a former intern at radio station WJDA, now works the Sunday morning news shift there.

He is married to the former Deirdre Sullivan and they now live in North Weymouth. He is the son of James and Rose Whalen of Wollaston.

NQHS Students Participate In Anti-Racism Workshop

Forty North Quincy High School students recently participated in an all-day Alliance Against Racism Workshop.

The session, under the direction of Sandra Pimental of the District Attorney's Office, allowed students to express their opinions on many topics including racism, awareness of other cultures, prejudice in today's society and personal experiences with stereotyping of ethnic groups.

The Alliance is enjoying its fifth year at NQHS under the direction of faculty members Maria D'Arcangelo and Carol Swanson. This year, the group will hold in-building projects and clinics for students in social studies classes, particularly those in freshman classes.

Holiday Craft Class At Beechwood

For more information or to register, call 471-5712.

Tobin Supports House Plan To Ease Nursing Home Choice

State Rep. Stephen Tobin has endorsed a plan recently passed by the Massachusetts House regarding nursing home choice.

The plan would establish a "clearinghouse" of information for those comparing the availability of continuing care options throughout the Commonwealth, according to Tobin.

"The decision to place a loved one in a nursing home is often traumatic enough without having to go through the arduous task of finding the right placement," said Tobin. "By developing this registry, all the information a family needs will be in one place, thereby saving them time and helping to put their minds at ease."

Currently, providers of continuing care are required to disclose financial and other information only to the person who is entering into a contract with the provider. No state agency has access to this information.

Tobin said his intention to create a "central registry" would allow the Executive Office of Elder Affairs to gather and make available to consumers all contracts from which they can make an educated choice.

"Information is the key to solving a loved one's needs," said Tobin. "This registry will provide that information thereby allowing a family to find the type of care they desire for their loved one. A pro-consumer, pro-family bill, I'm glad to have given this act my strong support."

Beechwood Plant Sale Dec. 16

Beechwood Community Life Center's Elder program will hold a plant sale Thursday, Dec. 16 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Center, 225 Fenno St., Wollaston.

Proceeds will benefit Beechwood's "Elder Action" program.

Plants on sale will include poinsettias and other holiday-type plants.

Dr. Nancy Sheehan Mass. Art Educator Of The Year

Dr. Nancy E. Sheehan was named the 1993-1994 Massachusetts Art Educator of the Year in ceremonies held during the recent New England Art Education Conference in Hyannis.

She is the art/music specialist for the Snug Harbor Community School in Germantown.

A 30-year veteran of art education, Dr. Sheehan has taught in Grafton, Hingham and Somerville as well as Ledyard, Ct.; Mariposa, Calif. and New Ipswich, N.H. In addition to her elementary classes in Quincy, she is on the faculty of Boston University, where she teaches special needs law and its application in the classroom.

Dr. Sheehan served on the board of the Massachusetts Art Association for many years, first as co-chairperson of membership, then corresponding secretary, vice president, president and past president. She also is active in Very Special Arts Massachusetts where she is a member of the board of directors.

Dr. NANCY SHEEHAN

Dr. Sheehan received her doctorate in education from Clark University in Worcester and her master's and bachelor's degrees from the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston.

She is a frequent speaker at various conferences on art education, special needs and early childhood and is also involved in community-based work for the school neighborhood.

Transitional Care Unit To Open At Quincy Hospital

Quincy Hospital recently received approval from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' Department of Health to develop a 28-bed hospital-based transitional care unit (TCU).

The unit is expected to open in early December on the hospital's fifth floor.

The TCU is designed to provide a bridge for patients who are no longer acutely ill, but need rehabilitative therapy and nursing care before they can return to their homes. Renovations of the former inpatient unit will create a home-like environment within which patients will participate in intensive rehabilitation programs designed to increase their independence in living skills, mobility and communication.

Hospital Director and CEO Ellen Zane said the initiative represents a significant project for Quincy Hospital in its continuing commitment to providing high quality patient care to all residents in the area.

The TCU will offer single and double occupancy patient rooms, a dining area, recreation/lounge area, a nursing station and a personal laundry facility.

Patients will be referred to the unit by their physicians, often following hospital admission for medical problems like stroke, head injury, hip replacement or neuromuscular diseases. Patients may also be admitted while they are taught self-care skills such as self-injection of medication (like insulin), prosthesis care, oxygen regulation or colostomy and ileostomy care.

A team of medical professionals will work closely with each patient to develop an individual rehabilitation plan. Team members will include the patient's personal physician, physical, occupational and speech therapists, rehab nurses, a dietician and a medical social worker. Family and friends will be encouraged to participate in treatment planning.

NQHS Drive Seeks To Aid Homeless

The North Quincy High School Chapter of The National Honor Society is requesting outside assistance in its program to feed the homeless.

Donations to the Quincy Crisis Center, including canned ands boxed food, may be brought to the NQHS main office where a box will be located to collect donations.

The school is located at 316 Hancock St. adjacent to the North Quincy T Station.

The program will run throughout December.

Historical Society Receives $1,000 Grant

Quincy Historical Society recently received a $1,000 "Volunteer Ventures" grant from the Metropolitan Life Foundation.

The funds, which were obtained through the efforts of Metropolitan Life Regional Representative Geraldine Sharkey, will be used to support the Society's education programs in which Sharkey volunteered for several years.

Metropolitan Life's "Volunteer Ventures" program recognizes Metropolitan Life employees who donate their time to organizations that work to improve the quality of life in the community.

McPhee: 'We Will Have A Fine Running Attack'

Future Is Bright For Red Raiders

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy football team's season started off dismally with four losses in its first five games, but the Raiders came along fast and at the end were playing as well as any team in the Old Colony League.

North won its last five games and ended Quincy's five-game win streak on Thanksgiving.

The future is bright and coach Ken McPhee can look forward to the 1994 season with a smile with many players returning.

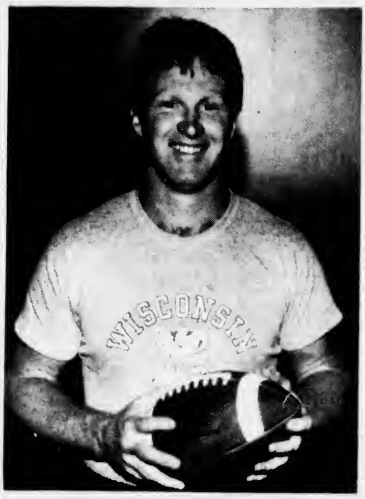
North's returnees will be led by Shawn Nee who, despite missing two games, rushed for 1131 yards and scored nine touchdowns.

He will be joined by Derick Epps, who ran well this fall, and freshman Brian Walsh, an outstanding prospect.

"Nee had a fantastic year," said McPhee. "It didn't matter how the footing was, he couldn't be stopped. He's just an outstanding runner. Epps also is a fine runner and Walsh is a great prospect. He had an excellent season with the freshman team and he will give us a fine running attack."

Sean Dolbeare appears ready to take over at quarterback and sophomore Jim Rendle is also a fine prospect.

Among the returnees who saw considerable varsity action this fall will be Mac Ngutter, Toby Odom, Martin Shields, Glenn Peterson, Keith Martinson, Jamie Karvelis, Tim Zaniboni, Dan Reynolds, Dave Carney and Gerry Fernandez.



KEN McPHEE

Also returning will be Sampson Lee, Eric Zimmerman, Keith Kabilian, Paul Greeley, Brad Currie, Johnny Lee, Ken Burke, Brendan Welch, Sean Mahoney, Matt Kielty, Omar Hernandez, Rob Ragusa, Bob Callow, Chris Geary, Fred Perry, Michael Coner, Chris Washburn, Rick McLaughlin, Joe Renzi, Ken Lippen, Greg DeBella, Matt Hourin, Neil Kiley, Eric Malames, Paul Picciano, Ricardo Maceira, Joe McCarthy, Mike Manganaro, Sean Kennerson and Desmond Lui.

"Things look bright for next year and we should hold our own in the strong Old Colony League," said McPhee. "We should have a fine running game and our defense again should be very strong."

North's junior varsity had an outstanding 9-1 season and the freshman, who topped Quincy in the finals, finished at 6-4.

Another freshman, in addition to Walsh, who could help the varsity next year is Sean O'Toole, who had a fine game against Quincy.

Raymer: 'We Should Be Competitive Again'

Quincy Looks Ahead With Optimism

The Quincy football team enjoyed a most satisfying season after being picked in a pre-season poll to finish last in the Old Colony League.

The Presidents finished with a 7-3 record and actually had an outside chance to make the Div. 1B Super Bowl until defeated by North Quincy on Thanksgiving.

Coach Jack Raymer can look forward to 1994 with optimism, as he started several sophomores and has some outstanding players returning.

Leading the returnees will be Sam Brown, a junior who rushed for 940 yards and scored seven touchdowns.

"Sam should have a terrific season next year," said Raymer. "And he will be joined by sophomore Terry Bowman, one of our fastest players who missed several games this year with an injury."

One of Raymer's big jobs will be to fill the quarterback slot handled so capably by Mike Bartlett this fall.

Jeff Russell, who had a fine year with the junior varsity, appears to have the inside track and freshman Mark Glynn also will have a chance to make the grade.

Sophomores Mike Sheffer, Bowman, Bill Dunn and Peter Kolson all played regularly and will be key performers next year.

JACK RAYMER

Also coming back will be Ed Anderson, Martin Cloonan, Skip Lumpkin, Greg Santoro, Jay Fennelly, Jason Bennett, Matt Goguen, Matt Strauchon, Brian O'Connor, Greg DiBona, Mike Feeley, John Moss, Ming Tung, Jeff Burrell, Butch Palazza, Jake Drohan, Matt Miller, Wilkens Jeanty, Mike Flagg and Rob Rose.

Feeley, Burrell and Palazza were starters and were among our strongest defensive players," Raymer said. "They will be among the best around next year."

A number of this year's freshmen will have a fine chance to make the varsity next year, including Glynn, Kevin Connolly, Andrew Byrne, Will Fitzpatrick, Tim Santos, Scott Pyer, Joe Mariano, Paul Dailey, and several others.

"All in all, I think things look good for next year and we should be competitive again," Raymer said.

--TOM SULLIVAN

For Walker: A Year To Remember

Chris Walker, former Quincy High all-scholastic and Old Colony League all-star, will remember the finish of his sophomore year at Boston University.

Walker, a wide receiver, scored both BU touchdowns in last week's 21 - 14 loss to Idaho in the quarterfinals of the Division 1-AA playoffs.

With the Terriers trailing, 21 - 0, Walker scored on a four-yard pass from third string quarterback Chris Pincince.

After BU recovered an onside kick, Walker caught a 13-yard pass from Pincince for the second TD.

However, the memory won't be entirely pleasant due to BU's loss.

"It was frustrating, It seems like our season was just taken from us," said Walker, who started as a freshman but this year played behind Jason Andrade, the team's leading receiver.

Ice Skating Lessons

Bay State Ice Skating School will conduct a seven-week series of ice skating lessons this fall at the the MDC Shea Rink in West Quincy.

Lessons are for children age five and up and adults. Cost is $65 per child and $75 per adult.

Panther Cheerleaders Take First Place Honors

The Quincy Point Panther cheerleaders recently won the Quincy Youth Football cheerleading championship.

The cheerleading squads from all four QYFL teams took part in a competition that reflected not only their enthusiasm but their great athletic ability as well. In fact many would argue that the real athletes finished performing before the football teams stepped on the field.

The competition was overseen by three expert NCAA judges. The cheerleading routines were judged in 12 different categories. Among these were: overall execution, projection, fundamentals, overall appeal and perfection of routine. Each judge awarded a maximum of five, ten or fifteen points for each category. The combined totals determined the winner.

The Quincy Point Panthers' routine was the most impressive as they took the first place trophy. The West Quincy Elks, North Quincy Apaches and Houghs Neck Manets finished as first, second and third runner-ups, respectively. Trophies were given out at halftime of the championship game.

No longer just the 'pep-squads' of years past, cheerleading has grown into a full fledged athletic competition from the youth level on up to college and pro levels.

"The girls work hard all year in order to look sharp while performing their difficult routines," said QYFL president Joe Sheffer, who helped put together the competition.

Recreation Department Sponsoring Celtics Trip

The Quincy Recreation Department will sponsor as trip to the Boston Celtics game versus the L.A. Clippers at the Boston Garden Friday, Jan. 14.

The trip includes game ticket and optional bus transportation to and from the Garden. Cost for ticket and transportation is $18.

The trip is open to Quincy residents only.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said the trip makes an ideal Christmas gift. "We are encouraging family groups to attend," he said.

Tickets will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis beginning Wednesday, Dec. 15 at 9 a.m. at 100 Southern Artery, the main office of the Recreation Department. Seats are limited and there is a four ticket limit per family, two ticket limit per individual purchase.

All children under age 12 must be accompanied by an adult. Seats are located in the first balcony and stadium areas of Boston Garden.

Buses will leave and return from the Recreation Office on schedule that will be available when purchasing tickets. Recreation staff members will chaperone the trip.

For more information, call 376-1394.

Ski Registration Begins Dec. 13 At Quincy Recreation Dept.

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces that the Quincy Recreation Department will conduct registration beginning Monday, Dec. 13 for a five-week program of ski instruction at the Blue Hills Ski Area.

The program is open to Quincy youngsters age 8 through high school and features a one-hour, 45-minute lesson from beginner to advanced levels including free use of the ski tows. Supervised transportation from Quincy and return will also be included. The instruction will be provided by certified instructors of the Blue Hills Ski School.

The program will be conducted on five consecutive Tuesdays beginning Jan. 4. Cost is $75 and is payable at the time of registration. Equipment rental can be arranged for an additional cost.

Registration will take place at the Quincy Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. as long as openings exist. For more information call 376-1394.

Pee Wee A's Win 6th Straight

Quincy's Pee Wee A hockey team, sponsored by the Quincy Elks, rolled over Westwood, 11-2, for its sixth straight Greater Boston League victory.

Chad Fitzpatrick and Billy Connolly had hat tricks, Bobby Harvey two goals and Jesse Winter, Michael Sullivan and Shawn Manning one apiece. Sullivan had five assists, Harvey and Connolly two each and Manning, Fitzpatrick, Michael Powers and Betsy Stone one apiece.

Defensively Pat Kenney, Steven Ford and Billy Griffin stood out. Chris Carthas and Ryan Kruger sparkled in goal and John Katsarikas, Sean Garvey and Paul Markarian played well.

2 Quincy Cheerleaders Seeking Donations For Aloha Bowl Trip

Kara Bagen and Kathie Ford, both of Quincy, were recently named to the National Cheerleaders' Association's All-American Team for 1993.

They will perform on Christmas Day at the Jeep Eagle Aloha Bowl along with girls from all over the country. The pair will also have the opportunity to cheer during a portion of the game at this nationally-televised event.

The girls are raising the money for the trip by holding various fundraisers, such as cheer clinics at local schools. They are also seeking donations from local businesses and organizations. Recently, donations have been received from St. Joseph's Church, the Ward 2 Civic Association, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and the Sons of Italy Lodge in Braintree.

Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, where Bagen is a senior and Ford is a junior, has agreed to accept donations for the girls. Anyone wishing to donate to the "Aloha Bowl Fund" can send their check, made payable to either Bagen or Ford, to Archbishop Williams High School, 80 Independence Ave., Braintree, MA 02184.

If ever there were a time when backyard mechanics were able to competently tinker with their automobiles, it is now over. The introduction of computers and sophisticated electronics from bumper to bumper on virtually all modern-day cars has rendered amateur mechanics obsolete. In their place stand the auto technicians who are schooled in the electronics that are a part of such major systems of the car as the suspension, transmission, fuel, engine, emission control, and braking systems. In order to properly maintain, diagnose, and repair components in these systems, it is necessary to be as much an electronic technician as a mechanic. For this reason alone, car owners should service their automobiles with professionals who are well versed in these areas.

HINT Today's auto technician must be able to make use of on-board computer self-diagnostics in order to assess the health of many auto systems.

Our team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO has earned a wonderful reputation from our many satisfied customers...your friends and relatives. We are your local full service auto repair shop that takes pride in the services we offer you. Stop In and visit us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. SCOTT DEWARE

ARE YOU A CHEERFUL GIVER?

Many people find it easy to give by sharing their time, energy, and substance Others may be unaware of the joys and opportunities of volunteering and performing "good works." Sadly others may feel that they have little to give.

For a moment, let us picture ourselves as cheerful givers, giving the greatest gift we have to give: ourselves. Perhaps someone we know would be grateful for help in their home or yard. Perhaps someone would be appreciative of having an errand run for them. Perhaps we might watch our neighbor's child while they run an errand.

We may share special knowledge, talents, or skills that help entertain, enlighten, or enrich others. We may choose to offer our time, donations, or prayers on behalf of some worthy cause. We can always give a warm hug, lend a listening ear and be a considerate, kind friend.

Wouldn't today be a good day to be a cheerful giver?

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

RESIDENTS ATTENDED a public hearing on Mayor James Sheets' proposed tax rates for residential and business properties in the City Hall Council Chamber Monday. Thirteen people, mainly business owners, expressed opposition to the proposal, saying it unfairly taxed commercial property. No one spoke or signed in favor of the plan which was later approved unanimously by the City Council.

Tax Rates For Homes Up $1.11, Business $1.81

is not a four-letter word."

Bob Curry, owner of Curry Hardware and a resident of 40 Malden St. in West Quincy, said the tax rates in Quincy are discouraging new businesses from coming to the city and forcing established ones to leave.

"The business community is taxed very unfairly," said Curry. "The appraised value of commercial property is way out of whack. Commercial property doesn't sell for what it's worth, but the residential (property) is pretty much in tune for what it's being taxed at."

Curry also said that despite the work done in the city by residents, it is the business owners who make the real contributions, most notably financial ones, in Quincy. He suggested a gradual shift of the tax burden that would place more of the responsibility on residents' shoulders, adding that all of the good work done in the city "will not last unless we have a business tax base."

Not everyone, however, agreed. Matteo Panarelli of 21 Taylor St. said that if everyone has borne too much of the tax burden in recent years, it is the city's homeowners.

"There has to be an end to this constant raise of taxes," said Panarelli, who added that most small businesses are destined to either fail or succeed regardless of how the tax rates are set.

According to Assessors Chairman Marion Fantucchio, a decrease in property taxes has necessitated the tax hike. Quincy's total property valuation has dropped from $4,450,597,477 in FY93 to $4,341,548,654 in FY94, making this the fourth consecutive year the valuation has decreased.

Fantucchio noted that Sheets could have recommended the maximum of 175 percent of the tax burden allowed under state law for the FY94 rates. Instead, for the third consecutive year, Sheets recommended the C.I.P.P. share to be 169 percent, making the residential factor 80.5317 percent.

Based on the average valuation for a single family home of $138,350, which is up $50 from last year, a homeowner will now pay $2,016, or $154 more than FY93.

After the hearing, all nine City Council members, including Councillor Timothy Cahill, agreed that residents cannot be expected to bear any more of a burden than that.

"In past years, the increase has never been close to that," said Cahill, who noted he has in the past expressed support of lessening the tax burden on businesses. "I couldn't put more than $154 on residents."

Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, added that while assessments on residential property have remained stable, taxes have gone up, placing a heavy burden on homeowners. Conversely, Cahill said, since assessments have gone down on C.I.P.P., business owners will pay about the same or in some cases a little less than FY93.

Still, Cahill said he only supported the FY94 tax rates reluctantly.

"This is a very distasteful process," he said.

Councillor Michael Cheney said the council has always tried to be fair with residents and business owners alike.

"We have nothing to hang our heads about," he said.

Council President Charles Phelan agreed.

"If we make a shift (in the tax rate), even by a point or two, we'd really be socking it to the single family homeowner who in my opinion is paying by far the vast majority of the burden," said Phelan.

City Seeks Special Election To Fill Deadlocked School Seat

but a subsequent four-day recount requested by both candidates resulted in a tie of 5,734 votes apiece.

Under the rules of Quincy's city charter, such a "failure to elect" demands a Constitutional Convention made up of the newly-elected City Council and remaining School Committee members to appoint someone to the seat after the city's inauguration ceremonies Jan. 3. According to City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, the convention could choose Barry, Cedrone, or anyone else to fill the seat.

McGrath said anyone chosen by the voters in a special election would fill the entire four-year term of the seat. In the Constitutional Convention scenario, the person appointed would serve for two years before the seat opens up again in 1995. The seat would then go back to a four-year term again in 1997, McGrath said.

Cahill said a special election would be a much fairer way of settling the matter.

"That's (filling political seats) not what we were elected to do," said Cahill. "Let the people decide."

The petition passed the council by a 7-2 vote, with Council President Charles Phelan and Councillor Michael Cheney voting in opposition. Cheney, who said he was not against a special election, said he would feel uncomfortable voting on the petition since Cahill had not informed either of the two candidates he had planned to introduce it to the council.

"Out of courtesy, we should let both candidates look at it first," he said.

Phelan said the process would be a major expense to the city, noting that a source at the city clerk's office told him a special election for two candidates would cost Quincy a minimum of $35,000. Phelan added that a special election would be open to anyone wishing to run for the seat, and said it would be unfortunate if someone other than Barry or Cedrone won at this point.

"I feel strongly that the chance of a third candidate winning is kind of ludicrous to me," said Phelan, who also expressed doubt that the petition would pass the legislature by the end of the year.

Cahill argued that while the special election would be the most expensive way to break the tie, a price cannot be put on democracy. He and other councillors who supported the petition also expressed sentiments that most voters would more than likely vote for either Barry or Cedrone.

"I'm strongly in favor of this," said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien. "It's most democratic to have a special election."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro agreed.

"It's the fairest, most democratic way to handle it," he said.

Cahill said that if the state legislature does not pass the petition by the end of its current session, he will not resubmit it to the council because he does not want to drag the process out. He added, however, that even if it doesn't pass, "at least we tried."

Cedrone has said in the past she feels a special election would be the fairest way of breaking the tie. Barry said, however, he may take legal action if the state legislature passes the home-rule petition, because that would open the field to more candidates.

Proposed Restaurant Gets Nod From Quincy 2000

By LISA CONNELL

Barnaby's restaurant moved one step closer to becoming a Quincy business reality at Tuesday's Licensing Board meeting.

Barnaby's, a full service restaurant geared to business lunches and family dining, is seeking a common victualler and full liquor license for their proposed 97 seat restaurant at the rear of 1546 Hancock St.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix said that Barnaby's "fits in with the long term development strategy [of] downtown We have no problem with the proposed location," said D'Aprix.

D'Aprix's opinion of the license request was sought by Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey as a follow-up of an earlier proposal

Lack of adequate parking, and an ill fit with current and proposed surrounding businesses helped defeat the original proposal.

Bernard Sharpe, who along with Mark Hamill and Paul Antonuccio are behind the new venture, said that , "this will be a family style restaurant and there will be no bowling teams or dart leagues or anything like that. "

"We're going to run a restaurant, not a sports bar and stay there 'til all hours of the morning,." he added later

Sharpe, Hamill and Antonuccio are long-time South Shore residents. All have food and beverage and restaurant management experience.

Sharpe, a licensed electrician, has been in the bar and restaurant business since 1971. He owned Friar Tuck's pubs in Boston and Rockland. Antonuccio worked part-time with Sharpe at Friar Tuck's. Hamill is the current food and beverage manager at the Sons of Italy Hall in Quincy, in a volunteer capacity. He has been in the plumbing industry for 22 years.

Sharpe and his partner are seeking a common victualler-all alcoholic beverage license to increase the value of their investment and add to its re-sale value if this becomes a necessary step.in the future. A 12 year lease at the site has been negotiated, a reason Sharpe noted in his request for the license.

Entrances and exits, proper insulation of pipes,plumbing fixtures and other building code standards that must be met were also reviewed .

Dec. 21 is the next review date for the proposal before the board,at which time plans to bring the building into compliance with state and city building health and fire codes will be reviewed, and to "see if anything needs to be added in to meet the conditions of the license,"said Mulvey.

Sharpe, Hamill and Antonuccio also plan to meet with the Quincy Professional Business Association and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan to further discuss the business plan.

In other board actions, a request from the Quincy High School Wrestling team (Domenic Venturelli) for a canninfg drive Dec. 29 - 31 was approved.

Sweeney Funeral Home Addition Under Construction

Construction of a 1,645-square-foot addition to the Sweeney Funeral Home on Elm St. is underway.

Funeral director Dennis Sweeney said the expansion will add a large modern room, a new lobby area, an elevator for better access by the handicapped and elderly population and a rest room specifically designed for the handicapped individual's use.

"These improvemnets meet the Americans with Disabilities Act Code and will be done in keeping with the pleasant atmosphere of our existing interiors," he points out.

Since the addition will face Miller Stile Rd., the facade of the Victorian-style residence will not be disturbed, he said. Construction, which is expected to last six months, will not progress while a service is scheduled, Sweeney says.

For the last 10 years, Sweeney Funeral Homes has sponsored Daffodil Days, the annual fundraising activity of the South Shore Chapter of the American Cancer Society. As chairwoman of the event, Sweeney's wife, Pauline, has been instrumental in the program's increased participation. Last year, the event raised $66,000, making it one of the leading fundraising chapters in the state.

Dennis Sweeney is also president of the Ward 2 Civic Association, a memeber of the Advisory Council for Quincy Hospice and also sponsors teams in the St. John's Junior Farm Baseball League and the Quincy Youth Soccer League.

This Year's Parade Cancelled But . . .

Float Winners To Be Announced Sunday At Awards Ceremony

Sunday's wet weather may have cancelled the 42 annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade but it will not wipe out the float competition.

Festival Chairman George White said floats entered in the commercial and non-commercial categories were judged while in storage Sunday. The winners will be announced Sunday, Dec. 12 inside the Quincy City Hall Council Chamber starting at 1 p.m.

Parade theme winners, Linda Saccetti of Weymouth and Sheila McKenna of Wollaston, will also be recognized for submitting this year's theme, "What Christmas Means to Me." The Festival Committee Chairperson Award winner will also be announced.

Sixteen floats were judged last Sunday morning by Gilda Barclay of Quincy, an elementary school teacher in New Bedford; Marilyn Reisberg of Quincy, past president of the Quincy Art Association; and Christopher Neil of Quincy, a member of the QAA.

Float entries competing for various prizes and $3,500 in cash are:

Quincy College, Quincy High School, Quincy Hospital, South Shore Plaza, The Citizen's Bank, Petar's Automotive/Eric's Auto Body, Woodward School, Quincy Point Congregational Church, Michael Morrissey, Quincy Partnership, Continental Cablevision, Quincy 2000, Quincy Fire Department, Hibernia Savings Bank, St. John's Church and Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club.

The best overall non-commercial float will received $1500 in cash and the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy. First place receives $750; second place $500; and third, fourth and fifth $250 each.

Other float awards include the Mayor's Trophy for the best Quincy float and a trophy for the best commercial float.

"The Committee felt that everyone representing their organization or business who were participating with a float deserved to be judged with the possibility of being a prize winner after all the time and effort they had expended," White said.

Several floats will be on display Sunday in front of City Hall.

In Apartment Buildings

Fabrizio Ordinance Would Combat Drug, Illegal Activities

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio is planning to propose a new ordinance designed to reduce drug and other illegal activities in Quincy apartment buildings.

Fabrizio said Tuesday the ordinance would allow landlords and tenants alike to appeal to the Quincy License Board for assistance in the event of such activities in the apartment complexes.

"It will give the city some recourse," said Fabrizio. "It will be a mechanism to protect citizens and allow them to go to the Quincy License Board when there are some problems."

Fabrizio stressed that the ordinance "is not about control over the landlords. Anyone will be able to ask the License Board for help under the ordinance." He added that local landlords he met with Monday night spoke favorably about the proposed ordinance, and said he will meet with landlords again Jan. 24.

Fabrizio said the ordinance, which he noted is currently in the hands of City Solicitor Stephen McGrath so that it can be put into the proper legal language, should be ready for passage by the City Council by the end of January.

The proposal for the new ordinance follows the arrest of six people on drug and theft charges during a police raid last Friday at an apartment complex on 145 Willard St. in West Quincy. City and police officials, including Fabrizio and Police Chief Francis Mullen, have accused the building's landlord, Harry Tatarian of Belmont, of not cooperating with repeated requests to screen tenants and hire a supervisor for the building.

Neighbors and nearby business owners have reportedly accused Tatarian of allowing drug activity to overrun the building and spill out into the neighborhood.

"We've called the conditions to his attention, and I don't think he's been cooperative," said Mullen. "We've spent a lot of man-hours surveilling there, and we've gathered enough information (about illegal activities)."

The chief added that he plans to consult with McGrath about any legal action the city might be able to take against Tatarian in the future.

Fabrizio agreed with Mullen's assessment of the situation at the Willard Street apartment complex.

"From my vantage point, I have not seen any cooperation (on Tatarian's part)," said Fabrizio.

Atty. George Burke of Quincy, however, who is representing Tatarian, said his client has been extremely cooperative with the city regarding any alleged illegal activities at the site.

"We've been reporting everything that happens down there (at the apartment complex) to the Quincy police," said Burke. "My client was delighted, not upset, when the police raid happened because he's wanted this done for a long time.

"He has also handed out a number of eviction notices to get these people (problem tenants) out of there, and has put in a new security guard at the building. Everything the city has asked for, we've done."

Burke said the new security guard began work Monday.

Mullen, meanwhile, said in addition to any new ordinances and future legal action, the city is also about to start enforcing a state law--which he referred to as the "Common Nuisance Statute"--that requires eviction of tenants if drugs are discovered in their apartments.

Quincy Center Post Office Extends Hours

The U.S. Post Office in Quincy Center is now open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and Saturday 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., announces James W. Lundrigan, manager of customer services.

Because of requests from local residents, retail hours will be extended Sunday, Dec. 19 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

City Store To Open In January

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy City Store, which officials estimate could earn the city as much as $25,000 to $75,000 annually, will open Saturday, Jan. 8 at the Fore River shipyard's main administration building on East Howard Street.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that earnings from the store, which will sell used equipment and items from various city departments, will be put into a special "activities-celebration account" to be used at the city's discretion.

Departments will donate whatever items they feel could be sold for profit, the mayor said. Sheets noted that the store will be open year-round every Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. "for as long as I'm mayor" and said his projection is that the venture will make "$25,000 to $75,000 every year."

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson first came up with the idea for the store earlier in the year after learning of a similar operation in San Diego, Calif. The City Council passed Kolson's proposal to open a Quincy City Store in the form of a resolution last March.

Sheets said that although certain details about the operation of the store--such as how items will be priced and whether a sales tax will be charged--have yet to be determined, he is very excited about the store's potential.

"My prediction is that it

After 42 Years

Colman's Doors Closing Dec. 31

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Colman's Sporting Goods, a landmark in Quincy Center for 42 years and one of the last anchor stores downtown, will close its doors Friday, Dec. 31, owner Robert J. Colman announced Tuesday.

Colman's, which opened as an army surplus supplies store in December, 1951 on the corner of Hancock St. and School St., grew into one of the largest sporting goods stores on the South Shore at 1630 Hancock St. Colman said several factors, including an increasingly competitive economic climate, is forcing him to close his doors.

"We came to Quincy 42 years ago. We enjoyed doing business in Quincy. We prospered with the city. We saw it through the good years when Quincy was strong. We had the strength of the local population as customers but as all things do, things change," Colman said an interview Tuesday from his office.

He said competition from malls and proliferation of wholesale "clubs" coupled with the loss of industry in Quincy has dramatically reduced the number of customers. Those factors, in turn, caused business to decrease in recent years.

"The malls came and that draws people from the downtowns.

The wholesale clubs have taken their toll. There's 22 open or under construction in Southeastern Massachusetts.

"They (wholesale clubs) generate about $1 billion in business annually. That kind of business has to be generated somewhere and Quincy has to give it's

Negotiations Over Moon Island To Begin Friday

Negotiations between Quincy and Boston regarding the cities' differences over the use of Moon Island will begin Friday.

Mayor James Sheets, who met with Boston Mayor Thomas Menino last Saturday to discuss the issue, said Tuesday negotiations will be handled by a combined Quincy-Boston team headed by Quincy Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader and Mary Nee of the Boston Public Facilities Department.

Sheets said officials also agreed to form a joint commission to study the future uses of Moon Island and nearby Long Island.

Controversy over Moon Island began heating up in September when Boston began plans to expand a gun range there that is used by Boston and Quincy police as well as officials from the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

Although Moon Island and Long Island are owned by the City of Boston, Moon Island lies within Quincy city limits.

Quincy officials and Squantum residents became concerned about the firing range expansion after Boston police began clearing land on the island without notifying Quincy officials or obtaining the necessary environmental permits.

A Norfolk Superior Court judge ordered the expansion to be halted in October, but also gave Boston permission to rebuild the original range, which has been razed.

Sheets has also expressed concerned about Boston's detonation of bombs on the island.

Sheets said his discussion over the weekend was both friendly and positive. He said that although Menino would not go along with the idea of having the range moved to a site other than Moon Island, he was glad Menino agreed to have it close at 5 p.m.

Squantum residents have complained in the past that gunshots at the range could sometimes be heard as late as 9 p.m., the mayor said.

Sheets added that Menino told him he would have to consult with Boston Fire Department officials before deciding on the bomb issue.

The mayor said the joint commission which is to be formed will examine ways to utilize Long Island as a recreational and historic site, adding that he and Menino agreed that the site should not be utilized for commercial development in the future.

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

The Quincy Sun

'Citizen Of The Year Award' Ballot Page 5

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's ninth annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Last year, Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, was honored. He was selected from 28 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Deadline to submit nominations is Friday, Dec. 31.

Sun readers have the opportunity to nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 5 of this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address no later than Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating Project Impact, an innovative program which addresses alcohol and drug problems among youths, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gberardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Friday, Dec. 31.

License Board Orders Sprinkler Systems For Rooming Houses

By LISA CONNELL

Rooming houses in Quincy not in compliance with city required sprinkler systems will have to reduce their total number of occupants to five or less, it was ruled at Tuesday's Licensing Board meeting.

To date, 17 of the city's 37 rooming houses are in compliance with sprinkler regulations..

In 1988, the State Legislature said that all rooming houses with six or more tenants must have adequate sprinkler systems and that if a city or town adopted this legislation, and Quincy did via a home rule petition, a five year reprieve would be given to allow rooming house owners time to comply. The City Council approved sprinkler installation on March 13, 1989. Nearly five years later, the reprieve is running out and the city is quickly bringing rooming house owners into compliance..

The cut-off date for compliance is Jan. 1, yet due to factors of weather, from mid-November. to April 1 no new sprinkler systems can be hooked up to the city's main water system.

Rooming houses approved for a sprinkler via a permit from the offices of the building inspector and fire inspector, will be protected from an occupancy decrease.

Rooming house owners with neither a sprinkler system in place or in possession of a permit for a sprinkler to be hooked up April 1, will be forced to decrease occupancy load to five people or less. until sprinklers are in place. Rooming house owners would then have to wait until April 1 before taking corrective measures.

Licensing Board members City Clerk and Chairman of the Board of License Commissioners Joseph Shea, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey expressed concern that some rooming house operators were not taking this ordinance seriously.

Police Chief Francis Mullen stressed that this is a serious matter and that issues of public safety would not be compromised.

While the city is cracking down on all rooming house operators, Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said that any negligence as a result of fire will fall squarely on the property owner.

"These sprinklers save lives and limit property damage. In nine out of ten cases, the fire is out before the (fire) truck arrives," said Mulvey.

Fire Chief Gorman said that sprinkler systems for most of the rooming houses range in cost from $ 5000 - $ 10,000. Larger dwellings may run upwards of $20,000, he added.

Mulvey said that most of Quincy's rooming houses are older buildings, constructed primarily of wood, and would burn quickly.

Property owners of any dwelling or residence would protect their investment, give themselves peace of mind, and reduce their insurance premiums, by installing interior sprinklers, Mulvey said.later.

In other board matters, 14 applications for Beano and Charity Game licenses were approved for renewal. This is the same number of licenses as approved last year.

Also, Mulvey requested that a transference of ownership of the Shell gas station near the Adams' houses be contined for one week to give petitioner Robert Dunphy time to make additional structural repairs and changes.

First Night Committee To Sponsor International Banner Making Contest

Quincy First Night Committee Chairman Michael Cheney announces that First Night will sponsor an international banner making contest.

Cheney said all banners will be displayed and judged at the Center for Technical Education gym Friday, Dec. 31 beginning at 4 p.m.

Each banner must portray the theme of a country or culture. The banners will be used as a decorative backdrop for the International Food Festival that will take place in the Center for Technical Education gym. People attending the food festival will vote on their favorite banner.

The First Place banner will win $100, Second Place $50 and Third Place $25. First Night will have official entry banners that will be cut and hemmed (3 feet by 2 1/2 feet) available at the First Night Office on the second floor of Old City Hall.

Banners and more information may be picked up at the First Night Office weekdays between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. There will be a $25 deposit for each banner which is refundable when the finished banner is returned to First Night. Banners should be turned into the First Night Office no later than Thursday, Dec. 30 at 4 p.m.

Cheney said there are only 17 official banners available for the contest and they will be given out on a first come, first serve basis.

"This is a great Christmas vacation project for an entire family, an organization or an individual artist," he said.

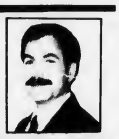
Medically Speaking



by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

WHEN BANDAGES HURT RATHER THAN HELP

The response is almost automatic - you get a cut or scrape, you reach for an adhesive bandage. Like any medical procedure, though, you would be better off thinking before you act. Wounds that are likely to be chafed or irritated are generally best protected with a bandage. Also, large wounds may benefit from bandaging to help keep the edges of the injury together and dirt out. However, for smaller wounds, exposure to air usually aids in the formation of scabs, an important, protective part of the healing process. Bandaging an improperly cleaned wound can also be an invitation to infection. Then bandages get wet or are left on too long, bacteria have a perfect environment for multiplying.

P.S. When skin appears pale and wrinkled, it has probably been covered up too long.

Make sure that any cut is thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before applying a bandage, and keep a close eye on you child's bandages cut as the days go by. Denvir Retirement Spurs Speculation

Robert Denvir will retire as city purchasing agent and parking clerk in February and the City Hall rumor mill is already grinding out speculation as to who will succeed him.

One name being mentioned: Joseph LaRaia.

DENVIR

Another is that of Rhonda Merrill who has played an active role in Mayor Sheets' political campaigns going back to when he was running for Ward 4 city councillor.

Other speculation is that one or both of the two jobs now held by Denvir may be merged with one or two other departments.

But it's LaRaia's name that is causing the most buzz around the Hall because if he were to get the job, it would affect the City Council.

LaRAIA

LaRaia was re-elected to a two-year term in November, finishing an impressive second to Tim Cahill and ahead of Michael Cheney. It was seen as another in his long-string of comebacks.

If he were to get the puchasing and parking clerk job, he of course, would have to resign from the City Council.

Which means Charles McIntyre, who finished fourth to LaRaia in a strong political debut would succeed LaRaia in the City Council as the runner-up.

McINTYRE

Denvir will step down Feb. 4 from the two jobs which have a combined salary of approximately $44,000—$36,500 as purchasing agent and $7,500 as parking clerk. (A City Councillor's salary is $10,000.)

Denvir has been purchasing agent 12 years and parking clerk 11 1/2 years. He was first appointed by Mayor Frank McCauley and retained through the first two terms of Sheets.

Last summer, Denvir informed Sheets he wanted to retire and asked him not to consider him for reappointment in February when mayor's department heads—the so called Official Family—come up for annual re-appointment.

"There is absolutely no animosity between us," says Denvir. "I just told him I want to retire. There is a time to retire and I am ready. It's as simple as that."

Denvir says he has no idea who will replace him and notes he has no input in the appointment, "That's strictly the mayor's call," he says.

He acknowledges he has heard the rumors but has no idea whether there is anything to them.

The number of parking violation tickets and receipts have been diminishing the past four years.

The number of tickets issued has fallen from a high of 88,000 in 1988-89 to 59,000 last year and will be lower this year.

Annual receipts have dropped in that time from about $617,000 to under $400,000.

Denvir says he has never tried to win a popularity contest as parking clerk and many will agree he hasn't.

But many will also agree that he has treated people fairly. If someone gets a parking violation ticket and can give him a legitimate reason why he or she really shouldn't have gotten it, he can be quite benevolent by waiving the fine. But, if you try to con him, look out!

He knows that merchants complain that tagging cars drives business away. But, he says, there are some merchants and store employees who keep the business away themselves.

He tells of one Wollaston merchant who got 67 tickets himself for parking in violation in front of his own store.

"While his car was parked there all day for many days, he was taking up a potential customer's parking space," Denvir notes.

What are some of the favorite excuses for getting tagged?

Among the most frequent is that a truck blocked the No Parking or Tow Zone sign.

"To hear them," says Denvir, "you would think every vehicle parked in Quincy other than their own car is a truck."

Another one: "A car pulled out, so I pulled in. I didn't know the other car wasn't supposed to have parked there."

And the dumbest alibi?

The guy who wrote a letter insisting his car wasn't even in Quincy.

And, he enclosed the actual parking ticket with registration number which proved it was.

FORMER SCHOOL Committeeman Frank Anselmo is recovering "nicely" from injuries in a fall at 1000 Southern Artery where he lives.

ANSELMO

Anselmo, who is 95, suffered a fractured hip and arm and a shoulder injury a couple of weeks ago and is now at the Colonial Nursing and Rehabilitation Center, 125 Broad St., Weymouth. It is believed he will able to go home in two or three weeks.

Anselmo has been a generous benefactor to Quincy College. So, it wasn't surprising that he would be the first to purchase one of the special silk ties interim President Donald Young has created as a fundraiser for the college.

They have the college emblem and go for $1,000.

A Holiday Message From Quincy Police

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In behalf of the entire Quincy Police Department, I extend best wishes to you and your families for a happy and safe holiday season and a healthy and prosperous New Year.

I also would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all of you for your continued support. Hopefully, we can continue to work together to keep Quincy a safe and crime-free City.

One final reminder . . . if you attend parties during this holiday season where alcohol is served, don't forget the life you save may be your own. "Don't drink and drive . . .use a designated driver." Enjoy the holidays with your families!

Season's greetings to everyone!

We Can Feel Proud Of These Kids

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Thank you to The Quincy Sun for choosing me as the Citizen of the Year for 1992. The many tributes sent throughout the year by friends, colleagues and former students were greatly appreciated and the memories I take with me of this honor will last a lifetime.

As the holiday season approaches, it is encouraging to see how involved young people in Quincy are becoming to help make their city a better place to live. Feeding the homeless, adopting traffic islands and city parks, honoring Quincy's granite workers and shipbuilders with a monument and a museum, remembering veterans past and present, and standing up for human rights around the world are just a few of the projects Quincy students have undertaken.

We can feel proud of these kids, and of the many excellent teachers in the Quincy public schools.

With very best wishes to all the people of Quincy for good health and happiness in the new year.

A Thank You From Cancer Walk Leaders

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the American Cancer Society, we want to thank everyone from the South Shore area who took part in Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, the Sept. 26 walk in Boston.

In spite of drenching rains, more than 4,000 people came from all over the state, and turned in more than $350,000 to benefit the American Cancer Society's breast cancer research, education, and service programs. Their determination and spirit have brought us closer than ever to finding a cure!

In spite of this remarkable turnout, however, approximately half of the people expected to participate were unable to come because of the bad weather. It's crucial that every walker who was deterred by the rain mail in their sponsorships. The fight against breast cancer must go on, rain or shine. Those walkers who did come should collect any outstanding pledges as soon as possible and send them to the American Cancer Society. The address is 294 Pleasant St., Stoughton, MA 02072.

With everyone's help, we will reach our $500,000 goal and save more lives from breast cancer.

Council Votes Censorship Of Comic Books

Dec. 16-22, 1948
45 Years Ago

The City Council passed an ordinance regulating the sale of comic books and paperback reprints in the city and authorizing the mayor to set up a committee of three to censor literature "tending to corrupt the morals of youth."

Under the ordinance, literature banned by the censors would be reported to the chief of police who was then authorized to order distributors to cease its sale. If they failed to comply, the chief was to turn the matter over to the city solicitor.

Councillor Frank N, Orcutt said he felt that the board of censorship should be made up of three clergymen who were best fitted to decide what the youth of Quincy should read.

The Council also passed two ordinance amendments authorizing the health commissioner and the building commissioner to take an active role in reporting violations of codes in bars but it refused to give the same approval to the wire and plumbing inspectors.

Councillor David J. Crowley told his colleagues that if all four officials had the authority and did 100 per cent job enforcing the law, almost everybody in Quincy would be in jail.

"There's violations in most Quincy homes right now because of the Christmas wiring," he said, pointing to a light wire string between councillors' desks. "Here's a violation right here."

SINGLE SESSION FAVORED

Parents of Quincy school children voted 3,304 to 2,289 in favor of a single session plan over the present double session school day. School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard said he would five the results to the School Committee for whatever action it chose to take.

"This proves beyond all doubt that Quincy parents think for themselves," said Earl Lantery of Montclair, a leader of single session proponents, "because the evidence presented to them was slanted toward the two session idea with the superintendent taking the two session side."

A. Wendell Clark, vice chairman of the School Committee, said the vote would be taken into consideration when the committee made a decision at the Dec. 28 meeting.

The Co-operative Bank Filling Christmas Stockings For Needy Children

Employees of The Co-operative Bank have volunteered to fill 79 Christmas stockings for children through the Red Cross Holiday Stocking Program.

The stockings, filled with small gifts suitable for children ages 1 through 11, will be donated to South Shore families by the Red Cross. These stockings may be the only gift some children will receive this Christmas.

Recipients are families that receive assistance through the Red Cross Food and Fuel Voucher Program and disaster victims. The stockings will also be donated to several South Shore agencies such as Headstart throughout the holiday season.

The Co-operative Bank also donates new and handmade mittens, hats and scarves for children and adults to the homeless through the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless. The Bank decorates its lobbies with "Mitten Trees" each year. Employees and residents decorate the tree with clothing items. the "Mitten Trees" will be available for donations until Tuesday, Dec. 21st.

For more information, call Doris Baker, Assistant Vice President, at 479-6600, ext. 4112.

PARTNERS--Anthony Caruso, vice president of The Co-operative Bank and Kathleen Morris, principal of the Merrymount School with students James Sheehan, Lee Sheehan, Kristen Dwyer, Katelyn Dwyer, Jamie Wilson, Nicole Chiarelli and Matthew MacNeil at recent partnership signing.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS entry "Christmas Cards Mean Christmas" won first place in the non-commercial category in this year's Quincy Christmas Festival Parade float competition. The firefighters received the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1500 cash.

PETAR'S AUTOMOTIVE and Eric's Auto Body won first place in the commercial category for the float "Christmas is for Families."

Legislators Entry Receives Mayor's Trophy

Quincy Firefighters, Petar's Auto Win Top Float Awards

Float entries by the Quincy Firefighters and Petar's Auto & Eric's Autobody won the top prizes in their respective categories at the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee float awards ceremony Sunday.

A standing-room only crowd looked on in the Council Chamber of City Hall as nine awards and $3500 in prize money was presented. The floats did not participate in the 42nd annual parade this year because wet weather cancelled this year's event. The floats had been kept in storage and the Festival Committee decided to go forward with the awards ceremony, usually held after the parade, on Sunday at City Hall.

In the non-commercial category, the Quincy Firefighters entry "Christmas Cards Mean Christmas" won the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy and $1500 cash for first place.

The Woodward School's entry "Christmas in the City" was awarded second place and $750 cash.

Quincy College Student Government Association's "Peace on Earth" took third prize and $500 cash.

Harvey's Saltwater Fishing Club's entry "Christmas from Under the Sea" received fourth place and $250 cash.

Quincy High School Student Council's "Toys, Toys and More Toys" was awarded fifth prize and $250 cash.

The Quincy Point Congregational Church entry "Let the Children Come to Him" received sixth place and $250 cash.

An entry by the South Shore state legislators entitled "Old Fashion Christmas" won the Mayor's Trophy as the best Quincy float.

In the commercial category, Petar's Auto & Eric's Autobody float "Christmas is for Families" received the top trophy prize.

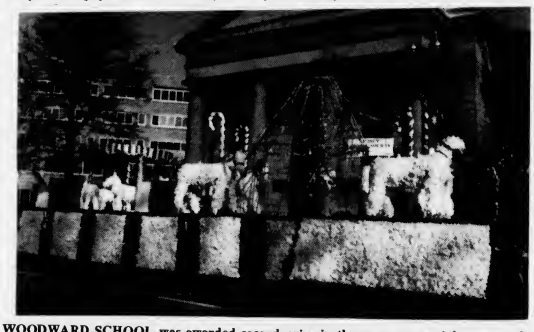
John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging and community activist, received the Chairman's Trophy in the best specialty category for his "untold time and efforts expended on behalf of the Christmas Festival Committee's programs."

Twenty-one float were entered in the competition. The judging committee, co-chaired by Paul Kennedy and Frances Flynn, included Marilyn Reisberg, Gilda Barclay and Christopher Neil.

Floats were judged according to originality, use of materials, use of color, overall appearance and adherence to parade theme.

Among those attending the ceremony were Mayor James Sheets, State Reps. Ron Mariano and Michael Bellotti, members of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee and Santa Claus.

SOUTH SHORE LEGISLATORS float entitled, "Old Fashion Christmas" won the Mayor's Trophy as the best Quincy float by the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.



WOODWARD SCHOOL was awarded second prize in the non-commercial category for their float entitled, "Christmas in the City." The school received $750 cash.

HARVEY'S SALTWATER FISHING Club was awarded fourth place and $250 cash for the float "Christmas from Under the Sea" in the non-commercial float category.

JOHN NOONAN, center, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging and a community activist for many years, is presented the Chairman's Award by Quincy Festival Committee Chairman George White as Santa Claus looks on. (Bob Noble photos)

QUINCY COLLEGE STUDENT Government took third place in the non-commercial float category for their entry called "Peace On Earth." The school was presented $500.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL Student Council received fifth place and a $250 cash prize for the float "Toys, Toys and More Toys" in the non-commercial float category.

City Store To Open In January

will be very successful," said Sheets. "It's a way of making government more efficient. What will happen to this stuff if we don't sell it?"

Sheets said the money the store earns will have to be accepted by the City Council in the form of a gift before it is put into the city's "activities-celebration account." He added that although it is possible existing programs such as Quincy First Night will benefit from the program, the funds will mainly go toward new festivities such as a fall celebration, "pumpkin hunts," and others.

"We want to create some new downtown interests for our families, and create an environment of enjoyment for them," said Sheets. "The store will also take the pressure off the city budget for those kinds of (recreational) activities."

Kolson said he, too, is extremely optimistic about chances for the store's success.

"It ought to be a fun thing," said Kolson. "It's a lot better than throwing the stuff in the rubbish. The two great things about the store are that it will help us realize the value of something even if it's used, and it will save the city money. It could be a real boost in the arm to Quincy.

"Another great thing is the location because it's so accessible. It's like a storefront right on the street."

Kolson said he appreciated the support of Sheets and his fellow city councillors, particularly Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro whose ward includes the shipyard, and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which owns the shipyard.

Kolson said city departments have already donated between 1,500 and 2,000 items for the store's opening. Sheets said donations have ranged from larger items such as furniture, typewriters, a copy machine, and an electric stove to smaller items such as pencils, calculators and rulers.

The mayor said that he, Kolson and DeCristofaro will oversee the operation of the store during its first two or three weeks "to work out any bugs there may be."

Sheets said there are no plans for any major advertising for the store and officials will rely on the local media to increase public awareness of the venture. He added that he hopes people who visit the store will "network like people who visit flea markets" and that most residents will hear about it by word-of-mouth.

Sheets noted that many people are interested in any items of historical value and said he wished the store was open at the time of the recent demolition of the former Lincoln Elementary School in South Quincy.

"We could have sold bricks from the Lincoln School," said Sheets. "A lot of people would have liked to own a piece of that school. And things that come out of here (Sheets' office)--it's like owning a piece of City Hall."

Sheets added that MWRA officials have indicated to him that if the Quincy City Store is a success, the MWRA may begin operation of a similar venture in the near future.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy Licensing Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

• Approved 14 applications for Beano and Charity Game licenses renewal. This is the same number of licenses as approved last year.

• Requested that a transference of ownership of the Shell gas station at 10 Independence Ave. be contined for one week to give petitioner Robert Dunphy time to make additional structural repairs and changes.

• Announced that Grumpy White's Restaurant is petitioning to physically expand and alter their premises at 209 - 217 Sea St. and increase the square footage of their restaurant by 1390 square feet, from 2259 to 3649 square feet.

2 Quincy Residents In Boston Boy Choir

Two Quincy residents have been invested in the Boston Boy Choir, which appears regularly at Symphony Hall, Carnegie Hall and Tanglewood. Christopher Gorham and Nicholas Puleo are students at the Boston Archdiocesan Choir School where Chris has been named to First Honors for the Fall term.

Chris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Gorham, Billings St. Nick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Puleo, Phillips St.

share," Colman said.

"We've also lost industry in this area." Colman recalled an era when laborers and other workers dressed in work uniforms frequented his store. Now, he says he doesn't see that anymore.

"That (the loss of industry) further depletes the customer counts."

Colman's is the latest Quincy store to announce it is closing its doors. Other businesses which have closed or are closing include Grossman's on Granite St. and Cummings on Hancock St. Procter and Gamble manufacturing plant in Quincy Point may also cease operation in a restructuring move.

Although his business closing marks the end of an era, Colman said he prefers to remember the positive aspects of being a Quincy merchant for more than four decades.

"Over the years we did provide innumerable jobs for people in this area, like high school and college students, many of whom have profited from the experience at the grass roots level of an active retailing establishment."

Colman, who has been active in the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association for many years, singled out some of that group's accomplishments. Among them: the construction of the Ross Parking Garage, the opening of the Hancock Parking Lot and the development of the Burgin Parkway extension.

"These are some of the things we did which worked. We tried to promote Quincy to keep it alive," Colman said.

Long-time friend and fellow merchant Bernie Reisberg, proprietor of Bernie's Modern Formal Wear in Quincy Center since 1947, said he was saddened to hear of Colman's closing.

"It's a tremendous loss. He's perhaps the last of the big draws on Hancock St. Bob Colman was one of the pioneers on Hancock St. I hate to see Bob go as a fellow merchant." Reisberg said.

When he first opened his doors 42 years ago, Colman's was an army surplus store selling tents, canteens and other outdoor equipment. "Little by little, he built up a nice business which is a credit to him," Reisberg said.

"He really made this end of Hancock St. thrive. This is, in a sense, an end of an era."

NQHS School Council Meeting

North Quincy High School's School Council was scheduled to meet last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. in the Trophy Room at the school.

The council was formed under the recent Massachusetts Education Reform Act.

47 Candidates For U. S. Academy Nominations

Congressman Gerry Studds announces that 47 high school students from the 10th Congressional District - 13 more than last year - have applied for nomination to the United States Service Academies.

The candidates for nomination, including 34 from the South Shore and 13 from Cape Cod and the Islands, have applied for admission to the U. S. Naval, Air Force, Military and Merchant Marine Academies.

All the candidates will be interviewed next month by at least two members of an eight-person Nominee Selection Committee, which will recommend to Congressman Studds a list of candidates he should nominate. Candidates may be nominated for more than one Academy. Studds will then forward those names; without preferential listing, to the Academies.

Nominees must exhibit excellence in academics, extracurricular activities and overall character. In past years, about one in 10 of the nominees from any particular Congressional district have been selected by one of the Academies.

The application deadline expired Nov. 1, but those who would like more information about the application process, or about the U. S. Service Academies, can call the Congressman's nearest office toll free, 1-800-794-9911 (South Shore), or 1-800-870-2626, (Cape and Islands).

Winter Sports Underway For Quincy, North

By KERRY BYRNE

Winter sports for Quincy and North Quincy High Schools got under way this week.

The boy's basketball season opened this past Tuesday with Old Colony League games for both teams as North traveled to Plymouth and Quincy hosted Taunton. On Friday night (Dec. 17) at 7:00 North will entertain Falmouth and Quincy will play at Weymouth.

The girls basketball teams will open against the same opponents with the location being reversed. The North girls will play at Falmouth at 6:00 P.M. instead of 7 on Friday night.

The hockey season began last night (Wednesday) with Quincy playing at Taunton and North traveling to Acton/Boxboro. Quincy's next game will be Friday afternoon at 2:30 as the Presidents host Boston Latin. They will play at Boston Latin Monday at 3:15. The Red Raiders will play at home against Taunton Saturday evening at 6:40 On Wednesday (Dec. 22) North will host Falmouth at 6:40.

The wrestling squads for both schools opened their seasons last night (Wednesday). The Red Raiders hosted Randolph and the Presidents went to Marshfield. The next home match for North and the first for Quincy will be on Thursday (Dec. 23). Walpole, Cohasset and Rockland will travel to North to do battle in a double dual meet. The Presidents will host Boston Latin and Waltham.

Winter track began this past Tuesday as the North boys and girls took on the Tigers of Taunton at Taunton. The Quincy boys and girls played Weymouth, also at Taunton.

Taunton, Falmouth and Wheaton College in Norton will be the site of most of the meets for the winter track teams. On Friday at 3:30 the North boys and girls will take on Weymouth at Wheaton. The Quincy squads will challenge the Tigers at Taunton at 5:30 on Thursday (Dec. 23).

The boys swimming teams of Quincy and North Quincy will play as a unified group this year. They opened at home against Blue Hills last night (Wednesday) and will host Westwood Friday. The swimmers will again be at home on Tuesday against Stoughton. All swim meets will be at 3:30 except for the home meet against Milford, on Dec. 23, which will begin at 4:00 P.M.

Wrestling

Quincy Has Sights On Old Colony Title

With several starters returning from last years 13-12 squad, the Quincy High Wrestling Team has their sights set on an Old Colony League title.

Seventh year Head Coach Lou Venturelli and second-year assistant Larry Taglieri are cautiously optimistic.

"We certainly have some talented wrestlers with varsity experience and the newcomers have been very enthusiastic. We could be one of the teams to contend with for the OCL title," said Coach Venturelli.

Leading the way for Quincy are: tri-captains Ashley Davis (152 pounds), a four-year starter and runner-up at last years Sectional Tournament; Shane O'Connor (125), also a four-year starter; and junior Bryan Gallahue(145), who finished fourth in last year's Sectional Tournament at 152 lbs.

Other starters may include sophomore Jim Gibbons (112); senior Lauralee Summer (112); juniors Pat Daly (135), John Richard (103), Rich Bergeron (152), Joe Sweeney (189) and Matt Strauchon (189); and senior Jerry Booker (171).

Booker is in his first year of wrestling and is already causing heads to turn.

"Watching Jerry is going to be very exciting this year!" said Coach Venturelli.

Newcomers to the team include senior Steve Orseno (140); sophomores John Leonard (103), Tuan Tan (140), Joe Biagini (171) and John Mass (heavy).

A promising freshman group includes Kevin Connolly (119), Larry Mahronk (119), Quang Pham (125), Severin Tan (140), Jason Sakulich (125) and Sean Thurston (160).

Quincy opened the season last night (Wednesday) at Marshfield. The annual homecoming match will be held Thursday (Dec. 23) against Waltham and Boston Latin at 4:00 P.M. Quincy will host the year end Sectional Tournament for the first time on Saturday, Feb. 14.

Bowling

Everlasting Holds Olindy's Lead

Pee Wee A's Win 5th In A Row

The Quincy Pee Wee A team defeated Parkway Youth Hockey 6-3.

The win was Quincy's fifth straight GBHL victory and it solidified their standing as the top team in the league through the first half of the season.

Michael Sullivan led Quincy with two goals. Bob Harvey, Billy Connolly, Chad Fitzpatrick and Shawn Manning each had one tally. Fitzpatrick also registered two assists and Sean Garvey and Billy Griffin each posted one assist. Michael Powers and Jesse Winter also gave outstanding offensive efforts.

The defensive corps of Betsy Stone, Pat Kenney, Paul Markarian, Steve Ford and John Katsarikas played solidly. Parkway was unable to breakout offensively and could not keep the puck in the Quincy zone.

The goaltending duo of Chris Carthas and Ryan Kruger turned in a spectacular performance.

During the Christmas break the Pee Wee A team will participate in a tournament at the Hobomack Rink in Pembroke.

Mite Bs Rally For 6-2 Win

The Quincy Mite B team posted a come from behind 6-2 victory over Needham.

Needham opened the game with two quick goals in the first period to take a 2-0 lead.

In the second period the Quincy team opened it's offensive surge with two goals by Matt Alleva. Ryan Tobin assisted on both. Brendan Craig gave Quincy the go-ahead goal on a feed from Robert Donovan.

In the third period Craig returned the favor with a centering pass to Donovan which resulted in a quick goal. Chris Sheehan and Tobin scored the final two Quincy goals. Robert Mooney had the assists.

Quincy received an outstanding defensive effort from Joe Norris, Pat Caspar, Danny Durocher, Lindsey Langille and Richard Stone. Tim McMahon, Andy McDonough and Pat Maloney contributed to the victory with solid two-way efforts. After giving up two early goals Quincy goalie Andrew Patten gave a solid effort and stopped every shot that came his way.

Quincy finished the first half of the GBHL season at 6-2-1. The team is on break from GBHL play and will participate in the North Quincy Knight's of Columbus Annual Tournament at Quincy Youth Arena during the interim.

Stanton Selected For Mass. Patriots Team

Sara Stanton, a sophomore at North Quincy High, has been chosen for the second year in a row to play for the Mass. Patriots Volleyball team which represents the New England region at competitions in New York, Pennsylvania, Texas and California.

Most of the Patriot graduates go to Div. I or Div. II colleges on volleyball scholarships.

The expenses of these trips as well as gym fees, uniforms and coaching total about $2700.

Stanton is seeking donations to help her defray these expenses and allow her to continue to work toward her goal of an athletic scholarship.

"My goal is to receive a scholarship in volleyball and academics and strive for a spot on the U.S. Olympic volleyball team," said Stanton, the oldest of five children in her family.

The Mass. Patriots are under the Massachusetts Junior Olympic Volleyball Inc., a non-profit organization dedicated to helping young girls improve in the sport, foster lasting friendships and continue their education.

Stanton is one of the outstanding players on the North Quincy girls' volleyball team which is seeking its third successive Div. I state championship.

Anyone interested in helping her raise enough funds to travel with the Patriots can sen a check made payable to Mass. J.O. Volleyball, and mail it to 87 Glover Ave., North Quincy, MA 02171 in her name.

Quincy Bay Girls On Win Streak

The Quincy Bay Girls Basketball teams won all four South Shore League matches against Milton on Saturday.

The 8th grade team bested Milton 33-16. Leading the way for Quincy was Sarah Satkevich with 14 points and 8 rebounds. Dominigue Good had 9 points and Erin Berry scored 5 to go with her 10 rebounds. Jocelyn West dished out 9 assists from the point. Leela Shankar did a great job defensively and added 2 points and 2 rebounds.

The 7th/8th grade squad topped Milton 28-19. Six different players scored with Kerry Duffy leading the way. Duffy put up 10 points and 4 rebounds. Also playing strong was Pam Gray with 8 points and 10 rebounds.

The 7th graders won 26-10. Catherine Giordano and Kim Huerth were the big guns scoring 8 and 6 points repectively. Alison Haddad and Sarah Kelly chipped in with 4 points each.

The 6th graders overpowered Milton 30-10. Aubrey Guastalli single-handedly outscored the opposition with 12 points and 3 rebounds. Amy Satkevich had 6 points and 6 rebounds. Kelley Raymer scored 4 hard earned points from under the hoop. Kathryn O'Donnell had 4 steals to set up Quincy scoring opportunities.

Sunday's games saw Quincy go 2-2.

The 8th grade team dominated a weak Cohasset group 43-4. Every Quincy player found themselves in the scoring column. Kelley Shaw was a power in the post with 8 points and 7 rebounds. Kara McSweeney complimented Shaw's inside game with 7 points from the perimeter including a three pointer to end the game.

The 7th/8th grade squad met a tough North Attleboro team and lost 52-16. Duffy again led Quincy with 8 points. Gray played another strong game as did Erin Rooney and Lisa O'Toole.

The 7th graders also came up short, bowing to Stoughton 28-10. Giordano led the team with 4 points and 8 rebounds. Great efforts were put out by Katie Gaughan, Kelly, and Haddad. Liz Boc was impressive on defense.

The 6th grade team knocked off Bridgewater 30-17. Guastalli was again the leading scorer, this time netting 14. Caitlin Powers added 8 points with Satkevich putting in 4 and Meghan Ginty putting in 2. The defense was led by Tama Baker.

St. Moritz Devils Bow, 2-1

The St. Moritz Devils Squirt Minor hockey team was edged 2-1 by the Springfield Junior Olympics at U Mass Boston in a defense oriented game.

The Olympics scored first midway through the first period and again midway through the second. Both teams skated hard and checked heavily. South Boston's Kevin Regan made several great saves for the Devils.

The Devils played an excellent defensive game. Tim Egan of Braintree played well and dove on the ice to stop a potential goal. The play of the game was made by Mark Mulhern of Milton. Mulhern intercepted the puck near his own goal, brought it down ice, faked a shot and passed to Pat Balaconis of South Boston. Balaconis was able to score the only Devil goal of the game on the play.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Each of us is blessed with a unique personality. Some outgoing and imaginative. Others cautious and shrewd. But it is a rare personality that is well-liked by all his companions in his social and business life. "You can't please everyone;" traits that appeal to some people are irritating to others. We all may benefit, however, from winning other's respect, good will and, hopefully, friendships. . .

A well-developed personality depends first of all on the ability to be oneself. You may be a bit on the solemn side or you may be an extrovert and "back-slapper." Start from what you are. Don't try to be something you are not. . . Take a great and real interest in other people. Be sparing in your criticism. Try to find out everytime you come in contact with something novel and unusual just what it is that gives this situation its appeal. In other words, touch life at many points. Be generous and understanding.

Granted, this may seem like trite and obvious advice, but it is the kind of thing that develops rich, charming, over-whelming personalities. . . .

A FEW FUEL LINE FACTS

Those who live in the country's colder regions or visit them regularly on vacation trips may be acquainted with frozen fuel lines. This occurs when water vapor in a partially filled gas tank condenses and freezes at the lowest point in the fuel system during cold weather. As ice blocks the fuel line, starting the engine becomes difficult. To prevent this from happening, many wintertime motorists engage in the ritual of adding a bottle of fuel-line antifreeze to a tank of gas every so often. This additive (usually alcohol) works by absorbing water and helping through the combustion process. However, since November, 1992, federal law has required 41 U.S. cities with the worst air pollution to add oxygen-rich compounds to their gasoline, rendering the use of additives unnecessary.

HINT: The best way to avoid fuel-line freeze is to keep the has tank full, which allows in less air to cause condensation.

Make an appointment today at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO whether you need to have you car winterized, to have some major work done on it, or simply need to fill up your gas tank. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550), our skilled technicians will treat your car as if it were their own and they were going to be traveling with their family in it. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)

Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

11 Residents, Merchants Oppose Home Depot Plan

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Eleven city residents and business owners attended a public hearing Monday night to oppose expansion plans by the Home Depot home improvement store in West Quincy.

The City Council held the hearing in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall. Five residents spoke against the proposal and six six signed in opposition. No one spoke or was recorded in favor.

Prior to the hearing, three representatives of the store gave a detailed presentation outlining the company's plans. They included Atty. Carl Johnson, real estate director David Shanahan, and the engineer for the project, Bill Roche of Vanasse Hangen Brustlin Inc. in Watertown.

The Home Depot site is approximately 102,000 square feet including a 20,000 square foot garden center, according to Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio. He summarized the firm's plans by saying that Home Depot is asking the City Council for permission to modify its special Planned Unit Development (PUD) permit so that it may add 2,200 square feet to its existing garden center as well as a 5,000 square foot greenhouse inside the store.

Home Depot also wants to change its hours Monday through Saturday from the current 7:30 a.m.

Relief Fund Established For Point Fire Victims

A fund has been established to raise money for a Quincy Point family whose home was destroyed by a two-alarm fire Sunday.

Patrick and Mae Burke and their four children, Kerry, 14; Kristina, 12; Aimee, 6 and Stephanie, 2 were left homeless as a result of the blaze at 26 Adams St. They are reportedly temporarily staying in Dorchester with Mrs. Burke's sister and her family.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the fire caused around $90,000 damage to the building. He added the fire started in the kitchen around 1:30 p.m. and was apparently caused by overheated cooking oil. No one was hurt in the fire.

Gorman said two of the children and a teenaged girl who was babysitting them were the only people in the house when the fire occurred. The chief said the girl, whose name was unavailable at press time, did a "magnificent job" of getting the two children to safety and calling the fire department.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, who set up the relief fund for the family along with Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, said the two-family home is owned by Ernest and Carolyn Kramer of Wellesley Hills. The first floor of the building was vacant, he said.

DeCristofaro, who noted he has encouraged his eight fellow city councillors to contribute to the relief fund, said the fund was established to help the family buy some immediate necessities such as furniture "and especially clothes." Mulvey added that if enough money is raised, the family members will try to find a new apartment in Quincy.

Gorman said the Quincy firefighters' union, Local 792, may also make a contribution to the fund.

$230 Million Pledged To Put Shipyard Back In Business

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

An initiative backed by President Clinton and $230 million in federal loan guarantees to modernize the Quincy Fore River shipyard was embraced by local leaders Monday who labeled the legislation the most significant effort to date to revitalize the shipyard.

The plan which will form a national pilot project called the Quincy Shipyard Revitalization was announced at a press conference Monday afternoon at the shipyard by Cong. Gerry Studds who, as chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, authored the legislation.

The initiative would use Quincy as a national model to bring commercial construction back to American shipyards. The President, in a letter to Studds, has pledged to make available federal loan guarantees to cover up to $30 million in shipyard modernization at the Quincy shipyard and up to $200 million for ship construction at the yard to attract private, including foreign, investors.

Shipbuilding corporations which invest in the Quincy yard will get federal support in the form of loan guarantees to renovate the aging facility and to help finance the purchase of ships built there.

Clinton has promised to attend the Fore River shipyard when the first new ship is christened.

"This project holds out the promise that working together, private and public investment can bring shipyards like Quincy competitively into the international marketplace," Studds said. "By converting our shipyards from defense to commercial shipbuilding, we have an opportunity to significantly enhance economic development on the South Shore and across the country."

Studds was joined at the briefing by Cong. Joseph Moakley, who represents Braintree which includes a small piece of a shipyard site; Vice Admiral Albert J. Herberger, administrator of U.S. Maritime Administration, Mayor James Sheets, area labor leaders, city officials and representatives from Quincy 2000, the city's economic development group.

The initiative, which breathes new life into the shipyard revitalization effort, was lauded by officials attending the briefing. Many expressed renewed optimism that the yard, closed since 1986, will be the site of steady shipbuilding in the not too distant future.

Moakley, chairman of the House Rules Committee, said Quincy shipbuilding has had a storied past which deserves a new chapter.

"Quincy has such a historic past in terms of shipbuilding and I think we'll have no problem getting our share. We've got the federal money and now we have to attract the non-federal money.

"We've talked about reopening the yard before but this is the closest I've

4 Streets Renamed To Avoid Mix-ups

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Four streets in the City of Quincy have been renamed.

Because of the Enhanced 911 (E911) phone service that is due to be implemented in the city in 1994, the City Council voted Monday night to change Ocean Street in Squantum to Ocean Avenue, Gordon Street in West Quincy to Gordon Terrace, Washington Street on the Quincy-Milton line to Freedom Way, and Bayview Avenue in Germantown to Bay Court.

The name changes will officially go into effect Jan. 1.

City Clerk Joseph Shea told the City Council that since the E911 service automatically gives a dispatcher receiving an emergency call the address of the caller, no city or town with E911 is allowed to have two streets with the same name.

Quincy has another Ocean Street in the city's Atlantic section, as well as a Gordon Street in North Quincy, Washington Street in Quincy Point, and Bay View Avenue in Squantum. Those streets will remain unchanged, Shea said.

Shea noted that all of the streets that were renamed were not only less populated than their similarly-named counterparts, but also had been established more recently in the city. The clerk said that the city felt that renaming the streets that were both smaller and newer seemed the fairest way of handling the situation.

Shea added that while Gordon Street in North Quincy is "a little bigger" than Gordon Street in West Quincy, the rest of the streets that remained the same are considerably larger than their renamed counterparts. In fact, Washington Street on the Quincy-Milton line has only two homes in Quincy and Bayview Avenue in Germantown has only one house, he said.

The clerk also said that while Bay View Avenue in Houghs Neck had technically a different name than that of Bayview Avenue in Germantown before the latter was renamed, a change still had to be made in that instance because the E911 computers are unable to differentiate between two streets in that particular situation.

Data Processing Director Robert Brennan told the council that the similarly-named streets have caused some confusion in the past. He recalled one instance where a firefighter responding to a call about a fire on Gordon Street asked the dispatcher, "Gordon Street, where?"

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said that in a similar emergency involving his grandmother's house on Ocean Street in Squantum, those responding to the situation accidentally "went to the wrong street (Ocean Street in Atlantic)."

before the council's vote, five residents spoke in favor of the streets being renamed, citing problems with their mail as well as similar concerns regarding emergency situations as their primary seasons. An additional 36 people signed in favor of the new street names.

No one spoke or signed in opposition.

The only amendment to the city's name changes came from Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson. While Shea said prior to the public hearing that the city proposed changing Bayview Avenue in Germantown to Bayview Court, Kolson suggested that the street be renamed Bay Court instead. Kolson said that because that street, as well as Bay View Avenue in Houghs Neck, are both in his ward, he wanted the two names to be as different as possible.

Asked by Councillor Michael Cheney how people living on the renamed streets would deal with the mail situation at their new addresses, Shea said "the post office will make an adjustment until everyone else does."

Shea added that although the street names have been changed, the numbers on the houses will remain the same.

WHEN HEARTBURN HITS AT NIGHT

For some people, it is as predictable as an alarm clock and just as irritating. Nighttime heartburn can be caused by such things as alcohol, smoking, and spicy foods, buy if it occurs on a regular basis, a check of bedtime medications might be in order. Many common drugs can irritate the stomach, including tetracycline and other antibiotics, slow-release potassium, and aspirin. When the body is horizontal, as at night in bed, such irritants are able to move easily up into the esophagus. If it turns out that drugs are indeed the culprits in cases of nighttime heartburn, the solution may be as easy as drinking an extra glass of water or eating a couple of soda crackers when taking medications.

P.S. If you experience pain sever enough to wake you up, contact your doctor as soon as possible.

Since smoking is a culprit in heartburn, think of this as yet another reason to kick the habit—it's the greatest gift you can give yourself and you loved ones this holiday season. If you'd like information on quitting smoking, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have parking at our office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Dear Santa

DEAR SANTA:

Here I am again, Santa . . . late as usual.

I know I keep promising to write sooner and I really keep trying to . . . honest. But the time just zips by. You know what they say about time flying when you're having fun. Well, sometimes it's fun.

Santa, some of these gifts this year are being asked for in fun and a few in a serious vein.

Please do your best, Santa, to get the following to the following:

TOM GALVIN and CHUCK D'APRIX, a huge retail anchor store and a place to put it in downtown Quincy . . . Quincy, Ill. Mayor CHARLES SHOLZ, a standing invitation to visit our Quincy anytime, especially during a water shortage. (Rain just seems to follow him.) . . . SEAN BARRY and CHRISTINE CEDRONE, one extra vote. Okay, Santa, so they would still be deadlocked, so give City Clerk JOE SHEA a coin to toss to break the tie and save the city the cost of a special election . . . Santa, you can also toss in a razor and shaving cream for Joe . . . Mayor JAMES SHEETS, a power lawn mower for his "Greener, Cleaner Quincy," a continued firm grip at the city's helm, and a "Well Done" for hauling that monstrosity called the Constitution Sculpture away from City Hall. (Instead of Freedom Park, though we still think it should have been exiled to the waterfront as a seawall reinforcement.) . . . TIM CAHILL and MIKE CHENEY, the politically right time to run for mayor which might be after SHEETS leaves office . . . Former School Committeeman FRANK ANSELMO, sturdy at the age 95, another five gallon jug from the Fountain of Youth . . . Quincy Council on Aging Director BRIAN BUCKLEY, a photo of himself with Bill or Hilary Clinton for next year's Christmas card . . . TED DeCRISTOFARO, a shotgun with which to stand guard over the Granite Ball at the Fore River Rotary. (But make the ammo blanks, Santa, because one of these days we are going to move it to City Hall where it used to be and really belongs...) . . . Police Chief FRANK MULLEN, a year without violence . . . Fire Chief TOM GORMAN, a year without a fatal fire . . . New School Committee member JOANN BRAGG, a gold star on her first year performance . . . THE YAKOO, a final victory over his critics who don't seem to know a true symbol of respect and school spirit when they see one . . . BOB DENVIR, happy retirement and an old parking meter to remind him of all the alibis he heard as city parking clerk . . . CHUCK PHELAN and MICHELLE LYDON, a perfect day when they wed Sept. 9 at St. Ann's Church . . . BRUCE AYERS and LARRY CHRETIEN, who will be the remaining bachelors in the City Council, an arrow from Dan Cupid. And may they be as lucky as Chuck in finding the right girl . . . MARY COLLINS, a political comeback . . . TOM FABRIZIO, a little hocus-pocus to make that tower disappear . . . BILL MAC MULLEN, the USS SALEM all wrapped up in ribbons so he can get on with the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard . . . EILEEN COHEN, a better 1994 than 1993. (Don't give up kid.)

. . . Retired Quincy Sun sports editor TOM SULLIVAN, many, many happy years of taking it easy . . . CHARLIE SWEENY, the former School Committeeman and West Quincy Rose King, a super-duper set of handyman tools. (Betty will show you how to use them, Charlie) . . . Former Mayor FRANK McCAULEY, a new pair of Reeboks. He keeps wearing them out in the Boston Marathon-route Jimmy Fund Walk. He has raised $32,000 the past five years through sponsors...(If you would still like to donate to this worthy cause you can send a check made out to the Jimmy Fund, c/o Frank McCauley, 210 Manet Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.) . . . JAY ASHER, JOHN NICOLSON, ROY LIND, JOE CATALANO and the rest of the gang at WJDA, a "well done" as one of the finest local radio stations in the country . . . Ditto for JOHN KING, STEVE FARQUHAR, ED FIDDLER and the rest of the Continental Cablesystems staff for one of the top cable outlets anywhere . . . Former State Senator PAUL HAROLD, just back from teaching at University College Cork in Ireland, an appointment in the U.S. State Department . . . State Senator MICHAEL MORRISSEY, a Christmas card from Senate President BILLY BULGER . . . BILLY BULGER, a Christmas card from MIKE MORRISSEY . . . FR. WILLIAM MC CARTHY, pastor of St. John's Church, a big "Thank you" for all the nice things—big and small—he has done through the years . . . Ditto to Quincy Court Clerk Magistrate ARTHUR TOBIN, who also quietly does a lot of nice things that only those he does it for know . . . PETER and BILL O'CONNELL a multi-million dollar building to build...in Quincy of course.

And to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas and a Happy, Healthy New Year.

Card-Key System Planned For Senior Housing Security

In an effort to boost security at city senior housing facilities, Quincy Housing Authority Director John "Jake" Comer is hoping to implement a new com-puterized card-key system at the sites.

Comer said as The Sun went to press Tuesday he planned to present a proposal for the system at the QHA board meeting Tuesday night. He added that if he receives approval for the proposal, he will put out an invitation to bid for the service to be installed at O'Brien Towers in Germantown as soon as possible.

Comer said he got the idea for the service from a friend at the Brockton Housing Authority and said it has worked well in that community. He said while the system would undoubtedly help boost security at the Quincy senior sites, it would come at no small cost.

"It's not an inexpensive thing," said Comer, who added that it would cost around $50,000 to have the service installed at O'Brien Towers alone. He also said, however, that once the computerized system is initially installed, it would cost less to install it in other buildings.

Comer explained that when a person uses one of the card-keys, he or she is permanently placed into the computer system by name, face and other personal details. The card-keys cannot be copied the way regular keys can, he added, and can only be used by the card-key owner.

Comer said if the system is installed and works out well at O'Brien Towers, he would also have it implemented at Sawyer Towers and Pagnano Towers, both in Quincy Point, Tobin Towers in Wollaston and Drohan Apartments in West Quincy.

QHA and city officials have installed security guards and made other attempts to boost security at the senior facilities since the Sept. 17 rape of a 76-year-old woman in her apartment at O'Brien Towers.

Beechwood Center's Fees 'Competitively Priced'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I feel I must respond to a letter published in the Dec. 2 issue of The Quincy Sun signed by Kevin Foley.

I am one of the "original architects of Beechwood", unlike Mr. Foley. His letter was filled with what I will charitably call glaring inaccuracies and exaggerated misinformation. It is unfortunate to see someone attempt to undermine and destroy any worthwhile and successful organization- especially someone who himself has gained from the organization.

Beechwood's mission initially, and always, has been much more than "to save a school from disrepair." We have, for 12 years, provided for Quincy a multi-purpose community center committed to life-long intergenerational learning. Beechwood is a private, non-profit citywide Center founded upon an expectation of community participation and membership. It is 97% self-supporting, funded through program revenues and private grants and donations, not through City tax dollars.

We are challenged to continually offer quality programming and services not provided elsewhere in the community. Our programs are all "no" or "low"cost to participants. Fees, when necessary, are always competitively priced. If Beechwood's services were not needed and well used by Quincy residents we would not be in operation today. We offer many services and programs that are free to participants.

I am proud to have been a founder and member of the Beechwood Community Life Center Board of Directors since its inception 12 years ago. BCLC has served thousands of persons over the years through commitment, devotion and the unique labor of hundreds of staff and volunteers.

Beechwood is governed by a volunteer Board of Directors composed of intelligent and competent community leaders who have done and continue to do their best to make Beechwood a good neighbor in the city of Quincy. We are appreciative of citywide support from increasing numbers of members, participants and volunteers. We look to the future with a continuing commitment to serve and work "in partnership" with the city of Quincy.

Remember The Pets At Local Food Banks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently a member wrote me the following letter. It was so eloquent I will let is speak for itself.

"When people run out of food and go to the local food bank for much needed help, they are going for the family. However, many of these families have pets. If there isn't enough money for food for the family, many animals are abandoned. A tragedy!

"Please drop off a few cans of food or a box or biscuits along with your other donations. Many abandoned animals free or starve--eventually many are found and destroyed. Your understanding and compassion will be greatly appreciated. The owner will thank you and the pets will sleep with a full tummy, in a warm home with fresh water. The unconditional love of a pet for its owner is reward enough."

I urge all who care about our animal friends to think about such a donation, especially in these cold winter months and in these bad economic times when so many are doing without. And thanks to member Almira Sinopoli for reminding all of us what this season is all about.

Frightened By Cutbacks Of LPNs From Hospital Budgets

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Licensed practical nurses have been cut from most hospital budgets. In my opinion this has impacted greatly in the medical care patients receive. L.P.N.'s receive 12-15 months of intense training. They work closely with physicians and registered nurses to provide hands on medical care and comfort to patients at the bedside.

Registered nurses, also hit by budget cuts, are spread thin throughout various departments. Hospitals are now staffed with minimally trained medical personnel called nursing techs.

This letter is not written to attack, but to point out a potentially dangerous situation. Nursing techs are given the responsibility, with minimal medical training, of caring for the sick and dying. I have been an L.P.N. for 31 years and recently a patient, who felt totally stripped of her confidence in a hospital and its staff. If it were not for my own professional training, I shudder to think of the outcome of my post surgical care.

Techs, through no fault of their own, have no conception of danger signs. They are not allowed access to patients medical records and as a result have no idea of the patient's total medical history. R.N.'s cannot be on top of it all, super human they are not. Techs, formerly aides, used to work along side the R.N. and L.P.N. but are now hired in place of them.

Cross-training has been implemented due to staff shortage. Nurses are given crash courses in pediatrics, orthopedics, maternity and etc., taking away from their expertise in specialty units.

I am aware that budgets need trimming, but the people let go are the ones most qualified and skilled in caring for your loved ones. She was the well-seasoned nurse, who holds longevity in health care. These nurses employed longer, earned higher salaries, and accumulated more benefits. Financially they were the most logical choice for administrators to lay off. Who pays the price? The patient no longer receiving skilled nursing care!

As a nurse, these changes raise many concerns. As a patient, it was frightening.

Christmas Eve Promenade Draws 10,000

Dec. 23-29, 1939
54 Years Ago

More than 10,000 people strolled up and down a darkened Hancock St. singing carols in the city's first Christmas Eve promenade in downtown Quincy.

Vehicular traffic was blocked at Washington and School Sts, and street and store lights were turned off leaving only the colored lights of sidewalk Christmas trees.

The Granite Trust Co. bell ringers gave a special yuletide program on the bandstand on Chestnut St.

Mayor Thomas Sm Burgin called the promenade "one of the most beautiful activities ever held in our city."

Reddish bronze Christmas bells grouped over the decorated doorway at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan of 8 Samoset Ave. won the $5 first prize for decorations offered by the Merrymount Association.

"Nowhere in Quincy have more beautifully decorated homes been seen during the current holiday season than in Merrymount." said a member of the prize committee.

Christmas babies were born at City Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. John Balducci of 30 Roberts St., Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Schofield of 113 Butler Rd., and Mr. and Mrs. John Melanson of 96 Montclair Ave.

PARKING LOT HAILED

City Councillor Aldo Della Chiesa called the purchase of the municipal parking area to the west of Hancock St. between Granite and School Sts. "one of the most progressive steps the City Council has ever taken."

"I have been through the parking area many times recently," he said, " and observed with satisfaction the hundreds of cars which fill the spaces there."

Concert Dec. 30 At Armory

Miss Massachusetts, Five Bands To Perform At First Rock '94

Five music bands and a singing performance by Miss Massachusetts will highlight the second annual First Rock '94 Concert set for Thursday, Dec. 30 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Quincy National Guard Armory, 1000 Hancock St.

Billed as an alcohol and drug free Pre-New Year's Eve Rock Concert for young people, the event will be hosted and chaperoned by parents and community activists. Proceeds from the event will benefit the establishment of youth centers in Quincy.

The bands and special guest Ellen-Marie Fitzgerald, the reigning Miss Massachusetts, have donated their services to the event.

Fitzgerald will sing her rendition of Mariah Carey's song "Vision of Love" and two new songs soon to be released. She will also pose for photos with her fans for a small fee which will be donated to the youth center effort.

Featured bands are Last Cry, Avatar Blue, Jive A. Slippers, Canine Guru and Covenant.

ELLEN-MARIE FITZGERALD
'Miss Massachusetts'

Last Cry's single "In the Name of Love" was on top of WCGY's radio charts for more than 13 weeks. The band is considered by some reviewers as a band on the rise.

Avatar Blue, a Boston Rock/Hip Hop band, was voted "Best Hip Hop Band" in a 1993 WFNX Readers' Poll. The band recently signed a record deal with Polygram Records.

Jive A. Slipper, a jazz-funk band made up of students from the Berklee School of Music, is making its debut at First Rock '94. Other first time performers will be Canine Guru, a metal/funk band and Covenant, group of students from North Quincy High School's creative arts program.

Tickets are $5 in advance and $10 at the door. Tickets are available at Jimmy Jay Music, 690 Hancock St., Wollaston; the South Shore YMCA at 479-8500, through the student government councils at Quincy College, North Quincy and Quincy High School; at all middle schools and by calling JoAnn Bragg at 471-3822 or Gini Sindelar at 328-0677.

The concert is not associated with nor sanctioned by the city's First Night Celebration Committee. Admission buttons to First Night Dec. 31 will not allow concert goers into the armory Dec. 30. A separate ticket, available at the aforementioned outlets, is needed for admission into the concert.

Produced by Virginia Sindelar, the concert is co-sponsored by the Committee to Establish Youth Centers chaired by JoAnn Bragg. The event for young people will be supervised by Quincy and State Police, the National Guard and parents.

The project has also been endorsed by Quincy's Police Athletic League, Quincy Citywide Parents' Council, Quincy public schools, Mayor James Sheets, State Rep. Ron Mariano with assistance from the Pepsi-Cola Company.

RAY WHITEHOUSE

QHS Selects November STAR Award Winners

Quincy High School announces its November STAR Award winners.

Susan Creedon, David Gunther, Danielle Perry and biology instructor Ray Whitehouse.

Creedon, a grade 11 student, is a member of the Student Council, Drama Club and Quincy High Band. Susan also serves in the Student Union, the swim team, is an associate member of the School Committee and is in the Foreign Language Honor Society.

Gunther, a 10th grader, was chose for this honor by his teachers. He is both a diligent and inquisitive student.

David's hardwork earned him academic honors and he made the Distinction Honor Roll last term. He is also a member of the basketball and baseball teams.

Perry, a senior, is secretary to the National Honor Society and captain of the volleyball team. In addition, Danielle is a member of the Prom Committee, vice president of the Foreign Language Honor Society, and participates in both the Q-Club and varsity softball.

Whitehouse is recognized for his efforts in the biology classroom. He is a favorite among students and teachers alike for presentingenjoyable yet challenging classes. His students records in advanced placement and biology achievement exams are exceptional.

Whitehouse has inspired many students to pursue a college curriculum concentrating on biological sciences.

Three students and one faculty member are chosen monthly for the STAR awards.

Children's Sleepover Dec. 31 At South Shore YMCA

The South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., will hold its third annual New Year's Eve Sleepover for children ages 6 to 12 Friday, Dec. 31 at 7 p.m. through Saturday, Jan. 1 at 10 a.m.

The event will provide the youth of the South Shore with a safe, fun and memorable New Year celebration free from alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

The staff will supervise activities for the children throughout the night. These activities consist of swimming, arts and crafts, movies, games, a scavenger hunt, and snacks. Finally the night will culminate in a midnight celebration with music, party hats, and noise makers to ring in the new year.

Last year's overnight attracted over 100 children from the South Shore area.

The fee is $18.00 per child ($14.00 for additional family members), immediate family only.

For more information, call 479-8500.

11 Residents, Merchants Oppose Home Depot Plan

to 9 p.m. to extended hours of 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., as well as add five parking spaces, Fabrizio said.

Although the proponents of the plan said it would be beneficial to the city, those who attended the public hearing disagreed. Several merchants from the area, including Common Market Restaurant owner John McDonald, said an expanded Home Depot would discourage competition and drive smaller businesses from the neighborhood.

"Competition made all of us great, and there's no competition out there right now," he said. "We feel it's big enough."

Cindy Leahy of 85 Rogers St. said she has experienced problems in the past with noise coming from the intercom at the store's garden center. She said that while the thought of the expansion itself does not bother her, she wondered if the store could continue to control the noise situation there with the increased hours it is asking for.

"I have my doubts about that," she said.

Fabrizio said that a recently-formed Home Depot Monitoring Committee will hold a community meeting on the issue before the council takes any action.

CHRISTMAS IN CHURCH

lights the way to the spirit and brotherhood of Christmas

The Christmas Story

Luke, 2, 1-14. At that time, there went forth a decree from Caesar Augustus that a census of the whole world should be taken. The first census took place while Cyrinus was governor of Syria.

And all were going each to his own town, to register.

And Joseph also sent from Galilee out of the town of Nazareth into Judea to the town of David, which is called Bethlehem - because he was of the house and family of David - to register, together with Mary his espoused wife, who was with child.

And it came to pass while they were there, that the days for her to be delivered were fulfilled.

And she brought forth her first-born Son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a Manger, because there was no room for them in the Inn.

And there were shepherds in the same district living in the fields and keeping watch over their flock by night.

And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of God shone round them, and they feared exceedingly.

And the angel said to them, "Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy which shall be to all the people; for today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you, Who is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign to you; you will find an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger,"

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will."

St. Joseph's Parish, 550 Washington St., Quincy Point, will host several special celebrations for Christmas that will include music, caroling, congregational singing, bell-ringing and brass ensemble with choir singing.

Worshippers are encouraged to bring bells of any kind to all Masses. Among the highlights of the services will be a Midnight Mass Saturday preceded by a carol cantara by the adult parish choir Friday at 11:30 p.m. with the Seaside Brass Group to accompany the choir and congregation.

Masses will be celebrated at the following times:

Dec. 24: 4 p.m., with Fr. Daniel Riley presiding and congregational singing; 5:30 p.m., special Children's Mass with Fr. Daniel Graham presiding and singing by the parish school choir.

Dec. 25: Midnight Mass, concelebrated by the entire parish staff; 9:30 a.m., Fr. Jack Roche presiding; 11:30 a.m., with Fr. Riley presiding and Deacon John Jennette giving the homily.

A handicap access ramp and handicap parking are available at the side entrance of the church.

Quincy Point Congregational

Quincy Point Congregational Church, Washington St. and Southern Artery, will hold a Christmas Eve Service Friday, Dec. 24 at 7:30 p.m.

The service will begin with the lighting of the Christ Candle by the pastors, Revs. Fred and Carol Atwood-Lyon. It will conclude with the lighting of candles and the singing of Christmas carols. Sanctuary decoration was done by members of the Altar and Flower Guild directed by Carol McGhee.

On Sunday, worship will be held at 10 a.m. Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon will preach on "When Christmas Makes All The Difference In The World." Rev. Carol Atwood-Lyon will serve as liturgist.

Sunday's service will include carols by the congregation and anthems by the Chancel Choir directed by Dr. Herman Weiss, church organist.

For more information about church services, call 773-6424.

St. Chrysostom's Church

St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St., Wollaston, will conduct three Christmas services.

On Christmas Eve, a Festal Sing-Along will begin at 6:45 p.m. followed by a festive Holy Eucharist service at 7:30 p.m.

On Christmas Day, a Holy Eucharist service will start at 10 a.m.

Covenant Congregational

A candlelight service will be held Christmas Eve at 11 p.m. at Covenant Congregational Church, Whitwell and Granite Sts. Rev. LuAnn Johnson, pastor, will lead the service, which will feature readings by members of the congregation.

Richard Smith, Minister of Music, will direct and accompany the choir in three Christmas anthems. Soprano soloist, Luisa Dano, will sing an introit and "O Holy Night."

On Sunday, the worship service will begin at 10:45 and will continue with the celebration of Christmas. A member of the congregation will read the Christmas story.

There will be no Sunday School classes, but an attended nursery is available for children age four and younger during the worship service.

Immediately following the service, coffee will be served in the fellowship hall downstairs. The Dano family will host.

For more information about any of the church's activities, call the church office at 479-5728.

Community Christmas Dinner At Central Baptist

Fr. Bill's Place will sponsor a Community Christmas Dinner Saturday, Dec. 25 at Central Baptist Community Center, Washington St., Quincy Center, from noon to 3 p.m.

The dinner is free and all are welcome.

Shut-ins may call ahead to reserve a home delivered meal. For more information, or to reserve a meal, call Fr. Bill's Place at 770-3314.

Feast Of Lights Service At Sacred Heart Jan. 9

The Inter-Church Council of Wollaston-North Quincy will sponsor the annual Feast of Lights Epiphany Service Sunday, Jan. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart Church, Hancock St., North Quincy.

Rev. Richard Murphy of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Wollaston will preach. The service will feature special music provided by a combined choir of all ICC member churches and a presentation staged by ICC member clergy and congregation members.

A collation will follow.

Ayers Handicap Courtesy Transportation To Christmas Services

Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, Inc. of North Quincy will provide courtesy transportation for any physically challenged individual wishing to attend Christmas services at their place of worship.

Handicap equipped vans will be available by calling Bruce Ayers at 328-0102 for reservations.

Those requesting the service should call ahead for proper scheduling.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church announces its worship services for Christmas Eve and Sunday, Dec. 26.

On Christmas Eve, a candlelighting service will begin at 11 p.m. It will include the sacrament of baptism, receiving of church members, and music.

Dr. Peter V. Corea will preach a sermon entitled, "When the Real Christmas Begins."

On Sunday, Dec. 26, Rev. M. Alicia Corea will give the sermon "When the Song of the Angels is Stilled" at the 9 a.m. worship service.

Coffee hour will begin at 9:45 p.m.

At the 10:30 a.m. service, Dr. Peter Corea will preach on "Hope for the New Year."

ST. JOSEPH'S SCHOOL students, from left, Danny Giannotti, Kellie McNamara, Kacy Cerasoli, Alisa Haidul, Kelly Cunningham and Laura Feeley put finishing touches on the Christmas tree at the altar of St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point.

Red Cross Seeks Toys

The American Red Cross of Mass Bay Holiday Assistance Program is seeking toy donations for children newborn to age 12.

This year the number of requests for toys in the Quincy area nearly tripled. Last year the program served 522 children; this year there were 1415 requests.

For many of the children, a toy from the Red Cross is the only Christmas gift they receive.

For more information on how to donate toys, call the Red Cross at 623-0033 ext. 297.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

Third graders in Quincy Public Schools again this year were invited to submit articles for the Christmas, Hanukkah and New Year's holiday season.

The theme for their article is: "If I could have one wish come true this holiday season it would be..."

The Sun is happy to share these young thoughts with you at this season. Publishing these articles has become a tradition that all of us at The Sun look forward to each year and, we hope, you do, too.

We want to thank Dr. Janet DiTullio, Director of Curriculum in the Quincy Public School System and classroom teachers for their cooperation and assistance.

We were again swamped with entries and because of space limitations we regret we cannot print every article submitted. There were so many others that were worthy of publication, too.

To all who participated we extend season's greetings and a happy, healthy, prosperous New Year.

Thank you all, most sincerely.

It would be that they have a cure for AIDS and cancer. I wish that because lots of people are dying from those diseases.

Patrick O'Brien
Parker

It would be that my mom would be home on Christmas night and not working. We would be able to spend more time together.

Lauren Struzik
Squantum

It would be to save the whales. I think everyone should stop hunting whales. If my wish comes true, I would be happy because whales are smart, intelligent and interesting animals. A lot of whales are dying and they are a part of the ocean.

Sean Drews
Squantum

It would be to win the hockey championship.

Mike Donelin
Parker

It would be to help my sister in school.so she can do well on tests. Kerri tries very hard.

Courtney Ward
Bernazzani

It would be to help people that are homeless to get food and clothes to live. I would like to help people in every country.

Matthew Peters
Bernazzani

It would be for people to give food and clothes to the homeless. The people would give the homeless seeds to plant grass.

Rebecca Anglehart
Bernazzani

It would be for everybody to be happy and have a great life. People are important and they only have one life. I like to see people happy. I hate to see people fighting with each other because they can get hurt.

Lan Ho
Squantum

It would be to have a new, live cat. The reason I can't have one is my mother is allergic to them and now you know why I can't have a cat.

Tony Martin
Squantum

It would be for a turtle. I want one because my turtle ran away. My Mom said I might find him, but I never found him.

Allie Winderl
Bernazzani

It would be for my aunt and uncle to move back to Massachusetts. I cannot see them a lot. I miss them. I haven't seen them since last summer when my family went to visit them.

Sarah Gregory
Parker

It would be for peace on earth so there is no fighting and nobody would get hurt. Everyone would be friends.

Timothy Coughlin
Bernazzani

It would be to have a dog because they love you and help people that can't see and that have other problems.

Michael Carey
Squantum

It would be to have a baby sister because I am alone. My big brother does not care about me. My mother goes to work. That is why I want a little sister.

Lillian Lee
Squantum

It would be for the homeless to find a home. The reason why is that I feel bad for them. Some people walk right by them without thinking about them.

Stephanie Amate
Bernazzani

It would be for $100,000 so I could go to Disneyland and get homeless people a home.

Nicholas Jacobson
Bernazzani

It would be for no more wars and for world peace. Too many people get hurt in wars.

Kevin Smith
Bernazzani

It would be for all of the boys and girls to get what they wanted. I wish to have world peace and for the poor people to have a home and some food.

Sarah Zenga
Bernazzani

It would be for a friend..A friend is special because you can not get a friend always. That is why a friend is so very special.

Ryan Fandetti
Squantum

It would be that everybody lived in peace. So we would not have any more wars and nobody would get hurt.

Marc Bertrand
Bernazzani

It would be that the ozone hole would close up. Then no animals that live near it will die.

Norman Yuen
Bernazzani

It would be to help people in Illinois. I would help make new houses for them. I would help them and I would go there too.

Kristine Nelson
Bernazzani

It would be for people to stop polluting. Our world is being destroyed. Everyone pollutes and they shouldn't. I don't want to live in pollution and if my wish comes true, we would have a clean world.

Ashley Morten
Squantum

It would be for more friends. I picked this wish because I'm kind of lonely. It's important, because I have very little friends. If my wish came true I would be very joyful, because I could play with my new friend and we could do lots of things together. We could talk together and work together and have lots of fun.

Nina Nguyen
Squantum

It would be for a bunny because I would be able to take care of him.

Kenny Hsu
Parker

It would be for an older brother. He could take good care of me. My sister wouldn't bother me anymore. My brother could help me with my chores.

Billy Delong
Parker

It would be for me to have better luck because I have bad luck!

Kevin Phung
Bernazzani

It would be for a new book for Christmas. I like to read. When I am not busy, I would like to read a book.

Jack Wu
Parker

It would be that there were no more wars.

Brendan Conley
Atherton Hough

It would be that the homeless would get at least one present each.

Lisa Turowski
Atherton Hough

It would be that the people who are sick could get better because other people need them.

Kellie Nee
Atherton Hough

It would be for doctors to find a cure for blindness.

Patrick Kelley
Atherton Hough

It would be for no more wars.

Shaun Gibbons
Atherton Hough

It would be for the crime to stop.

Melissa Gage
Atherton Hough

It would be that if someone in my family gets coal in their stocking, I'd get a chance to buy them a present.

Randall Jacobs
Atherton Hough

It would be that the doctors find a cure for my Aunt Joanne's disease because she is always in the hospital.

Robert Wright

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

It would be for people not to pollute the earth.
Steven Crispo
Atherton Hough

It would be for people to put out more trash cans. Cleaning the earth is important for everyone.
Katherine
Atherton Hough

It would be for people who don't have homes to get shelter, food and gifts.
Jason Bevacqua
Atherton Hough

It would be to help the sick children in the hospital and help the homeless.
John Morris
Atherton Hough

It would be for peace on Earth, and to have my grandpa.
Melissa Clark
Point Webster

It would be that there will be no more violence in our neighborhood.
Viviane Freitas
Point Webster

It would be to make the poor people have some money so they can buy food.
Melanie Wolfe
Bernazzani

It would be that everybody in the world would burn knives and anything sharp.
Christine Sullivan
Point Webster

It would be for the poor and the homeless to have money so they can buy food so they can't die.
Mark Dondero
Bernazzani

It would be for peace and that there will be no bad people to kidnap you so children won't be afraid of strangers, robbers and killers.
Jacqueline Leung
Bernazzani

It would be for my grandmother to feel better and for the violence to stop.
Patricia Walker
Point Webster

It would be for my parents to win the lottery, so we can buy a house.
Anthony Sandonato
Point Webster

It would be that there would be no violence on T.V. because that's where people get their ideas to kill people.
Andrew Picard
Point Webster

It would be $1,000 because I'd get a new house and toys.
Robin Gullins
Parker

It would be that everyone had food and shelter.
Robert Lyons
Parker

It would be to save the poor. I would give them clothes, food and toys.

OBITUARIES

Doreen C. Barrett, 47

Worked At Merrymount School

A funeral service for Doreen C. (Tretheway) Barrett, 47, of Quincy, was held Dec. 18 in Bethany Congregational Church.

Mrs. Barrett died Dec. 15 after a long bout with cancer.

She was a secretary's assistant for eight years at Merrymount Elementary School.

Born in Quincy, she was a lifelong resident and a 1963 graduate of Quincy High School.

She was a charter member of Friends for a Better Quincy High School, a former officer and coach of Quincy Youth Soccer and was coach of the Koch Club, Little League Baseball. She also served as treasurer of the Quincy High School Hockey Boosters Club.

A past president of the Merrymount School Parent-Teacher Organization, she was a former officer of both the Central Middle School PTO and the Quincy High School Parents Advisory Council.

She is survived by her husband, J. Christopher Barrett; a son, Steven V. Barrett of Quincy; two daughters, Nancy A. Barrett and Christine Barrett, both of Quincy; her stepfather, Clifford W. Evers of Quincy; a brother and sister, James W. Tretheway of Quincy and Judith M. Fox of Wallingford, Conn., her husband's mother, Delia M. (DeCristofaro) Barrett of Quincy; and many nieces and nephews. She was the daughter of the late Reginald and Doris T. (Panepinto) Tretheway-Evers.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to a memorial fund in her name, 85 Clay St., Quincy, MA 02170.

Henry A. Pompeo, 85

Retired Construction Co. Owner

A funeral Mass for Henry A. Pompeo, 85, of Hingham, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) in St. John's Church.

Mr. Pompeo died Dec. 17 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

He was owner and operator of Shawmut Construction Co. in Stoughton for many years before his retirement in 1973.

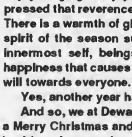
Born in Quincy, he lived there most of his life and was a member of the Quincy Elks. He also lived in Cohasset before moving to Hingham 10 years ago.

Husband of the late Margaret E. (Magura) Pompeo, he is survived by a son, Paul Pompeo of Stoughton; a daughter, Loretta Whelton of Quincy; seven grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St.

Donations may be made to the Massachusetts chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, 400-1 Totten Pond Rd., Waltham, MA 02154.



SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Christmas is one of the busiest and happiest times of the year for millions of Christians throughout the world. Gifts are exchanged and Christmas cards exchanged, expressing sentiments of joy, goodwill, health and happiness... A typical card may carry this message: "Love was born at Christmas... We wish you love and joy at this beautiful season." ... The custom of exchanging Christmas gifts began, we are told, in memory of the gifts the Wise Men brought the Christ child when He was born in Bethlehem.

Christians feel reverence for that momentous event that took place in Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago. People enjoy singing the joyous and holy carols that have expressed that reverence in song down through the ages... There is a warmth of giving and the thrill of receiving. The spirit of the season surrounds us and reaches into our innermost self, beings out hidden feelings of joy and happiness that causes us to think: "Peace on Earth, goodwill towards everyone."

Yes, another year has come and gone ... almost!

And so, we at Deware, wish you the best. We wish you a Merry Christmas and a New Year filled with happiness, health and prosperity ...

Ruth F. Burke, 91

Mother Of Former District Attorney

A funeral Mass for Ruth F. (Joyce) Burke, 91, of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in St. Ann's Church.

Mrs. Burke died Dec. 16 at her daughter's home in Florida.

She was an avid sports fan dating back to when her son, Atty. George Burke of Quincy, was an All-American basketball player at the University of Massachusetts and was drafted by the Boston Celtics in 1956. Mr. Burke also is the former District Attorney of Norfolk County and was a state representative, Quincy city councillor, acting mayor and City Council president.

At the age of 90, Mrs. Burke was believed to be the oldest fan to attend Boston College's bowl game in Tampa, Fla. last year. She also attended the Boston College Cotton Bowl game in 1985 and planned to attend the Carquest Bowl this coming New Year's Day.

Ten members of her family received degrees from Boston College.

Wife of the late John F. Burke, she is also survived by another son, Dr. John F. Burke of Cleveland, Ohio; three daughters, Joyce Welch of Needham, Marion Burke Dick of Quincy and Kathleen Burke of Edgewater, Fla.; 21 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Edward J. Schell, 79

Former Shipyard Machinist

A funeral Mass for Edward J. Schell, 79, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church.

Mr. Schell died Dec. 16 at Quincy Hospital.

He worked as a machinist-mechanic at the Fore River shipyard for 10 yards before his retirement in 1992.

Born in Boston, he attended Mechanic Arts High School there. He lived in Quincy for 40 years.

He was a member of the Knights of Columbus in Jamaica Plain.

He is survived by his wife, Louise M. Restaurant Expansion On Sea St. Raises Need For Traffic Study

By LISA CONNELL

Grumpy White's restaurant.was granted a license to expand at Tuesday's Licensing Board meeting which also resulted in plans for a study of traffic flow on heavily travelled Sea Street.

The restaurant, located at 211 Sea St., will increase to 160 seats and there will be more than sufficient parking to meet the seating requirement, " said Quincy Attorney Carl Johnson, counsel for the restaurant manager, Robert White.

A landmark since the 1940's, Grumpy White's, by adding 1390 square feet, plan to build an entry vestibule and remove the bar in front of the restaurant. The kitchen area will also be enlarged. There will be no change in the common-victualler license or any other licenses White's now holds.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter V. Kolson and property abutter Our Lady of Good Counsel Church support the family-style restaurant's expansion by restauranteur White on the stating that increased parking in White's lot will not adversely affect property or right of way in the neighborhood.

Neighborhood group Merrymount Association also backs the expansion.

White plans to expand the restaurant 20 feet in the direction of church property.

Structural changes to update the premises as required by the American Disabilities Act and bring the property in line with neighborhood wishes will take place: ten feet of green space will further separate the property from the street; floodlights will be adjusted to avoid any extreme glare or brightness on an abutter's property; 44 spaces will be allotted for parking, with handicapped parking included in that number; an enclosed dumpster will be relocated to the rear of the parking lot, away from the storm drain it previously rested near.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey and Police Chief Francis Mullen complimented quality and solid reputation that his operation has earned over the years.

Area resident Robert Keddy of 121 Narragansett Rd expressed concerns that the board was going to vote for the expansion without examining the traffic problems that currently make Sea St. one of the most densely traveled streets in the city.

"I've had trouble just getting out of the driveway. I don't have a problem with the restaurant but with abutters using White's restaurant for parking," said Keddy.

Mullen said Keddy's concerns were valid and "that as the city grew, so did [vehicular traffic on] Sea Street."

Keddy questioned if the volume of traffic that flows on Sea St. would be seriously examined and revised for the future.

"We will look into what Keddy mentions," Mullen said. He recommended that Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon study the traffic patterns and flow in the neighborhood.

Mullen, Mulvey and Johnson, all mentioned that Keddy's problems are not related to the restaurant at 211 Sea St. but to the area around the establishment.

White was praised by board members for letting others use his parking lot on needed occasion, such as for Sunday services or hockey rink parking from the church and skating rink nearby.

Mulvey also pointed out that while Grumpy White's could achieve a possible total occupancy of 172, they are increasing their seats by eight to a total of 160, below what they could do. Mulvey said this to highlight the good neighbor/ good businessman policies of White.

Still, Keddy remained unconvinced that 44 parking spaces could support Grumpy White's parking demands with the proposed expansion.

Barnaby's restaurant was also approved for a common victualler - all alcoholic beverage license.

Bernard Sharpe predicts a spring opening as construction will be completed over the next three to four months.Mullen said that the alleyway must be thoroughly lighted

Structural changes to be made as construction is underway include alleyway lighting, demolition of an old cab stand and installation of an enclosed dumpster.

Mullen also recommend that TIPS, an alcohol awareness program, be planned for Barnaby's employees.

Public Hearing Held On Home-Rule Petition

A public hearing on a home-rule petition for a special citywide School Committee election was held Tuesday at the State House in Boston.

Councillor Timothy Cahill introduced the petition at the City Council's Dec. 6 meeting because, he said, a special election would be the fairest way of breaking a tie in the recent Quincy School Committee recount.

Christine Cedrone edged Sean Barry in the Nov. 2 election, 5,716 to 5,708 votes, for the third and final available School Committee seat. A subsequent four-day recount resulted in a tie of 5,734 votes between the two candidates.

No details on the public hearing were available as The Quincy Sun went to press.

City Hall Holiday Hours

City Hall will close Thursday, Dec. 23 and Thursday, Dec. 30 at noon and will be closed all day Friday, Dec. 24. and Friday, Dec. 31.

Any licenses that expire Dec. 31 must be renewed before noon on Dec. 30.

First Baptist

First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave., will hold a Christmas Eve Service Friday, Dec. 24 at 7 p.m.

The service will be highlighted by a candlelight observance of the Lord's Supper and puppets created by the young people of the church group "The Way Up" in a show entitled "Some Christmas Pageantry." Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin and Dr. Grace Langevin will direct the use of the puppets.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. Richard C. Malmquist, will lead the service. Virginia Grimes will lead the Chancel Choir in a selection of special music.

During the observance of the Lord's Supper, children will go to fellowship hall with the Langevins for a special "Baby Jesus' Birthday Party."

On Sunday, worship will begin at 11 a.m. All are welcome.

The Holidays...

A time for joy, love, and family togetherness.
But this Season can be a sad time for those who have experienced the death of a loved one
Be in touch with family and friends whom you know will find this a difficult Season
Share the precious gift of friendship and fond memories with them.

Raiders Riding Two-Game Win Streak

By DAVID SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy boys basketball team, picked by many to challenge for the Old Colony League title, are 2-1 going into last night's (Wednesday) home game versus Silver Lake.

North will then travel to Boston Latin next Monday to play St. John's Prep in the opening round of the Scholastic Holiday Tournament. The championship and consolation games will be played next Tuesday.

On Monday, the Raiders posted their second straight win of the young season with a 66-58 victory at Barnstable. Coach Ted Stevenson credited the great defensive play of captain Jason McLeod, William Ngutter, Brad Gray and Jerry Fernandez.

North held a slim, 33-30 lead at halftime, but another strong offensive showing by McLeod, who scored 27 of his game high 29 points in the second half, put the game away for the Raiders.

Also making the scoring list were Brian Raftery with 10, Gray with 10, Ngutter with 7, and Adam DeBoer with 4 points.

North chalked up their first win last Friday night, a 59-43 decision over Falmouth. North took control early by outscoring the Clippers, 10-1, in the first six minutes, with captain Jason McLeod and Brian Raftery leading the way offensively. On defense, North protected their lead with the great play of Mike Santoro and William Ngutter, both with key steals. Raftery also contributed with a couple of blocked shots to stop the Falmouth threat.

Falmouth chipped away at the lead and with 3:00 to go in the half, took their first lead of the game, 20-18. North fought back and stayed close with a Brad Gray jumper with 20 seconds left, enabling North to trail by just three points at halftime, 26-23.

The second half was all North Quincy. Sparked by great offensive play by Raftery (14 of his 20 points in the second half) and McLeod (18 points), the Raiders went on an 11-2 scoring run to give themselves a 37-28 lead with nine minutes left. North maintained the lead and posted the victory, thanks in part to some great play off the bench, with Bob Johnston and George Wirtz making contributions.

"We really turned it up a notch on defense in the second half," said coach Ted Stevenson. "We gave them all kinds of trouble, and we got the ball to Jason on the inside and he put it home.

Fernandez (four points) and Jason Picardi (two points) also played well for North.

North opened the season with a 45-37 loss at Plymouth last Tuesday. McLeod led the scoring with 16 points, followed by Raftery with 10. North led for much of the game and took a 37-35 lead with 3:40 to go, but went scoreless the rest of the way.

Coach Stevenson has three assistant coaches this year. The are Jim Rendle, Jim Johnston and Paul Fitzpatrick.

Quincy Edged By B-R, 56-55

By KERRY BYRNE

Coming into the season, Quincy High basketball coach John Franceschini looked for his team to play a high speed, high pressure brand of basketball.

Three games into the season, they have not disappointed.

After splitting their first two games of the season, an opening day 57-49 loss to the Taunton Tigers, and a big 63-52 victory at Weymouth, the Presidents squared off against a powerful Bridgewater-Raynham squad Monday night.

The speed and tenacity of Quincy was in full effect as they fell just short, 56-55, in their battle against the Trojans.

Down 22-19 near the end of the first half, the Presidents went on an impressive 10-0 run to take a seemingly comfortable 29-22 lead going into halftime.

The first half catalyst was a ferocious defense which forced the highly touted Trojan half court offense out of sync.

Senior Jon Gangi scored the final four Quincy points with a free throw then a three-pointer. Another first half key for the Presidents was senior Brian McPartlin who was a vacuum off the offensive glass and who put up six hard earned points from inside the paint.

In the second half it looked like Quincy would run away with the game when Gangi made a steal off an inbound pass and broke down court for a lay-up to give Quincy a 39-28 lead.

But midway through the second half Bridgewater-Raynham begin to claw their way back. The key play of the game occurred when a Trojan hit a three pointer and got fouled on the play. The free throw brought the Trojans to within two, 41-39.

Six lead changes occurred during the final hectic minutes of the game. The Quincy defense continued to force turnovers as the Trojans tried to set up their vaunted half court game. Both teams went to the full court press on D, daring the other team to take the ball inside.

With just over two minutes left a Gangi free throw gave the Presidents a paper-thin 51-50 lead. On their next possession Bridgewater threw up an air ball from three-point land. Quincy caught the ball and called a time-out with 1:58 remaining.

On their next possession Quincy captain Tom Malvesti drew the foul and banged in two from the charity stripe. The Trojans were able to counter with a hoop of their own to bring them within one, 53-52.

With only 1:10 remaining Quincy captain Joe Kelly caught a pass and spun around a Bridgewater player into the paint where he leaned towards the hoop a hit a bank shot with defenders draped all over him. The huge basket seemed like it would be enough to secure the Quincy win.

However the Trojans ended the game with a field goal and two big free throws to give them a 56-55 lead and the victory.

"We did a great a job on the floor. It was our inability to hit the free throws which lost the game for us," said a disappointed Coach Franceschini after the game.

Indeed, it appeared that the Presidents outplayed and out-hustled what was suppose to be a superior Bridgewater group. The Presidents would have been able to put away the Trojans early had it not been for a slew of missed free throws, 16 in all.

"When you outplay a team like we did for 32 minutes you should be able to put them away. We handled their star Joe Rich, very well, we boxed out well, and played good D, but couldn't come away with the win," said the coach.

Playing solid ball for Quincy was captain Mike Bartlett, a returning starter from last years squad, and Harold Mortel who was coming off a huge game in the win over Weymouth.

Malvesti led the Quincy offensive attack with 13 points, 8 in the second half. McPartlin was next with 10 points off the bench. McPartlin looked impressive rebounding and scoring inside the paint and should be a force for Quincy all season. Also pitching in for Quincy was Joe Manton who had a clutch 3-pointer in the first half.

Despite the disappointing loss coach Franceschini, along with assistants Ray Papile and Mike Draicchio, looks for good things this year.

"There are no superstars on this team. We'll play as many as 10 deep, and will rely on speed and aggressiveness to make up for our lack of size." said Franceschini.

Quincy's next game is at Marshfield on Monday, Dec. 27. Their next home game will be played against Falmouth on Jan. 7.

Freshmen 1-2

The Quincy High freshman hoop team opened it's season with an impressive 56-53 victory over the Taunton Tigers.

Greg McGrath led Quincy with 17 points. On his heels was Bobby Walsh who had 16.

Defensively Jeff King and "Big" Joey Mariano were outstanding.

In Quincy's second game they had a tough time shooting as they fell to Weymouth 51-41.

Brad Smith looked impressive as he netted 10 points. McGrath was able to hit 8, with Walsh scoring 6, and Jeurik Samborski scoring 5. Samborski was also strong defensively, as was Saeed Sadaat, Jason Little and Will Fitzpatrick.

In their latest game the young Presidents fell 66-44 to a powerful Bridgewater-Raynham squad.

Scott Pyer, Smith and McGrath led Quincy's offensive attack. Mike Russo and Brian Snow played tough defense.

"This is the biggest team size wise that Quincy has had in many years and we are looking forward to good things in the future," said freshman coach Mike Draicchio.

Others first year players who look good for Quincy are Tom McIntyre, Mike Travis, Joe Cucera and John Hyacinth.

Pee Wee Cs Bomb Duxbury, 15-0

The Quincy Pee Wee C's were unstoppable as they manhandled Duxbury, 15-0.

Joe Vallatini and Mike Hastings notched hat tricks. While Josh Silverman and John Bertucci tried to keep pace with two goals each. The other goals came from Dave Noonan, Sean Fitzgerald, Mike Carloni, Ryan Murray and James Parisi.

Bertucci was huge as he added five assists to go with his two goals. Mike C. Sullivan (4), Silverman (3), Murray (2), T.J. Wilson, Chris Cullen, Chris Lumaghini, Vallatini and Parisi all added assists during the Quincy onslaught.

Strong play from Mike D. Sullivan and Shaun Cheney, as well as stand out hockey by goalie Nick Pizziferri, helped produce the victory.

St. Moritz

Devil Mites Outgun Lowell, 7-6

The St. Moritz Devils Mite team outgunned the Lowell Jr. Chiefs 7-6. The win was the fourth of the season for the Devils.

St. Moritz received goals in the first two periods from Steve Owens, Dave Knott and Larry Morgan. Owens' goal was unassisted. David Kennedy and Matt Lowe assisted on the other two.

The Devils were outshot 23-13 through the first two periods but were able to storm back with four goals in the third

Morgan netted the first goal of the third period on a feed from Ryan Tivnan and Patrick McCarthy. Knott scored his second on an assist from Dennis Costin. Costin proved to be the games hero by scoring the final two St. Moritz goals. His first came on an assist from Knott and Brian Celino. The game winner was unassisted.

The Devils' blueliners, Celino, McCarthy, Kennedy and Eddie Carnes, were solid throughout the game.

$30,000 Allocated Toward Police Cruisers Purchase

The Quincy Police Department has received $30,000 for the purchase of 15 brand new 1994 police cruisers.

The City Council voted Monday night to appropriate the money to the department. City Auditor Robert Foy said that the funding for the appropriation was taken from a reserve fund set up by Mayor James Sheets and the council. The fund contains money the city is entitled to under Proposition 2 1/2, Foy said.

The police department received an appropriation of $264,220 for police cruisers on Sept. 7. Thomas Koch, executive secretary to Sheets, said that appropriation came from FY94 revenue before the city's tax classification rates were recently set.

Mullen said the additional appropriation was necessary because although his department originally wanted to purchase 1993 police cruisers, there weren't any available when the bid was submitted.

"When we went to buy the 1993 police cruisers under the Greater Boston Police Council bid, none were available," Mullen said in a statement. "We therefore had to order the 1994 police cruisers at a higher cost, which left no money to purchase the necessary equipment for the cruisers."

The council voted unanimously on the appropriation.

CATCHING A BRAKE

It is difficult to overstate the importance of breaking to car safety. The auto industry's concern in this regard can be seen in the development of surefooted anti-lock braking systems. It goes without saying that the well-being of drivers and passengers depends heavily upon reliable and efficient brakes. With this in mind, the need to pump brakes in order to get the car to stop should be a cause of immediate concern. The problem may arise from, unwanted air in the brake lines, low brake fluid levels, or a leak in the master cylinder. Whichever is the culprit, the car should be inspected immediately by the auto technician. A car that pulls to the right or left when braking should also be suspect. This is a symptom of uneven braking power, the underlying cause of which should be corrected.

HINT: A vibrating brake pedal in a car with disc brakes may be indicative of a warped disc.

$230 M Pledged To Put Shipyard In Business

seen in years," Moakley added. Admiral Herberger said, "I'm encouraged for the first time in 10 to 15 years because we have the opportunity to revitalize shipbuilding in Quincy. We have an opportunity in the world at-large because there's a demand for shipbuilding."

For the first time since the yard was closed in 1986 by General Dynamics and purchased by the MWRA in 1987, Sheets said "There is indeed hope for shipbuilding in the city of Quincy.

"The foundation has been laid whereby we can truly be a competitive market. I pledged the full support of the city to this effort.

"This is the first major step toward bringing shipbuilding back to Quincy," the mayor added.

Two local officials who represent the Fore River Quincy Point area, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and State Rep. Ron Mariano, are also encouraged.

"It's a giant step in the right direction," DeCristofaro said. "It (the initiative) speaks very well for our legislative delegation and I'm very happy with what's transpired."

Mariano agreed.

"We've had a series of people coming through the yard who have been interested in shipbuilding but now there's money on the table and I think you'll have people coming in here who are serious."

Among the groups which have shown an interest in the yard are companies which build double-hulled tankers, LNGs, and cruise ships.

Studds said the time is right for this initiative because of the "sudden demand" for shipbuilding internationally. He noted shipbuilding wages in the U.S. are competitive with foreign counterparts and several major yards in the U.S. have already launched joint-ventures with foreign yards.

"It's very clear that in the next decade, the international demand for shipbuilding will increase and that demand far outstrips the supply," the congressman said.

Studds said he would do all he can to help Quincy capitalize on the fast-growing world-wide demand for new shipbuilding. The latest estimates show that more than 16,000 vessels worth more than $350 billion will be built by the year 2001.

To attract private industry to the Quincy yard, members of Quincy 2000 are working with Studds to form a "host committee" to identify potential investors and market the shipyard as one of the best places to build ships in America. Quincy 2000 Director Charles D'Aprix said the development group will "step up to the plate" for the initiative by bringing in experts and consultants while launching a full-scale marketing campaign.

Studds said revitalizing the shipyard remains a long shot, but the odds have shortened with the new initiative. "We still have a lot of work to do. We aren't there yet but we are getting closer."

At Quincy First Night Celebration

15,000-20,000 Expected To Ring In New Year

By LISA CONNELL

The city's second annual First Night is expected to draw between 15,000 - 20,000 people throughout downtown Quincy to ring in 1994, estimates First Night Chairman Michael Cheney.

Beginning at 4 p.m., A wide variety of musical, theatrical and performance events are scheduled to offer a safe, festive, inexpensive, alcohol and drug free celebration that the whole family can enjoy.

Weather predictions are leaning towards a chilly evening yet "this will not be a problem at all as all of our events are indoors including those being held in the three heated tents," said Cheney.

First Night Director and Councillor at Large Michael Cheney was preparing and laminating over 700 staff i.d. cards Monday afternoon as he spoke of the city's second festival, one of 111 such First Night events that will take place throughout the world. on New Year's Eve.

To date, 300 staff members, 60 coordinators, 50 vendors, 225 performers and about 100 sponsors are involved in First Night activities. Four outdoor and 15 indoor food vendors will also be involved.

NON-ALCOHOLIC FAMILY ENTERTAINMENT

Cheney is optimistic that First Night Quincy '94 will be as successful as Quincy's first New Year's Eve celebration.

"Our goals and expectations of last year's first celebration were exceeded," said Cheney.

"We expected a much smaller turnout than what we had, we didn't expect such great weather, and we didn't know what to expect in terms of the quality of entertainment. We expected more constructive criticism than we received," he said.

The Massachusetts Cultural Commission, from whom First Night Quincy receives some of its funding, was so pleased with the results of the city's first celebration that it tripled the size of the grant that Quincy received for First Night '94.

"Unlike Boston's First Night celebration, parking is free in Quincy, you can walk to every event, the cost of one button ($10) is all that's required for every activity and you don't have

Third Term Inaugural At NQHS Monday

Sheets To Focus On Economy, 'Quality Of Life'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said he is planning "no surprises" for his third inaugural address which will focus on the fiscal condition of the city and place a strong emphasis on "quality of life" issues.

Although the text of the address, which will be given during the city's inauguration ceremonies next Monday at 10 a.m. at North Quincy High School, was not fully completed as The Sun went to press Tuesday, the mayor said that he intends to continue to focus on Quincy's economy during the next two years.

Councillor Michael Cheney will be elected president of the City Council during the ceremonies, succeeding Charles Phelan who by council rules cannot succeed himself.

Cheney was assured the presidency when Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers pledged his vote to him, breaking a 4-to-4 deadlock with Councillor Timothy Cahill. Cahill plans to move to make Cheney's election unanimous.

Sheets, who was re-elected for the second time without opposition--the first mayor in the city's history accorded that political honor--will take his oath of office from City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The School Committee will elect a new vice chairman to succeed Stephen Durkin who by committee rules also cannot succeed himself. Although it press time it was not positively known who would be elected, Sheets, who serves as committee chairman, said he believes Daniel Raymondi has the votes to be elected.

Ronald Mariano, elected to his second four-year School Committee term and newcomer JoAnn Bragg will be sworn in by Sheets.

The seat vacated by Margaret (Peggy) King has no designated occupant as yet. Sean Barry and Christine Cedrone finished in a dead heat after a four-day recount that followed the November election.

A home-rule petition for a special election has still not been acted on in the state legislature as The Sun went to press.

If the petition does not win approval the matter will go to a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee--as provided by the city charter--to decide who will get the seat.

Regarding his address, Sheets said because the city's fiscal state has

Task Force Formed To Find Arsonist(s)

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy officials have formed an arson task force in the hopes of apprehending a suspected arsonist or arsonists who have set at least nine fires in South Quincy this year.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said at a press conference Tuesday the task force includes police, fire and state fire marshal's investigators and is researching whether one or more individuals may be responsible for the fires.

Any fires recorded in the area during the past three years will be examined for a possible tie-in, Gorman added.

Seven fires that damaged garages and sheds on Federal Avenue, Independence Avenue, and Lawry Street were set by an unknown individual or individuals between May 21 and mid-July.

There were no other suspected arson problems until Dec. 8, when a fire at 15 Bennington St. damaged a one-bay garage and a car, and fire officials were at first unsure whether the incident was connected to the earlier fires.

Officials became both suspicious and concerned, however, after a Dec. 19 fire completely destroyed a two-car garage at 159-161 Independence Ave., the home of retired Quincy firefighter Frank Luisi and his wife, Kathy. The Luisis' garage had been damaged during one of the earlier fires in June.

Gorman said burn patterns suggested that the arsonist or arsonists poured flammable fluid inside the garage before setting the Dec. 19 fire. Deputy Fire Chief Paul Cuddy said of the eight previous fires, three were "outside jobs" (started outside the property) and five were "inside jobs."

Cuddy said some flammable "accelerants" were found at the scenes of several of the fires. Gorman added, however, that those may have belonged to the owners of the properties and it is unlikely that the arsonist or arsonists are carrying to drive to the waterfront to see the fireworks," Cheney said.

"We took the best of Boston and implemented it in Quincy. We avoided their pitfalls and benefitted from their long experience," said Cheney.

No vendors will be allowed at any First Night '94 sites. Like last year, a First Night Store will open at 4 p.m. Friday at 25 Temple St. where New Year celebrants can purchase commemorative T-shirts, noise makers, hats and works of the various participating artists.

Admission to all events is $10. A specially designed button must be purchased before hand in order to attend all events. $10 is the cost of the button. which can be purchased at the following retail locations: Stop &Shop, Tedeschi Food Shops, South Shore Plaza information booth, Shaw's, Old City Hall (First Night Office), Osco Drug, Dunkin Donuts, Barry's Deli, Hibernia Bank, South Shore Bank, The Co-operative Bank, and the Neponset Flea Market.

Buttons can also be purchased at: Quincy Vocational School, Old City Hall, President's Place Information Booth, and the First Night Store at # Temple St.

An information booth will be manned in front of City Hall.

Portable ramps will be set up in locations that are not already handicapped accessible.

Banners to mark First Night will be displayed throughout the city, many of the banners created by Quincy elementary and middle school students.

Events planned promise to entertain and appeal to all ages.

Events are scheduled from 4 p.m. to 1 a.m. throughout Quincy Center. Buttons cost $10. No alcohol is permitted and smoking is prohibited from all sites.

Parking is free.

Restrooms are available at the Woodward School on Hancock St., the Vocational-Technical School, Bethany Church, the YMCA. and Quincy High School Methods Center, all on Coddington St., and New City Hall on Hancock St.

The MBTA will run buses frequently, up until 2 a.m.

1993 In Review

1993: A Roller Coaster Year

Nineteen ninety-three: it was a roller-coaster year which had its ups and its downs as well as its fair share of controversy.

The year was highlighted by, among others, questions of governance at Quincy College and how to break a School Committee election tie; sad events such as violent crimes and the loss of several businesses; and brighter days that saw construction begin on two educational facilities and a relief effort that reached out halfway across the country.

Among the issues that sparked debate was the city's fiscal status. Mayor James Sheets began the year by declaring the city "economically sound," but Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, disagreed and suggested that the mayor reconsider his plans to increase spending in the coming year.

Quincy College President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson said he wanted to help institute a new governance system at the school. Sheets said he favored establishing a separate board of trustees as the new governing body at the college--as opposed to the School Committee--and appointed a Quincy College Governance Committee to determine the school's future governance.

By September, Johnson would have no say in the matter after he was fired by School Supt. Eugene Creedon. And at year's end, two governance plans for the college were before the City Council for consideration.

In the November School Committee election, office manager Christine Cedrone edged Quincy College Director of Public Affairs Sean Barry by eight votes for the third and final available seat, and a subsequent four-day recount resulted in a tie between the two candidates. By the end of December, it was still unclear how that tie would be broken.

In West Quincy, a 700-foot communications tower kept Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio busy for much of the year. Residents opposed the tower, and before the controversy died down, Fabrizio would face a strong challenge in the November election from 18-year-old Michael D'Amico who attempted to capitalize on the tower issue.

Controversy erupted over the use of Moon Island when Quincy disagreed with Boston's plans to expand a gun range there as well as its methods of doing so.

A number of events in 1993 brought cheer to the city.

A summer relief effort that sent food and supplies to flood-ravaged Quincy, Ill. gained national attention and instilled residents in this Quincy with a feeling of city pride.

A four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy was completed and construction of an Early Childhood Center began in South Quincy.

Other steps forward included the U.S. Navy's approval of plans for a new U.S. Navy and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River shipyard, the opening of a new Adams National Historic Site Visitors Center at Presidents Place in Quincy Center, and news of an initiative backed by President Clinton and $230 million in federal loan guarantees to revitalize the shipyard.

The year also saw some darker days.

Not known as a city of violent crime, Quincy would be stunned by two murders in one year: 20-year-old Patrick Gullins of North Quincy was shot to death in February, and 25-year-old Dawn Brown, a 1985 graduate of North Quincy High School, was gunned down in Wollaston in July.

In another act of senseless violence, a 76-year-old woman was raped in September in her Germantown apartment, prompting officials to boost security in all of the Quincy Housing Authority's senior facilities.

The business world also had a topsy-turvy year. Grossman's announced it would close its Quincy facilities, and Procter & Gamble said it was considering closing its Quincy soap plant. Three Quincy Center favorites would also disappear: the Montilio's Bakery building was demolished, and Colman's Sporting Goods and the Cummings clothing boutique would also close their doors for the final time.

Politically, the city said goodbye to School Committee members Margaret King and Frank Santoro but also voted in a new face to the committee, JoAnn Bragg.

Prominent residents who died in 1993 included former Quincy city councillor Carl W. Anderson, Doris Oberg, first woman president of the Quincy Historical Society; George Alcott, Quincy sealer of weights and measures for 27 years and Lawrence Carnali, retired Quincy graves registration officer.

Here's a look back at the 1993 major news stories in Quincy:

January

In his mid-term address, Mayor James Sheets declared the city "economically sound" and listed among his goals expansion of the police and fire departments, development of the city's downtown retail section, creation of a new governance structure of Quincy College and increasing tourism.

Although Sheets' optimism was echoed by most members of the City Council, Councillor Timothy Cahill said Quincy was not "out of the woods yet economically" and criticized Sheets' plans to increase spending in the next fiscal year.

"WE HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFUL because we have set aside traditional political fears and have worked for the common good of the citizens of Quincy," Mayor James Sheets said during his mid-term address in January.

Quincy College President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson, expressing a strong desire to help institute a new governance procedure at the college, withdrew as a presidential candidate at Eastfield College in Dallas, Texas.

Plans for Quincy College's Project 2000, which would guarantee college tuition for Broad Meadows Middle School students slated to graduate from high school in the year 2000, were announced.

Cahill criticized Sheets' plan to develop the Hancock Parking area in Quincy Center, saying it had "too many holes" in it. Among his criticisms was Sheets' proposal to demolish businesses on Hancock Street and

Safety Skills For Children

While most kids pass through childhood without ever experiencing physical harm, some are frightened or hurt by crime. As a parent, one of your responsibilities is to teach your children how to protect themselves and respond to threatening situations. And, you should always take the time to listen carefully to your children's fears and feelings about people or places that scare them or make them feel uncomfortable. Here is what you can do.

First, cover the basics.

•Rehearse with children their full name, address and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.

•Walk the neighborhood with your children. Show them safe places they can go to in an emergency, like a neighbor's house or to an open store.

•Tell children never to accepts gifts or rides from someone they don't know very well.

•Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.

•Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone.

•Accompany your children to public restrooms.

•Teach children that no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them they have the right to say "NO" to an adult in this situation.

Committee To Study Quincy Center Connector

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city is putting together a Citizen Action Committee (CAC) for the purpose of examining the possibility of building a Quincy Center Concourse.

The concourse would be a connecting road between Burgin Parkway and the southern end of Hancock Street, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said whether the road can be built depends on the availability of state funding. Asked if any city money would be put into the project, Sheets said "it would basically be just state money."

Sheets said the concourse could be vital to the future of the city.

"It would be a major factor in revitalizing business," said Sheets. "It would be a direct link between Burgin Parkway and the Hancock Parking area and southern part of the city."

Sheets said the CAC which is currently being formed will be composed mainly of private citizens, although he could not say who. He added that further details will be unveiled during a press conference in January.

The mayor also noted, however, that others involved in forming the CAC include Bernice Mader, his administrative assistant as well as Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and Charles D'Aprix, executive director of the public-private planning corporation Quincy 2000.

Sheets said the project is something that has been discussed in the city for a decade or more. He added that Arthur Tobin's administration had received a commitment of $7 million from the federal government for the project, but the deal was nixed after Francis McCauley succeeded Tobin as mayor in 1982.

Leaky Air Conditioner Silences 3,600 Phone Lines

Communications in the city were expected to be back to normal by yesterday (Wednesday) after approximately 3,600 telephone lines in downtown Quincy were put out of commission Monday night and Tuesday.

The problem was reportedly caused by a leaky air conditioner at the Hancock Street office of New England Telephone.

Company spokesperson Carolyn McKeon said as The Sun went to press late Tuesday afternoon that service was being restored gradually throughout the day and that all but "a handful" of customers should had have their power back by Tuesday at 6 p.m. A few may have had to wait until midnight Wednesday, she said.

She added that most of the phones were in apartment buildings, although other sources said some City Hall departments and downtown businesses were also affected.

McKeon said the problem began around 9:30 p.m. Monday when water leaking from an air conditioner dripped into a cable vault. Two cables were flooded and workers disconnected those cables from the main switch to dry them, she noted, and other cables were disconnected to prevent the damage from spreading.

McKeon could not estimate the number of customers affected by the problem, she said, because many customers have more than one telephone line. She added that the bills of customers forced to go more than 24 hours without service would be adjusted.

Project Evergreen Trades Christmas Trees For Saplings

For the fourth consecutive year, Quincy residents are encouraged to participate in Project Evergreen which allows used Christmas trees to be swapped for 10-inch saplings.

Over 2,000 residents are expected to participate in the "tree swap" during the next few weeks. Those wishing to take part in the program should bring their Christmas tree to the Quincy Park and Recreation Facility, 100 Southern Artery next to Adams Field.

In return of the tree, participants will receive a coupon good for a live 10-inch "evergreen" to be distributed in April. The old tree is then mulched in an effort to protect the environment by sparing landfills..

Trees are being accepted weekdays now through Jan. 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday, Jan. 8 and Jan. 15 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Coupons for trees can be redeemed on April 30 or May 1.

"It is wonderful to see so many families turn out each year for this environmental effort," said Leo Kelly, chairman of the program. "It's never too early to make youngsters aware of the dangerous depletion of natural resources, and the importance of protecting remaining environmental resources."

The creative environmental initiative has been a success due to the cooperation of the public and private sector. The idea for the program was thought up by Kelly, a former Ward 1 city councillor. It is sponsored annually by local marine and general contracting firm J.M. Cashman, Inc.

City employees volunteer their spare time to provide labor for Project Evergreen, and Mayor James Sheets provides his support and encouragement. Members of the local Girls and Boy Scout troops also pitch in.

$5,940 Voted For Auxiliary Police

The Quincy Emergency Management Agency will now be able to outfit nine new auxiliary police officers who recently completed a 14-week in-house training course.

The City Council voted last week to appropriate $5,940 for equipment for the Quincy Emergency Management volunteers. City Auditor Robert Foy said that the funding for the appropriation was taken from a reserve fund set up by Mayor James Sheets and the council. The fund contains money the city is entitled to under Proposition 2 1/2, Foy said.

Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano thanked the council for the unanimous vote on the appropriation, adding that the agency depends on its volunteers to be successful.

"We're very fortunate to have these volunteers come on for us," said Siciliano. "We want to get these men outfitted as soon as possible."

Councillor Michael Cheney echoed Siciliano's praise of the volunteers, adding that the auxiliary police are always helpful in every duty they perform, including helping out at special events such as the city's First Night celebration this Friday evening.

"They give us an added (police) visibility," said Cheney.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro agreed.

"We're lucky we have people who are willing to volunteer," he said.

Friday Last Day For Sun Citizen Of Year Nominations

Friday is the last day to submit nominations for The Quincy Sun's ninth annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstand-ing community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, was honored. He was selected from 28 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 5 of this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating Project Impact, an innovative program which addresses alcohol and drug problems among youths, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Those nominated the past seven years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Friday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Free CPR Training Class At Quincy Hospital Jan. 8

Ambulance Systems of America, in cooperation with Quincy Hospital, will offer a free cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) training class Saturday, Jan. 8 at Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St.

The class, which runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., is open to Quincy residents who are 16 years of age or older. There is no fee, but pre-registration is required.

Those interested in taking the class must pre-register no later than Jan. 4, by calling toll-free 1-800-866-4800. Space is limited, and applicants will be enrolled on a first-come, first-serve basis.

There will be no walk-in registrations or registrations after Jan. 4.

The course will cover CPR techniques and is intended for those who have never taken a course, as well as those who want to update their skills.

Norfolk County Bar Assn. Legal Clinic Jan. 5

The Norfolk County Bar Association will sponsor a free legal walk-in clinic Wednesday, Jan. 5 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy District Courthouse, Chestnut St., Quincy.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one-on-one consultation to discuss legal questions. All consultations are confidential.

Other legal clinics are scheduled for Feb. 2, March 2, May 4 and 18, June 1 and 15 at Quincy District Court and April 6 at Dedham Superior Court.

Ross Warns $33 Tax Rate Will Rise

Dec. 30, 1947-Jan. 5, 1948 46 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross warned in his inaugural address that Quincy was faced with an increase of $1.5 million in the cost of running the city government in 1948. He predicted a $7 or $8 boost in the tax rate.

"I would like to maintain our present tax rate ($33) but I can readily see that such cannot be done," he said.

Ross listed a new municipal health center and widening of Revere Rd. and Canal St. as two of the chief objectives of his administration, the last before Plan E goes into effect.

He also promised a city-wide recreation program, construction of more stands and a garage at the municipal stadium and completion of plans for a proposed new surgical and medical addition to City Hospital.

Amelio Della Chiesa was chosen president of the City Council and A. Wendell Clark was re-elected vice-chairman of the School Committee for the fourth year by a 5-1 vote over Mrs. Helen Spencer.

GALA NEW YEAR'S EVE

Quincy's smart set welcomed the New Year with a midnight show at the Art Theater - :Golden Earrings," with Marlene Dietrich and Ray Milland, the movie that asked the question: "Was there a man bold enough to earn the tigerish caresses of wild and fabulous Lydia?"

Less daring celebrants danced to the music of Lundin's Orchestra at the Finnish Temperance Hall, Suomi Rd. and Nelson St., West Quincy, and Vick Vill's Band in the Brewster Boat on the Neponset River near the bridge.

Residents Protest 700-Foot Tower

(Con't From Page 3)

Cottage Avenue as part of the plan, which Cahill said could be avoided by utilizing the open lots at the sites of the former Kincaide's Furniture store and the former Strand Theater.

Charles D'Aprix was appointed executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation.

Sheets appointed a Quincy College Governance Committee to create a plan that would determine the future governance of the college. The committee was headed up by School Committee member Linda Stice.

Plans were unveiled to build a Super Stop & Shop at the 10-acre Pneumatic Scale site in North Quincy. City officials expressed the desire to keep Pneumatic Scale within city limits.

The City Council voted to create Quincy's first Human Rights Commission. Cahill was the only councillor to vote against the commission, questioning whether it was something the city needed.

Stephen Cantelli, a fifth grade teacher at the Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School in South Quincy and proponent of community education, was named The Quincy Sun's 1992 "Citizen of the Year."

About a dozen residents showed up at City Hall to protest a 700-foot communications tower built near Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy, saying it could bring down property values and jeopardize their health. Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, who some citizens blamed for not notifying them about the construction of the tower, and other city officials also voiced opposition to the tower.

After more than 17 years in elected office, City Councillor Patricia Toland resigned from the City Council to pursue the city's assistant city clerk position.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Rep. Ronald Mariano, in a joint letter to MWRA Executive Director Douglas McDonald, expressed their ongoing concern about future development at the Fore River Shipyard.

Citing both personal and political reasons, Cahill sold his Quincy Center business, Handshakes Cafe. Cahill also said he was considering running against Mayor James Sheets in the November election, but stressed that he did not sell Handshakes for that reason.

More than a dozen employees of the Presidential Convalescent Home in Wollaston lobbied the City Council to keep the financially troubled nursing home open.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and engineers from Weston and Sampson Engineering Inc. presented plans to the City Council for drainage improvement in the Montclair-Wollaston and Squantum-Houghs Neck areas.

Deaths in January included: Gertrude M. Fitzgerald, 87, former Quincy DPW employee; Herbert E. Morgan, 78, co-founder of the Manet Health Center; Paul J. Gauthier, 11, Lincoln-Hancock School fourth grader who suffered from multiple handicaps; the Rev. Bruce B. Noyes, formerly of St. Chrysostom's Church in Wollaston; Marilyn E. Graham, 67, former head nurse of the Quincy City Hospital Obstetrics Unit; Mildred B. Harrison, 94, retired director of guidance and research for Quincy Public Schools.

February

Mayor James Sheets announced a four-pronged "strategy" plan to reduce rising MWRA sewer rates. The four parts to the plan included: managing MWRA spending; increasing federal funding for Clean Water Act and Safe Drinking Water Act mandates; obtaining state debt service assistance; and funding a new aqueduct with state assistance.

Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro wrote to the Massachusetts DPW regarding the installation of a safety fence on the Fore River Bridge. The request came after suicide attempts by two men who jumped from the bridge, one of which resulted in a fatality.

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio requested a federal investigation concerning the 700-foot communications tower in West Quincy.

DPW Commissioner David Colton submitted a $373,000 proposal to the City Council to begin repairing damaged seawalls in Merrymount and Adams Shore.

Quincy school teachers picketed City Hall for a pay raise and new contract.

Construction began on the Town Brook Local Protection Project in Quincy and Braintree.

The Montilio's Bakery building on Chestnut Street, a Quincy Center landmark for several decades, was demolished.

Congressman Gerry Studds expressed optimism that President Bill Clinton would provide more federal assistance in the $7 billion Boston Harbor cleanup.

Studds opened an office at 1212 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Former Congressman Brian Donnelly was recognized by the South

Shore Chamber of Commerce for his 14 years of service as a member of Congress.

Sheets handed down his recommendations for the proposed Hancock parking lot retail development project, the most important of which called for no demolition of abutting buildings.

The city's 46,000 households received a city census mailing from the Quincy Board of Registrars.

Sheets said he would hire a consultant-lawyer to obtain information on the West Quincy communications tower.

Studds met with Carol Browner, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, in an attempt to obtain funds for the harbor cleanup.

Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson retired after 42 years on the job.

Patrick Gullins, 22, of North Quincy, died after being shot in the heart by a gun held by his friend Kevin Cunningham, 20, of Wollaston. Cunningham, who claimed the .38-caliber pistol fired accidentally while he was holding it, was later charged with murder.

Other deaths in February included: Leo J. Hannon, 60, former Quincy political candidate and real estate agent; Joseph V. Valorz, 71, retired Quincy Cemetery Department foreman; Carl W. Anderson, 89, former Quincy City Councillor; Maha H. Iavicoli, 30, of heart failure and her infant daughter, Lynn M. Iavicoli, who died the following day after being delivered by emergency Caesarean section; William J. Buccella, 62, retired Quincy police officer; Leon A. Hamel, 90, former motel owner; Marion P. Taylor, 72, granddaughter of the late Quincy Mayor Eugene Stone; Rev. Joseph T. Greer, 60, former associate pastor at St. Joseph's Church.

SNOW is piled along Southern Artery following a "winter hurricane" in March. The snow was loaded into large dump trucks which hauled it away. The city's cleanup effort was assisted by four National Guard crews.

March

Congressman Gerry Studds asked the Federal Aviation Administration to call for a public hearing on the impact of the 700-foot communications tower in West Quincy.

The City Council approved a plan to build an Early Childhood Center at the site of the former Lincoln Elementary School in South Quincy and a four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy.

Joseph LaRaia was chosen by the City Council to fill the council seat vacated by Patricia Toland when she stepped down to seek Quincy's assistant city clerk position. LaRaia had finished fourth in the councillor-at-large race in the previous election.

Bill Morrill, president of Creative Fairs Inc. of Quincy, told the Quincy Planning Department he hoped to build a $1 million, 40,000-square foot entertainment center in the city. Morrill asked the department and the newly-formed Quincy 2000 to help him find a building large enough to house the center.

Despite numbers that showed an increase in crime in the city, Police Chief Francis Mullen and Mayor James Sheets said the city was "holding its own" in the battle against crime.

A major snowstorm blanketed the city with over a foot of snow, costing the city $100,000. The storm, which came at the end of an extremely stormy winter, brought the city's FY93 storm expenditures to around $500,000, well over the budgeted $300,000.

The Department of Public Works introduced a city-owned street-sweeping program which the department estimated would save Quincy as much as $696,000.

The state approved a redistricting plan for Quincy which affected between 10,000 and 12,000 registered voters, or 25 to 25 percent of the city's electorate.

The National Park Service signed a "Memorandum of Understanding" with United First Parish Church and the Adams Temple and School Fund which stated that the NPS would begin conducting tours at the church.

Citing both personal and family reasons, City Councillor Timothy Cahill announced that he would not challenge Mayor James Sheets in the fall election.

The Quincy College Governance Committee held a public hearing on its plans to submit a recommendation to establish an 11 to 15-member board of trustees at the college to Mayor James Sheets.

More than 600 people honored retired City Clerk John Gillis at a dinner tribute at the Bryan VFW

April

Because the law no longer allowed it, the Quincy License Board ended its traditional ban of alcohol sales between noon and 3 p.m. on Good Friday. Bars and liquor stores opened during those hours for the first time in years.

The City Council appointed Patricia Toland to Quincy's assistant city clerk position.

Judge Charles Black, a 20-year veteran of the bench, was appointed first justice of Quincy District Court.

The School Committee, Quincy Education Association and an impartial mediator continued to try to work out a contract for the city's school teachers.

Barbuto Construction Company of Easton was awarded a $2.7 million contract to build an Early Childhood Center in South Quincy and four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School in West Quincy.

Rev. Roger Kvam, pastor of Quincy's First Presbyterian Church, announced he would retire in May.

Officials from Quincy High School and the Quincy Veterans Council announced plans to erect a memorial for deceased QHS alumni who died during or from injuries sustained in any U.S. war or conflict.

The National Park Service opened a new Adams National Historic Site Visitors Center at Presidents Place in Quincy Center.

Despite the fact that the final numbers on the city's FY94 budget were incomplete, Mayor James Sheets guaranteed that there would be no city layoffs in the coming fiscal year.

Teachers Approve, School Committee Ratifies New Contract

(Con't From Page 11)

May

Mayor James Sheets submitted an FY94 municipal budget of $128,689,981 to the City Council.

School Committee Vice Chairman Stephen Durkin proposed that the city construct an addition to the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy. Durkin said an addition would help relieve overcrowding and provide students with a more "acceptable" facility.

An estimated 750 volunteers turned out for the city's annual "Cleaner, Greener" cleanup.

Judge John E. Fenton Jr. was the keynote speaker during Law Day Ceremonies at Quincy District Court.

For the first time in the city's history, a public hearing was held on a municipal budget proposed by a Quincy mayor. Most of the 24 residents who attended demanded that Sheets cut his proposed $128,689,981 FY94 budget.

A new playground, which was made possible largely because of the Quincy Park Improvement Committee, opened at Collins Rest-A-While at Hancock Street and Southern Artery.

Library Director Warren Watson said the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center could use a 35,000 square foot addition which would give its patrons easier and more comfortable access.

By a vote of 399-96, Quincy teachers approved a three-year contract that was subsequently ratified by the School Committee.

Following a number of reported break-ins in Squantum and North Quincy, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers formed a neighborhood crime-watch task force.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio asked Sheets and Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane to require the ambulance company who had the city's contract awarded to them to station an ambulance in Southwest Quincy.

Impact Quincy donated a $2,500 grant to the Committee to Establish Youth Centers, a group of parents and teenagers who banded together in the hopes of opening a youth center or centers for Quincy teens.

Eighteen-year-old Michael D'Amico announced that he would challenge Fabrizio for the Ward 4 councillor's seat in the fall election.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson led a group of angry residents and officials in a "Tea Party" protest against skyrocketing MWRA water and sewer rates at Marina Bay.

Ward 2 Councillor proposed a two-year moratorium on new liquor licenses in the city. However, the Quincy License Board ruled that such a moratorium would be illegal under Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) rules since Quincy was below its legal allowed limit of 141 liquor licenses.

City Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, said he was hopeful that as much as $500,000 or more could be cut from Sheets' proposed FY94 budget.

DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), an organization committed to helping battered women and children, celebrated its 15th anniversary at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Fr. John McMahon Way was dedicated in West Quincy in memory of the late former pastor of St. Mary's Church.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled that Quincy College must have its board of trustees and cut ties with the Quincy School Committee or risk losing accreditation.

Martin Ervin, 23, a political newcomer, announced that he would challenge Sheets in the fall election. Ervin, however, eventually changed his mind and dropped out of the race later in the year.

Deaths in May included: Mildred I. O'Meara, 89, elementary school teacher for 40 years; Timothy V. McCarthy, 25, education loan services administrator; Robert E. Prada, 67, Quincy Highway Department employee for 33 years; William J. Papile, 80, former Ward 2 city councillor; Kathleen M. Hofferty, 79, taught 40 years at the former Pollard School.

June

Numbers released from the Adams National Historic Site showed that the start of the tourist season at the site drew 25.6 percent more visitors than the beginning of the 1992 season.

Charles McIntyre, son of the late Quincy Mayor James McIntyre, announced his candidacy for councillor-at-large for the fall election.

Officials announced that the planned U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard would include the most extensive private collection of U.S. military artifacts, documents and records in the country.

Nearly 200 people braved a rainy Saturday night for an hour-long "Violence Prevention Vigil" at United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

In an effort to stop spiraling water and sewer rates, Mayor James Sheets and a host of area mayors called on the MWRA to reduce the scope of the Boston Harbor cleanup.

A memorial honoring Quincy High School, Trade School and Vocational-Technical school alumni who were killed or died from any injuries sustained in any wartime combat was dedicated.

Massachusetts House Speaker Charles Flaherty was the keynote speaker at Quincy College's 34th graduation commencement exercises.

Mary Pratt, who played in the All-American Women's Baseball League from 1943 to 1947, asked that her name be taken off the baseball field at Atlantic Middle School. Pratt said she did so because of the field's deplorable condition.

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti told officials connected with the Massachusetts Highway Department Central Artery Project that noise levels from its pile driving operation on Spectacle Island were "unacceptable."

The Committee to Establish Youth Centers in Quincy raised $1,400 with a "Walk-For-Teens," its first fund-raiser.

The University of Massachusetts announced it would name its Sports Hall of Fame at its Amherst campus after alumnus Atty. George Burke of Quincy. Burke, who played basketball at the school and with the Boston Celtics, donated $100,000 toward the reestablishment of the Hall of Fame.

The city announced it was planning a lawsuit against the MWRA over its methodology of basing its water and sewer rates on population rather than usage.

City Auditor Robert Foy announced that Quincy would begin FY94 with a free cash surplus of approximately $600,000.

The City Council passed an FY94 budget of $128,360,915. Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, said he was pleased the council was able to slash $329,066 from Sheets' proposed budget of $128,689,981 without hurting city departments.

Residents expressed opposition to a proposed Home Quarters home improvement store in Braintree on the West-Quincy Braintree line. Those opposed said Braintree would receive tax revenue benefits from the store but Quincy would only get additional traffic.

The Quincy License Board denied a request to open an ammunition store at 14 Cottage Ave. in Quincy Center.

Rev Roger Ketcham resigned as pastor of Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center after church members expressed dissatisfaction with his performance at the church.

The City Council approved Sheets' $7.8 million bond package for improvements to the city's schools and other public buildings, departmental equipment, seawall repairs, sewer and drains, and other matters.

Deaths in June included: William R. Leaman, 63, retired code enforcer for the Quincy Building Department; Joseph S. Devaney, 75, retired Quincy police officer; Lt. Lawrence J. Perette, 76, retired from the Quincy Fire Department; Virginia H. Rich, 84, owned the Greeting Card Shop in Wollaston for 30 years; Verdia M. Almquist, 89, school teacher in Quincy and Hingham for 30 years; Charles E. Cahill, 65, retired Quincy banker; Adam J. Lucason, 87, owner of the Hollow Restaurant.

CHRIS ACHILLE, Abigail Cotton, Patrick Flynn and Marissa Cotton protect their candles from the rain in front of the United First Parish Church at a Peace Vigil held in June. Abigail and Marissa were also speakers at the event.

years at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center. He was replaced by Assistant Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

Ten thousand gallons of animal fat spilled from a Procter & Gamble rail car. Officials said the spill, which took only a day to clean up, posed no threat to the environment.

The city filed a lawsuit in Suffolk Superior Court against the MWRA over its methodology of basing water and sewer rates and population rather than actual water usage.

The city began a massive relief effort for the flood-ravaged city of Quincy, Ill. Food, supplies and money were collected for the effort, which was conceived by Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley and would go on to gain national attention. Mayor James Sheets and Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano both traveled to Illinois during the effort.

As part of a special assignment, Quincy Sun Editor Robert Bosworth also traveled to Illinois to view the flood devastation first-hand.

Dawn Brown, 25, a 1985 graduate of North Quincy High School, was shot to death outside her family's home in Wollaston. Police believed that the killer was an ex-boyfriend of her sister, Kimberlee, who mistook her for Kimberlee in the dark evening.

Census figures showed that minorities made up 14 percent of Quincy's population in 1993, as opposed to 9.7 percent in 1992.

Judge Warren Powers, a native of Quincy, was sworn in as Associate Justice of Quincy District Court at a State House ceremony in Boston.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the City Council Public Saftety Committee, asked Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen to bring back a K-9 unit as a deterrent to crime in Quincy. The city had such a unit years ago but eventually discontinued it because, it was felt, the unit was no longer needed.

Residents at a public hearing strongly opposed the idea of a new Shaw's Supermarket being built at the site of the former Boston Gear Works on the Wollaston-North Quincy line.

School Committee member Margaret "Peggy" King announced that she would not seek re-election. King was the second committee member to make such an announcement during the year, Frank Santoro being the other.

August

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien asked Mayor James Sheets for his support and cooperation in the promotion of the use of alternatively-fueled vehicles in Quincy. Chretien suggested the utilization of vehicles powered by electricity and natural gas.

As part of the city's effort to boost tourism, Sheets conducted a mass mailing to invite local residents and their guests to visit Quincy's historic landmarks.

The Quincy Police Department urged residents to take caution while walking alone at night after two senior citizens were attacked, beaten and robbed.

Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt and Congressman Gerry Studds toured Quincy and discussed a study on the feasibility of linking Quincy with the Boston Harbor Islands.

Quincy Hospital began collecting cash donations for Blessings Hospital in flood-ravaged Quincy, Ill.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano filed legislation to create a Sewer Rate Relief Trust Fund aimed at bringing fiscal relief to water and sewer ratepayers in Massachusetts.

Three local companies--Crown Colony Drive Limited Partnership, Claremont Corporation and Neponset Landing Trust--put in bids to bring the Massachusetts State Lottery within city limits after the lottery announced it had outgrown its 60,000 square foot headquarters in Braintree.

Quincy 2000 began a telephone survey of 500 Quincy residents asking them what kinds of businesses they would like to see in downtown Quincy.

Sheets announced the city would implement an assistance program to retrofit, floodproof or elevate residential properties prone to coastal and riverine-wetland flooding. The program would be funded by Quincy's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

The U.S. Navy announced it would support the city's plans to bring the USS Salem battle cruiser to the planned U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

The City Council Education Committee voiced informal approval of plans to establish a board of trustees as the new governing body of Quincy College.

The city received a giant postcard signed by 500 to 600 residents of Quincy, Ill. expressing gratitude for its support of the flood-ravaged Illinois community.

St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point held a special celebration at all its weekend Masses after major renovations that enhanced the beauty of the church.

Among the new weapons the Quincy Police Department began using in its fight against crime were a K-9 unit, mounted police, mountain bicycles and other improvements in equipment and manpower.

Quincy Police Officer Richard Praetsch, while riding one the city's mountain bikes, caught two suspects in an automobile after a high speed chase. After the driver of the car blew out a tire, Praetsch found them hiding in the kitchen of a nearby restaurant.

A raccoon killed by a dog in Wollaston tested positive for rabies. It was the first reported case of the disease in the city's history.

Deaths in August included: John A. Fox Sr., 84, a former assistant commissioner for the Internal Revenue Service; Joseph R. Deluzio, 65, Exxon Corp. Merchant Marine; Irene DiSalvo, 66, former Bargain Center employee; Muriel A. McKenzie, 70, retired Patriot Ledger reporter.

September

Officials announced that the strength of the Quincy Fire Department could be boosted by as many as 18 to 20 additional firefighters by early November.

Final numbers released by Quincy Veterans Services and the mayor's office showed that the city had collected a total of 280,000 pounds of food, and over $21,000 in cash, for flood-ravaged Quincy, Ill.

Continental Cablevision customers saw a slight change in their cable bills after new regulations issued by the Federal Communications Commission went into effect.

Plans were announced for a new call answering service for the homeless at Father Bill's Place, Quincy's shelter for homeless people.

A second rabid raccoon was discovered in the city. The animal, which was found in West Quincy, was discovered less than two weeks after another had been killed by a dog in Wollaston. The Quincy Health Department warned that all raccoons in the city should be considered rabid.

City Councillor Michael Cheney reintroduced a home-rule petition for a city lottery in Quincy. Cheney had originally introduced the petition in 1991 when it stalled in the state legislature.

School Supt. Dr. Eugene Creedon fired Quincy College President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson. Creedon said he had the authority to do so under the new state Education Reform Act. Johnson, who in recent years had clashed with Creedon and certain School Committee members, promised to appeal the decision.

Later in the month, Creedon named Donald Young of Wollaston interim president of Quincy College.

Mayor James Sheets said the city would use $1.5 million it received in state funds for education, general aid and salaries.

Sheets announced the city would implement a program to assist first-time homebuyers. The mayor said the program would be offered through the city's Department of Planning and Community Development and the Quincy Housing Partnership.

The Quincy Cultural Council received a state grant of $27,235 from the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Sylvia Jenkins, manager of the Fleet Bank Quincy Center Office, was named first woman president of the Quincy Kiwanis Club.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers and State Rep. Michael Bellotti said they would form a Citizens Advisory Committee regarding a proposed expansion of the Moon Island-Long Island Rifle Range.

City and school officials voiced support of a proposal by Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien to establish a new citywide education fund that would provide supplemental funds for Quincy schools.

Security guards were hired at four senior citizen complexes after a 76-year-old woman was raped in her apartment at O'Brien Towers in Germantown.

The Quincy Sun, the city's weekly community newspaper, put out a special issue commemorating its 25th anniversary. The City Council marked the occasion by presenting Publisher Henry Bosworth and Editor Robert Bosworth with a special commendation.

The Adams National Historic site received a state grant of $250,000.

Quincy Firefighter Paul Griffith received a commendation from the City Council for saving the life of a man who was shot in a July 20 bank robbery at Hibernia Savings Bank in Wollaston. Griffith tended to the man's wounds until paramedics arrived.

A groundbreaking was held at Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy, marking the official beginning of a $393,846 expansion at the site.

Creedon proposed reopening the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston as a kindergarten center to relieve overcrowding at the Wollaston, Montclair and Parker Elementary Schools. School Committee members expressed support of the proposal and, later in the year, voted favorably on it.

MBTA unions picketed outside Quincy City Hall to increase public awareness of Gov. William Weld's plans for MBTA privatization.

A $16.9 million contract was awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to a joint venture of Kajima/Marra-Majestic of Pasadena, Calif., to begin construction of a Town Brook tunnel that would carry flood flows beneath sections of downtown Quincy.

Former State Sen. Paul Harold was named American studies professor at University College in Cork, Ireland.

Deaths in September included: Mary L. Moriarty, 81, Woolworth's employee for 25 years; Marion G. Rogers, 97, Quincy school teacher for 48 years; Joseph F. McCarthy Jr., 64, state DPW civil engineer for 30 years; Donato Quintiliani, 96, owned West Quincy Tailoring for 45 years; Stephen J. DelRosso, 73, former head guidance counselor at Atlantic Junior High School; George R. Alcott, 67, Quincy sealer of weights and measures for 27 years.

October

A majority of North Quincy and Wollaston residents at a public hearing at Quincy City Hall again voiced opposition to a proposal for a new Shaw's Supermarket at the site of the old Boston Gear Works on the North Quincy-Wollaston line. The hearing had been recessed from July 26.

Later in the month, facing rejection from the City Council, Shaw's withdrew the proposal, although a spokesperson for the project said the supermarket would submit a revised version of the plan in early 1994.

A bronze plaque bearing the likeness of retired City Clerk John Gillis was unveiled during a meeting of the Quincy City Council. The event was attended by Gillis and a number of his friends, family members and former co-workers.

City Council President Charles Phelan and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro introduced a resolution to build a Quincy monument in memory of the 54,247 men and women who lost their lives in the Korean War.

Business representatives, medical professionals and citizens expressed support of President Bill Clinton's proposed health care reform plan at a public hearing at City Hall.

Citing personal and health reasons, Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin resigned as pastor of the First Church of Squantum.

The Quincy Housing Authority announced it would delead all of its 639 family apartments after lead paint was discovered in 32 of the apartments.

(Con't On Page 17)

Beechwood To Reopen As School; Bragg Wins Committee Seat

(Con't From Page 16)

The Metropolitan District Commission acquired 43.8 acres of land in West Quincy for future recreational purposes.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien introduced an order which would rezone Industrial B land bordering Pneumatic Scale on Newport Avenue in North Quincy to Planned Unit Development (PUD).

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman announced all Quincy rooming houses for six or more people must have sprinklers installed by Jan. 1, 1994.

Robert Fogel, a professor at the University of Chicago and father of Steve's Beale Street Diner owner Steve Fogel, won the Nobel Prize in Economics.

Mayor James Sheets said he would work with the City Council and Beechwood Community Life Center officials to find a home for the center. Beechwood was slated to eventually lose its headquarters, the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston, after the School Committee voted to reopen the school as a kindergarten center in September 1994.

A $42,000 state grant was awarded to Quincy for the completion of a redevelopment plan at the Fore River shipyard.

A survey by Impact Quincy showed that youth in Quincy were less likely to use drugs and alcohol and to carry weapons than youth in most Massachusetts communities.

The City Council voted that Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson should receive his salary for council duties. The state Ethics Committee had originally ruled that Kolson had a conflict of interest in running for the Ward 1 seat because he is a Quincy Housing Authority employee, and Kolson had not been paid for his duties since first winning the seat in 1989. The council vote came after the Ethics Committee reversed the decision.

State Treasurer Joseph Malone said he would oppose a proposal by City Councillor Michael Cheney to establish a citywide lottery in Quincy. Cheney would eventually withdraw the proposal.

Plans were unveiled to build a new multi-million dollar golf course and recreational complex at the site of the former landfill off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy.

A lottery was conducted at City Hall to break a tie among 33 fire department recruits who scored 100 percent on the state firefighter civil service test. Gorman said 13 veterans would be given priority for 16 available openings in the department, meaning that at least the first three recruits picked in the lottery would be hired.

Mary O'Leary, 71, was killed in a Houghs Neck car accident that injured three other people including two Quincy police officers. O'Leary was riding in a friend's car when it was struck by a police cruiser that was following a third vehicle.

Other deaths in October included: John W. Feist Jr., 63, Quincy Sewer Department employee for many years; Dr. Conrad Nobili, 86, former Quincy Hospital Chief of Staff; Louis J. Goldrick Sr., 69, school teacher in Boston for 43 years; Thomas F. Blasi, 77, contact officer with Quincy Veterans Services for 30 years; Hazel M. Rambo, 89, champion Senior Olympics swimmer; Lawrence Carnali, retired Quincy graves registration officer.

November

The city's November election had few surprises except for one loose end that would still not be resolved at the end of the year. In the councillor-at-large race, incumbents Timothy Cahill, Joseph LaRaia and Michael Cheney were all reelected. Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien easily retained his seat and Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio topped 18-year-old Michael D'Amico after a hard-fought battle. Mayor James Sheets and all other city councillors ran unopposed.

The controversy was in the School Committee race. Incumbent Ronald Mariano and tax accountant JoAnn Bragg easily placed first and second respectively, but office manager Christine Cedrone only edged Quincy College Director of Public Affairs Sean Barry by eight votes for the third and final available seat. A subsequent four-day recount resulted in a tie between the two.

By the end of the month, the Board of Registrars agreed to abide by Quincy's city charter and ruled that the tie should be broken by a joint convention of the new School Committee and City Council after the city's Jan. 3, 1994 inauguration ceremonies. Cedrone, however, said a special election should be held to break the tie, and speculation arose about a possible lawsuit against the city.

In other news, a proposal for a giant convention center at the site of the former Jordan Marsh warehouse in Squantum prompted Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers to propose that the site be rezoned from Business "B" to Planned Unit Development.

Ground was broken for Quincy's "Walk of Names" improvement project at City Hall which would be highlighted by personalized bricks purchased by citizens, groups and businesses.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the death of a 71-year-old Houghs Neck woman in an auto accident in October was not the result of a high-speed police chase but simply an unfortunate mishap.

Officials announced that Quincy would remain the dominant community in a newly created Norfolk-Plymouth County senatorial district while

From The Firehouse

By Quincy Deputy Fire Chief Paul Cuddy

Smoke Detectors Can Save Lives

The National Fire Protection Association reported that in 1992 there were 4,730 civilian fire deaths in the United States. With approximately 70% of all fire deaths occurring in the home, and given the fact that more than half of all fatal home fires strike at night while people are asleep, it is easy to understand why every home needs a device that can wake people up in time to escape from a fire. The sound of a smoke detector can do exactly that, an can cut your chances of dying in a fire by 50%.

Almost every day, a smoke detector saves somebody's life. That's why Massachusetts has a law requiring that all homes have smoke detectors installed. A smoke detector can't save your life, however, if it is not installed correctly and properly maintained. First, when purchasing a detector, make sure to buy only "labeled" units--those bearing the name of an organization that tests and evaluates products. Any labeled detector offers adequate protection--whether it's powered by batteries or household current, whether it's powered by batteries or household current, whether it's a photoelectric or ionization device. It is especially important that you follow the manufacturer's recommendations for installation, testing and maintenance.

In order to provide your home with optimum protection, be sure to install the correct number of detectors. The minimum protection requires smoke detectors on the ceiling outside each bedroom, and on each additional level of the home--including the basement--at the bottom of each flight of stairs. Smoke detectors are not recommended for kitchens or garages where fumes may cause false alarms. If your family sleeps with bedroom doors closed, however, it is a good idea to install detectors inside the bedrooms also.

It is extremely important that smoke detectors be tested and cleaned regularly to ensure proper operation. Batteries should be replaced at least once a year or more often if recommended by the manufacturer. Be sure everyone in your household understands the importance of having working batteries in smoke detectors--resist the temptation to borrow the batteries for other purposes. Never paint a smoke detector. Cobwebs and dust can impair a detector's sensitivity; clean them at least once a year according to the manufacturer's instructions. Test your detector once a week to make certain you're protected; it only take a moment, but it could save your life.

Nothing delivers fire safety at a lower cost than smoke detectors--every home should have them! If you have any questions, call the Fire Prevention Bureau at 376-1015.

Hospital Refinancing To Save City Millions; Property Taxes Rise

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS entry "Christmas Cards Mean Christmas" won first place in the non-commercial category in this year's Quincy Christmas Festival Parade float competition. The awards were presented in December despite the fact that the parade was canceled because of poor weather. The firefighters received the Fr. Thomas Tierney and $1,500 cash.

the city's three House districts would undergo a minor shift under new districting plans.

For the second consecutive year, the Quincy License Board gave permission for a rock concert for teenagers to be held at the National Guard Armory in Wollaston the night before New Year's Eve.

Mayor James Sheets proposed tax classification rates that would mean per $1,000 increases of $1.11 for residents and $1.81 for business owners compared to FY93.

Officials at the Thomas Crane Public Library announced plans make its Quincy Center facility more handicapped accessible within the next year.

Beth Israel Synagogue in Quincy Point celebrated its 75th anniversary.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson gave the keynote address during the city's Veterans' Day ceremony.

Cahill repurchased Handshakes Cafe in Quincy Center after selling it in January.

The Quincy Christmas Festival Parade was postponed for one week due to stormy weather.

Quincy Hospital officials said the refinancing of the hospital's 1986 Federal Housing Authority bond issue would save millions of dollars for both the hospital and the city.

Six families under the jurisdiction of the Quincy Housing Authority threatened to sue the QHA if they were not moved to lead-free apartments within 30 days. QHA Director John "Jake" Comer said the QHA could do nothing until it received money from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development. Lead paint was first discovered in QHA dwellings in May.

Former Mayor Walter Hannon was appointed director of maritime development by the Massachusetts Port Authority.

North Quincy defeated Quincy, 14-7, in the annual Thanksgiving Day Game at Veterans Memorial Stadium. It was North's third consecutive win in the Turkey Day game.

Deaths in November included: Fanny T. Giagrando, 79, sales clerk at the former Remick's store in Quincy; Roydon Burke, 91, owner of a Quincy insurance company and award-winning photographer and poet; Suzanne E. Hourin, 17, after an Oct. 30 car accident; Esther E. Altman, member of the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association Board for 30 years; Peter E. Dunn, 99, owner of a Quincy wholesale fruit company for 50 years; Robert J. Granahan, 78, retired Quincy fire captain; Charles F. Fawcett, 39, president of Dependable Cleaners.

December

The School Committee voted to retain control of Quincy College, as opposed to establishing a separate board of trustees at the school. Under the former plan, which was introduced by School Committee member Daniel Raymondi, School Supt. Eugene Creedon would report directly to the School Committee. At the end of the month, both plans would be in the hands of the City Council for consideration.

For the first time in its 42-year history, the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade was canceled because of poor weather conditions. At the end of November, the parade had been postponed one week because of a bad storm.

The City Council passed a home-rule petition in the hopes of holding a special citywide election to break the recount tie that followed the Nov. 2 School Committee election. Councillor Timothy Cahill, who introduced the petition, said a special election would be the fairest way to break the tie. In late December, the petition was still pending before the state legislature.

The City Council passed a resolution introduced by Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio that a new Early Childhood Center scheduled to open in South Quincy should be named after former State Rep. and Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa. School Supt. Eugene Creedon, however, and the School Committee expressed support of naming the center after Abigail Adams.

The City Council approved the refinancing of Quincy Hospital's 1986 Federal Housing Authority bond issue that had been introduced to the council in November.

The City Council also approved Mayor James Sheets' FY94 tax classification rates which called for per $1,000 increases of $1.11 for residents and $1.81 for business owners as compared to FY93.

Fabrizio announced he would propose an ordinance in January 1994 which he hoped would protect landlords and tenants alike from drug and other illegal activities in apartment buildings. The ordinance would allow people to appeal to the Quincy License Board for assistance in the event of such activities.

Sheets announced that the Quincy City Store, which he estimated could earn the city $25,000 to $75,000 annually by selling surplus materials from city departments, would open Jan. 8, 1994 at the Fore River shipyard.

Robert Colman, owner of Colman's Sporting Goods, announced that he would close his 42-year-old landmark Quincy Center business by the end of the year.

Negotiations began between Quincy and Boston regarding the cities' differences over the use of Moon Island. Controversy over Moon Island had begun in September when Quincy opposed Boston officials' plans to expand the gun range there.

The Quincy License Board ruled that city rooming houses not in compliance with city sprinkler systems regulations by the end of the year would have to reduce their total number of occupants to five or less.

The Islamic Center of New England raised $92,000 for a new Islamic mosque in Sharon at a fundraising banquet.

Local officials expressed support of an initiative backed by President Clinton and $230 million in federal loan guarantees to modernize the Fore River shipyard.

A relief fund was started for a couple and their four children after a fire destroyed their Quincy Point home less than a week before Christmas.

1994 required that all Massachusetts communities have no duplicate street names.

Procter & Gamble announced it was considering closing its Quincy-based soap plant. Federal officials asked the company that the Quincy site not be one of the 30 facilities it planned to close.

Quincy Visiting Nurse Association reluctantly discontinued its financially strapped, nine-year-old hospice program.

North Hits Roadblock, Edged By St. John's Prep

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy boys basketball team hoped to continue its winning ways but hit a roadblock at Boston Latin Monday by dropping a 45-42 decision to St. John's Prep in the first round of the Scholastic Holiday Tournament.

North (3-2) was scheduled to play in the consolation game Tuesday night. Their next action will come Friday, Jan. 7 at Taunton, followed by their next home game, a Jan. 11 matchup against Weymouth.

The game against St. John's saw North go up by one with 1:30 to play, but a bucket by St. John's with 30 seconds left led them to the victory. Jason McLeod led North with 23 points.

The Raiders came into this game coming off one of the most exciting games in school history last Wednesday with a quadruple overtime 61-57 win against Silver Lake.

North looked like they were going home early as they trailed 43-30 with six minutes left in the game. The Raiders as this point began to chip away slowly to tie the game at the end of regulation, 47-47.

"The second half play of George Wirtz off the bench gave us a real spark in our comeback," said head coach Ted Stevenson, who also singled out the fine defensive play of Matt Ngutler, Brad Gray and Brian Raftery.

Each team scored two points in the first overtime, and with no scoring in the second overtime, the score remained tied, 49-49.

North went on to lead by three, 55-52 in the third OT thanks to great inside play by McLeod, but a three-pointer by the Lakers extended the game another three minutes.

In the fourth extra session, McLeod again led the way and in the final minute put the Raiders up to stay with an inside shot. Wirtz sealed the win with a steal and layup as time expired.

Leading scorers for North were McLeod with 31 points (17 in the second half), Ngutler with seven, and Raftery with six.

Also playing well for North were Jerry Fernandez, Mike Santoro, Bob Johnson, and Kevin Ross.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Through the first two weeks of the winter sports season no one at Quincy High has been more impressive than senior wrestler Jerry Booker.

In only his first year of wrestling the 171-pound Booker is off to an incredible 6-0 start, including five pins!

Booker opened the season with a pin against Marshfield. In a dual meet versus Whitman-Hanson and B.C. High he won his first match by points, 7-5, and came back with a vengeance in the second match, pinning his opponent in 45 seconds. Booker also posted pins in his matches against Durfee, Boston Latin and Waltham.

Booker is a powerful bodybuilder and is active in the South Shore YMCA. He cites the individualism of wrestling and bodybuilding as one of the reasons why he enjoys both events.

Booker's coach, Lou Venturelli, says that the wrestler's upper body strength is "incredible" and also that it is a pleasure to coach such an athlete.

As a student in the Culinary Arts program at the Vo-Tech, Booker hopes to take his skills on to a college such as Johnson & Wales.

For North Quincy, senior hoop star Jason McLeod has been the story. After four games the Red Raiders were 3-1, due in no small part to the play of McLeod. The 6'8" center has averaged 24 points and 14 rebounds per game.

In a 66-58 win over Barnstable McLeod scored 27 points...in the second half! Since high school games have only 16 minute halves, that's almost two-points per minute! Even Wilt Chamberlain would be impressed.

In an amazing 61-57 quadruple-overtime win again Silver Lake McLeod scored 31 points. He was huge in the defensive end with 9 blocked shots, including 6 in the overtime sessions.

McLeod transferred to North Quincy from Portland, Oregon before his junior year. Colleges such as U Mass-Dartmouth and Bridgewater State have already expressed interest in the formidable center.

In youth sports, Mite House hockey players Steve and John Segalla have been the best one-two punch since Orr and Esposito.

In their last three games for Skatesmith the brothers have combined for 20 goals and 15 assists. That's a whopping 35 points in just three games!

In the process John and Steve have led Skatesmith to victories of 7-4, 8-1 and 7-1.

Steve has led the Skatesmith juggernaut with 12 goals and 6 assists. John has posted 8 goals and 9 assists over the three game stretch.

Also adding firepower to the Skatesmith attack has been Chris Sheehan who has 7 assists in the three games, including 5 in the 7-1 victory over Paul Harold Club.

Mite Bs Win

The Quincy Mite Bs beat the Seahawks Gold team, 5-2.

Quincy spread it around with five different goal scorers: Chris Sheehan, Pat Casper, Andrew McDonough, Lindsey Langille and Ryan Tobin.

Six different players found themselves in the assist column. Tim McMahon, Robert Donovan, Matt Alleva, McDonough, Sheehan and Tobin all set up goals.

The coaches for the Quincy Mite B team are Adin Langille and Rick Morrissey.

Pee Wee Bs Crush Hanover

The Quincy Pee Wee B squad crushed Hanover, 8-1.

Jeff Glynn was the leader as he posted a hat trick, while Kevin Shaw and Sean Lefebvre were close behind with two tallies each. Mike Welch notched the other Quincy goal.

Lefebvre, Shaw and Welch also had assists, as did Brian Nolan, Sean Haidul, Paul Burke and Didier Alther (2).

Coaches for the Pee Wee B team are John Haidul and John Sullivan.

QUINCY CO-CAPTAINS Tom Malvesti, Joe Kelly and Mike Bartlett.

Quincy Hands Marshfield First Defeat

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy topped previously undefeated Marshfield, 71-61, in the first round of the Marshfield Rams Classic on Monday. The Rams had averaged 86 points in their last two games.

Senior Jon Gangi hit two free throws to open the scoring and the Presidents never looked back, leading this one from start to finish.

The catalyst for Quincy was their ability to overpower Marshfield inside. Brian McPartlin again did a superb job in the offensive zone. The senior forward scored 10 points, 8 of them the result of offensive rebounds.

McPartlin was hardly alone. Eight different Quincy players scored, including four in double figures. Tom Malvesti led the Presidents with 18 points, followed by Joe Kelly with 15. Also scoring were Harold Mortel (12), Mike Bartlett (7), Gangi (4), Don Goss (3) and Dave Gunther (2).

Quincy was impressive defensively as they limited the high-powered Marshfield attack to their lowest point total of the season. Marshfield was unable to register a field goal until 5:50 had elapsed in the first half. By then Quincy had moved out to a 16-6 lead.

The Quincy defense registered 20 steals. Malvesti alone had 8, including 6 in the second half. Bartlett, Mortel, Goss, Gangi, McPartlin and Joe Manton all came up with one or more steals.

The Presidents led 37-30 at the intermission. In the second half Malvesti and Kelly took control of the Quincy offense, accounting for 21 of Quincys' 34 second half points.

When McPartlin scored off a rebound of his own missed shot to give the President's a 60-48 lead with 3:10 remaining, it appeared that this one was all over.

But seven consecutive Marshfield points made things interesting in the last two minutes. The Rams closed to within three during this stretch. If it were not for the key late game ball-handling of Bartlett and Mortel, in the face of heavy defensive pressure, this one might have slipped away.

Mortel also hit four clutch free throws in the final two minutes. Six of Quincys' last nine points came from the stripe. Bartlett and Kelly hit the other two free throws as Marshfield tried to foul their way into the game in the waning moments.

It looked like Quincy would go home with a 68-61 victory when a Kelly bomb from half court found the net and beat the buzzer to end the game.

Quincy will square off against Scituate in the Marshfield Classic championship game. Scituate posted a dramatic 62-61 win over Archbishop Williams in the tournament's early match.

Track

North Girls Open Season

The North Quincy High School girls indoor track team was nipped by Taunton 45 2/3 to 45 1/3 in the opening meet of the season

North had several impressive performances, including a 1-2 finish in the 2 mile by Laura Blaikie and Kelly Duggan. They finished only a second apart at 13:27 and 13:28.

The North girls also had 1-2 finishes in the mile by Erin Duggan (5:43.9) and Erica Doherty (6:14) and in the 1000 meter by Mel Gaziano (3:08) and Ursula Feurtado (3:17). Duggan's performance was good enough to earn her a spot in the States.

"We're coming of a great cross country season in the distance events," said sixth year head coach Geoff Hennessy.

The girls are not as strong in the shorter events such as the 600 and 300 meter. North was only able to capture a third place finish in these events against Taunton. Meghan Roche finished the 600 in a time of 1:54 and Jen Pineo clocked a 45.9 in the 300.

Weymouth, who should be the cream of the league this season, topped the North girls 59-32 on Wednesday.

Four North Quincy athletes had performance impressive enough to qualify them for the States. Blaikie won the 2 mile with a time of 12:24.2, a minute better than she did against Taunton.

Erin Duggan again qualified with a 5:40.0 in the mile. Gaziano finished the 1,000 meter in 2:57.8 and Katy Deady finished the dash in 6.7 seconds.

Returning lettermen for North include Katie McNamara, Phyllis Poon, Alyssa Cobban, Amalia Solano and Linda Jellison.

Some of the promising newcomers are Suk-Ting Ng, Leah Campanale, Aja Jackson, Jen Teahan Jun, Casey Ngo and Hillary O'Donoghue. The indoor track team had 75 candidates try out, including 35 freshmen.

North will be competing at the B.U. Invitational on Jan. 2.

Bob, June Seamans To Participate In 12-Hour Ski-A-Thon

A 12-hour Cross-Country Ski-A-Thon Fund Raiser will be held Saturday Feb. 26 between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. in the historic White Mountain Village of Jackson, New Hampshire to benefit the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton. Both sighted and blind skiers are welcome.

The course is an easy one-half mile double track loop on rolling terrain on the golf course on Jackson Ski Touring Foundation trails. It will be prepared for both traditional and cross-country skiing.

Bob Seamans of Quincy, board member of the Carroll Center, is the founder and co-chairperson of the event.

Last year Seaman skied 92 miles, raising thousands of dollars. He encourages everyone to participate in the 1994 Ski-A-Thon and states cross-country skiing at this level and the type of terrain is easy, healthful and fun. His wife June will also ski for pledges.

There are no trail or entry fees, and colorful commemorative long sleeve T-shirts will be given to all participants.

The South Boston Savings Bank with two Quincy branches is a major sponsor of the Ski-A-Thon Fund Raiser.

The purpose of the Carroll Center Ski-A-Thon is for skiers to obtain pledges for each mile skied. Pledge sheets can be obtained by calling the Carroll Center at 617-969-6200 or 1-800-852-3131.

If you can't participate, a contribution will be accepted. A check for any amount made out to the Carroll Center for the Blind located at 770 Centre St., Newton, MA 02158 will be appreciated.

The Carroll Center has pioneered rehabilitation services for newly blinded adults and other visually impaired persons for nearly six decades.

Major programs, each designed to promote independent living, self sufficiency and personal fulfillment, include life skills training, counseling, orientation and mobility instruction, computer services, employment assistance, youth development and outdoor recreation and enrichment.

Each year, the Carroll Center provides more direct professional services to blind individuals than any other private agency for the blind in New England.

The Carroll Center for the Blind is a tax exempt, non-profit organization. Contributions are deductible to the extent allowed by law.

$10,000 Donated To Houghs Neck Basketball, Community Programs

A total of $10,000 was recently donated to community and basketball programs in Houghs Neck.

Paul Pedini of Modern Continental SAE presented two checks of $5,000 each to Renee Stone, past president of the Houghs Neck Community Council at a recent awards program. Also on hand for the presentation were City Councillor Michael Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson.

Half the money will benefit boys' and girls' basketball programs in Houghs Neck, and the remaining $5,000 will fund additional Houghs Neck community programs. The funds were donated as part of a mitigation package regarding the construction project at the Nut Island Headworks Facility.

"This is a small amount of the overall mitigation package that has been negotiated over a period of years," said Cheney. "Councillor Kolson and I negotiated this agreement a year ago and, in addition to the $10,000, Modern Continental SAE will be providing approximately $20,000 worth of in-kind services such as street paving and constructing stairs along rights of way on the water's edge."

"It is with great pleasure that I witness the presentation of these checks to the residents of Houghs Neck," said Kolson. "We have worked hard to bring about this mitigation as a result of the impact construction has made on residents of Houghs Neck during the years work has been going on.

"We will continue to ensure the quality of life and safety of our residents which is always a priority."

Cheney and Kolson serve on the Nut Island Citizens Advisory Committee, which is headed by Committee President Jack Walsh. The group has worked for over 10 years toward the elimination of the sewerage treatment plan at Nut Island and establishing a community park for local residents.

Challenger Sports League Completes Soccer Season

The South Shore Challenger Sports League completed it's first soccer season this fall following a very successful spring T-ball season.

The league was organized in early 1993 to provide children with physical or mental handicaps the opportunity to participate in organized sports.

Participants are divided into two teams, the Gold and the Green. Gold Team members are: Paul Barry, Matthew Blankenship, Adam and Mark Burgess, Thomas Cameron, Stephen Drysdale, Jillian Graham, Ryan Grimmel, Matthew Joyce, Michael Kavanaugh, Brenna and Shannon McDermott and Billy and Tommy Robinson.

Green Team members are: Ray Beauvais, Mike Brown, Mark Conti, Joey Daley, J.T. Ford, Joe Hardiman, Daniel Holbrook, Erin Leth, Brandon Murphy, Daniel Medeiros, Erica Reichel and Heidi Renken.

The league organizing committee was chaired by Tom Murphy, formerly of Quincy. The league is now under the direction of Steve Mitchell and John Ford, both of Quincy. Ford also runs fund raisers for the South Shore Children's Fund which donated all the shirts for the soccer program. Committee member Robert Clark is a Quincy police officer and is involved in the Quincy Police Athletic League (PAL). Quincy PAL donated all the equipment needed to run the league.

The committee would like to thank all the volunteers and parents who participated in the league. These include coaches Danielle Duncan and Kristen Stenberg, two young products of Quincy Youth Soccer. Also, goal judges John Maloney, Steve Dever, and Eric and Mike Waggett who donated there time every Saturday morning for both soccer and T-ball.

Special thanks go to the City of Quincy and Parks & Recreation Director Ray Cattaneo. who made Pageant Field available to the youngsters for both the spring and fall programs. The indoor portion of the season was made possible by St. Joseph's Parish through the donation of their gym for which the committee is very grateful.

The league would also like to thank all the sponsors who made the games possible, including: the Quincy PAL, the South Shore Children's Fund, the North Quincy Knights of Columbus and Browning-Ferris Industries.

Anyone interested in signing up or volunteering for the Challenger Sports League are asked to call Steve Mitchell at 471-2672.

Women's Fitness At Clubhouse

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct two women's fitness programs at the Fore River Clubhouse beginning Jan. 3.

Both programs will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at either 8:45 or 9:45 a.m. The instructor will be Lynnann Motz.

Each class includes exercise to improve and strengthen flexibility, endurance and overall fitness. Adaptations to the exercise allow each participant to work out their own pace.

The cost of the program is $25 for 30 classes and registration is on a first come, first serve basis at the Quincy Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Registration begins on Jan. 3.

For additional information, call the Quincy Recreation Department, 376-1394.

Squirt II-B Team Tops Milton

In Squirt B action the Quincy II-B team topped Milton 5-3.

Peter Turowski scored two goals for Quincy while Matt Kenney, Scott Markarian and "Skateless" Joe Jackson had one apiece.

Dishing out assists were Matt Conso, Matt Miller and Kris Farr.

Coaching the II-B team are Rick Fitzpatrick, Rich Cawley and Pat Kenney.

The Quincy I-B squirt team fell short against Weymouth, 2-1.

Martin McGrath had the lone Quincy goal and was assisted by Jon Paquette and Rene Lumaghini.

Coaches for the I-B team are Rick Patten and Jay Cunningham.

DiBona Completes Successful Season

Former Quincy High football star Noel DiBona completed a successful first season as a Crusader at Valparaiso University in Valparaiso, Indiana.

DiBona was a captain of last year's Presidents squad. His play caught the attention of several colleges during his senior year. DiBona chose Valparaiso because of the level of interest they displayed and because they were making the jump from Division II ball to Division I-AA.

Unlike most college freshman who get "red-shirted" (put on the developmental squad), DiBona was able to earn a spot on the Crusader's varsity traveling squad in his first year.

DiBona helped the Crusader's to a 5-5 record in their first year of I-AA football by performing the dangerous job of kick-off and punt returning. He was also a back-up cornerback and saw action almost every week on defense. DiBona expects to earn a starting position next year as a sophomore, as the player ahead of him on the depth chart was a senior.

DiBona is majoring in sports management and looks to be as successful in the classroom as he has been on the field.

Fagerlund Sets Two School Records

Justine Fagerlund, captain of the North Quincy Girls Swim Team, grabbed two second place finishes in the State Championships held in November.

Fagerlund broke school record times in the 200 M (1:59.42) and 500 M (5:10.19) freestyle.

Zoe Bohl, also a captain, finished in fourth place in the one meter diving competition with a score of 372.65.

Fagerlund and Bohl were chosen as members of the Pilgrim Conference All-Star Team. Also chosen for the All-Stars were Sarah Radell, a junior from North Quincy and Kristen Fluhr, a sophomore from Quincy High.

Randy Stuart Completes Training

Army Pvt. Randy J. Stuart of Quincy has completed basic training at Fort Jackson, Columbia, S.C.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid, and Army history and traditions.

Stuart is the son of William J. and Darlene M. Stuart of 34 Figure Head Lane.

Executive Hockey

Flibotte's Blanks Beacon, 4-0

Goalie Bill Goodman posted a shutout as Flibotte's Auto Sales blanked Beacon Sports, 4-0.

Wm. Caddy defeated Grumpy's Pub, 7-2, as Jim Randall and Joe Alfanso scored two goals apiece. Others goal scorers for Caddy were Jack Fowkes, Chuck Behenna and Paul O'Brien. Assists went to Bob Fowkes (3), O'Brien (2), Al Gullickson, Mike Flaherty, Jack Fowkes and Alfanso.

Dave Perdios scored the two goals for Grumpy's. Assists went to Rick Joyce (2) and John Andrews.

South Shore Bearing beat Fowler House, 6-2.

Gymboree To Host Open House Jan. 6, 8

Prepping The House For Winter

By MATT MULVEY
Quincy Inspector Of Buildings

Well, summer is over. It always goes too quick. With the change of seasons, our thoughts should be turning to make sure the house is in good shape for the cold weather months. Below are a few items to check.

1. Is the furnace or boiler in good working order? Items to check:

- •All pumps/circulators properly lubricated.
- •Hot air furnace fan belts in good condition.
- •Firebox/chimney clear of soot and ashes.
- •No combustible material stored on or near heating units.
- •Boiler/hot water heater drawn down to remove sediments.
- •Thermostats clear of dust.
- •Furnace filters replaced every month during heating season.
- •Duct work/radiators vacuumed to clear away any dust.
- •Proper adjustment of burner guns for optimum efficiency.
- •It is best to have a professional clean and adjust your heating system.

2. Insulation: Whenever possible, insulate the house such as unfinished basements, heating supply and return heat piping or duct work, hot water piping, attics, etc.

3. Windows: Make sure all windows and storm windows are in good working order.

4. Exterior: Make sure all gutters & conducter pipes are clear of debris. Check roofing, siding and chimneys for any maintenance needed. Check any trees/shrubbery to make sure they are trimmed away from the house. Patch any cracks or holes in walkways or driveways.

5. Have your winter tools/supplies in order such as a broom, shovels, sand or salt. It also makes good sense to keep your car's ice scraper and a can of lock de-icer in the house. You may not be able to get into the car to get your tools to clean it if the lock is frozen.

6. Make sure the batteries in your smoke detectors are fresh.

Proper maintenance of your home will ensure a safe heating season for you. If you have any questions or need any additional information contact a Quincy building inspector at 376-1452 between 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. daily.

Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program Gaining Momentum

A unique entrepreneurial development program known as the Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program is gaining momentum, according to Quincy 2000 Executive Director Chuck D'Aprix.

The program is designed to nurture start-up retailers for Quincy's commercial districts, including Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy. According to D'Aprix, it is unrealistic to expect that major chains will locate in the commercial district unless there is already a critical mass of creative, independent retailers firmly in place.

"The concept is quite simple. We will train people who have a creative idea for a retail store," D'Aprix said. "The rigorous training program, conducted in conjunction with Quincy College, will expose the potential retailers to the basics of running a store.

"The curriculum will include such topics as seasonal buying, retail cash flow, merchandising, security and legal issues."

Upon successful completion of the program, D'Aprix said "graduates" may be eligible for small low-interest loans from Quincy 2000. To be eligible, applicants must be credit worthy and willing to locate their store in Quincy Center, Wollaston or North Quincy.

We will be marketing the program heavily in the next few weeks," D'Aprix said. "We are preparing ads that will run in local publications and on local radio. The program's best chance of success rests on our ability to create a large applicant pool."

Although all ideas will be considered, D'Aprix said there are certain types of stores that will best complement the current retail mix. He said the idea is to provide goods and services not currently being offered.

He noted Quincy 2000 has a list of store types that would best serve the community.

D'Aprix said the people who have written off downtown and neighborhood commercial districts are wrong. "It is so easy to say that downtowns are dead and that it is impossible to revive them. Frankly, that is not the case.

"Across this country there are downtown and neighborhood commercial districts that revived themselves through creativity and grass-roots support.

"Of course we can't compete head-to-head with the malls. However, we can find niches in the market and fill them.

"We can provide goods and services that malls cannot or will not provide. To those who say that we cannot revive our commercial districts, I say 'do your homework.'

"There are too many examples of where they have been revived. Let's get started," he said.

One of the keys to the training will be the involvement of Quincy College, D'Aprix said. The college will provide classroom space and will help coordinate training schedules. The collaboration between the academic and business communities will ensure the project's success, D'Aprix said.

"In a year's time we hope to put numerous creative, successful and energetic retailers into the city's commercial districts. We are confident that we can tap into Quincy's spirit and determination," D'Aprix said.

For more information about the Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program, call 847-1454.

May Be Future Home For Beechwood Center

Former Standish School Now Under City Control

The former Myles Standish Elementary School in Squantum is now officially under the control of the City of Quincy.

The City Council voted last week to take the school off the hands of the Quincy School Department. The School Committee voted recently to release the custody and care of the building to the city.

The school has served for a number of years as the headquarters of the Quincy Lodge of Elks. The Elks, however, are scheduled to leave the building early next year to relocate to a new home they are building in West Quincy.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon and Mayor James Sheets have both said it would be not economically feasible to reopen the school for educational purposes because it is not large enough or centrally located. Officials have said the building is also considerably run-down and in need of repairs.

Although the future of the site is not absolutely certain, city officials have suggested it could be used as the new headquarters of the Beechwood Community Life Center. The community center is scheduled to lose its current home, the Beechwood Elementary School in Wollaston, because the School Committee recently voted to reopen the Beechwood School as a kindergarten center in September of next year.

City To Receive $14,908 For 1994 Elections

The city will receive $14,908 in state money to cover a portion of Quincy's September state primary and November general election next fall.

The revenue is a result of a 1983 mandate which established standardized, statewide polling hours from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

"Although citizens now have more time to vote, these extra hours have increased election day staffing costs for the commonwealth's municipalities," State Auditor Joe DeNucci said.

It is the responsibility of the Division of Local Mandates (DLM) to determine how much the state must pay cities and towns to implement state mandates. The polling law requires communities to document their additional elections costs and submit them to DLM for certification.

The Secretary of State's office distributes the funding.

Ayers To Hold Squantum Meeting Tonight

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Robert J. Nickerson Post, 20 Moon Island Rd., Squantum, to discuss two issues regarding the Squantum business district.

Ayers said the first issue concerns a proposal before the zoning board to build a landscape business on the parcel of land adjacent to DiMattia Sails and Yacht Systems.

The other concerns a gentleman interested in relocating his office personnel to the former Squantum Pharmacy site at 744 East Squantum St., Ayers added.

"Community input is essential in enabling me to best represent my constituents," he said. "Attending the community meeting gives them the chance to voice their opinions and to scrutinize the issues prior to their going before the zoning and/or license boards."

For more information, call Ayers at 472-9877.

Consultant To Help Combat Algae At Sailor's Home Pond

The city plans to hire a consultant that will help combat algae problems that have developed at Sailor's Home Pond in Wollaston.

The City Council voted last week to appropriate $3,100 from Quincy's Wetlands Protection Fund to that end. State Rep. Michael Bellotti and the Quincy Conservation Commission sent letters to the council in favor of the appropriation.

The consultant, Terry Bastuan of the group known as Water Flowers in North Reading, will provide remediation for the problems at the pond by using "stuff that would kill the algae," according to City Council President Charles Phelan, whose ward (Ward 5) includes the site.

Phelan said a community meeting attended by about 50 residents was recently held at the nearby Beechwood Community Life Center to discuss the problem. He added that the algae is harmful to the plant life at the pond, as well as to ducks and other wildlife that are drawn there.

Phelan added that residents are encouraged not to feed ducks at the site, because food thrown into the water will "only bring rats there" and could end up harming, rather than helping, the ducks. He also said that in addition to last week's appropriation, a Sailor's Home Pond Committee will be formed in the near future to further look into the problem.

FIGHTING OFF HEALTH CARE FRAUD

Beware of phone calls or letters promising great deals on medical services and products. Some of the hottest scams going on these days are in the field of health care, with unscrupulous marketers bilking the government - and each of us as taxpayers - out of billions of dollars every year. These cons usually offer something like nutritional supplements or free comprehensive physicals, and then use loosely drawn Medicare regulations to bill the government for unnecessary tests, equipment, or medications. The result can be not only wasted tax dollars, but a false sense of security to patients who trust that their health is truly being served. When in doubt about a product or service, check it out with your doctor.

P.S. Be a savvy consumer for health care, just as you would for any other product or service. We all pay a price for fraud.

All such health care scams should be promptly reported to your Better Business Bureau or Attorney General's office. For more information on this, or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. This column is presented in the interest of better health for all our readers. Have a happy and healthy new year!

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The New Year is a time of challenge to our younger citizens who look upon the year ahead and all the years to follow as a time to build the foundation on which their future lives will be determined . . . For those in their middle-years the New Year presents still another opportunity to set those, whom they love so dearly, upon the course which will determine their future happiness and the fulfillment of their hopes and dreams . . . And to the elderly to whom the New Year can be a melancholy time when they recall those dear ones who are no longer with us and whose loss increases our sorrow with each passing year . . .

And so the New Year truly means different things to everyone-yet with all the varying emotions the one constant, shared and binding feeling . . . is the feeling of hope . . . that with God's help our lives and the lives of those whom we love . . . will be happier and more useful lives in 1994. . .

Ring out the old - ring in the new.
HAPPY NEW YEAR EVERYONE . . .

Sheets To Focus On Economy, 'Quality Of Life'

stabilized considerably since he was first elected in 1989, "quality of life" issues such as the city's schools, parks, and public safety will receive more attention than in the past.

"In my first inaugural address (1990), I had to grapple with the immediate problems of the economy, but I felt that those would pass," said Sheets. "By my second address (1992), I felt that the real crisis had passed but the city still had fiscal problems. Now we'll have much greater latitude in terms of quality of life issues and the quality of the neighborhoods."

Although he said he could not be more specific, Sheets added that there will be "a number of major announcements" regarding the city's future in the first two months of 1994, including many having to do with Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation.

"A lot of things that (Quincy 2000 Executive Director) Chuck D'Aprix has been working on will come to fruition," said Sheets. "The future looks better for us now than it has in the last four years."

Sheets said a number of factors have helped the city's economy reach its current level of stability, including Quincy's decision in November 1992 to switch to a single health care carrier for all city employees and the performance of both the City Council and himself to "hold the line" on spending.

"We've attacked the major budget busters," said Sheets. "We've done an exceptionally good job and have built on a very solid performance by the McCauley administration."

The mayor said the recent refinancing of Quincy Hospital's 1986 Federal Housing Authority bond issue will also save the city around $3 million over the next few years as the hospital begins to assume responsibility for its annual pension liability. Under the original bond issue, the city had agreed to pay the pension liability until 1997, but the bond refinancing will allow the hospital to immediately begin gradual assumption of that duty.

Sheets said that the work of Quincy 2000, the recent announcement by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds of federal plans to revitalize the Fore River shipyard, and a continued push for increased tourism--including the anticipated arrival of the cruiser USS Salem as the focal point of a U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the shipyard--will also help Quincy's plans to increase the quality of life in the city.

The mayor added that the Quincy City Store at the shipyard, which is scheduled to open Jan. 8, will also help the cause by raising funds for a special "activities-celebration" account to be used at the city's discretion.

Sheets attributed the city's success in boosting tourism and in other areas in recent years to the cooperation among himself, Studds, Sen. Ted Kennedy, whose efforts helped bring a National Park Service Visitors Center for the Adams National Historic Site to the city, Quincy's delegation in the state legislature, the City Council and School Committee.

"We're all pulling in the same direction," he said. "And when that happens, you're going to make progress."

Ronald Zooleck Chamber Of Commerce Executive Of The Year

Ronald Zooleck of Hingham, president and CEO of the Quincy-based South Shore Chamber of Commerce, was recently honored as the executive of the year for large chambers of commerce.

RONALD ZOOLECK

The award was presented at the annual meeting of the New England Association of Chambers of Commerce Executives in Cromwell, Conn.

"Ron Zooleck has set a high standard for all chamber executives," said Larry McHugh of the Middlesex County Chamber of Commerce in Connecticut and president of the New England chamber executives group. "A role model for those entering association careers, he is also a leader among those who have been professionals in this field for many years."

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce is the region's largest business association. During his 15 years as Chamber president, Zooleck has been instrumental in creating a strong volunteer-driven business organization that has demonstrated the ability to grow even in a lean economy, McHugh said.

Since 1978, the group has grown from 1,000 members to 2,200 to become the largest regional chamber of commerce in the United States.

Zooleck was also commended by Arthur R. Connelly, chairman of the Chamber's Board of Directors. "We are delighted that Ron's peers have selected him for this honor.

"His strong professional leadership has helped make the South Shore Chamber one of the most effective business organizations in the country.

Zooleck is a past president of the Connecticut and Massachusetts Associations of Chamber of Commerce Executives, as well as the New England organization. He has served as a director of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives and is a past chairman of the U.S. Chamber's Institute for Organizational Management at the University of Delaware.

He is married to the former Jane Boudreau. They have three children.

Landlord Faces Possible Lien On Property For Lack Of Heat

A Quincy landlord faces a possible lien on his property after he reportedly left tenants in four of his buildings without heat during the current cold spell that has gripped the city.

Officials have been unable to locate Dimitrios Spiliakos of 117 Waterston Ave. for almost a week, according to Executive Secretary Thomas Koch.

The buildings left without heating oil are located at 58 Holmes St. in North Quincy, 18 Essex St. in Squantum, 16 Des Moines Rd. in Quincy Point and 601 Hancock St. in Wollaston, Koch said, with the worst problems experienced at the North Quincy address. Spiliakos owns a total of 18 properties in Quincy, according to the city assessor's office.

Mayor James Sheets said "40 or 50 families" have been affected by the problem, which has caused pipes to freeze in the buildings.

Koch said the city has moved as quickly as possible in having emergency shipments of heating oil delivered to the tenants.

"Our first priority is to take care of these people," said Koch.

Both Sheets and Koch, however, said that the mayor's office has contacted City Solicitor Stephen McGrath to find about what action can be legally taken against Spiliakos for his actions.

"We're looking seriously about putting a lien on his property," said Sheets. Sheets said Spiliakos will be charged by the city to pay for the emergency oil shipments, and Koch said the lien is one way the city could get the money back.

Koch also said any other disciplinary actions taken against Spiliakos "would have to be decided by the court," and added that Jane Reikard, executive secretary of Quincy's rent grievance board, is advising tenants on whether they should withhold their rent.

Koch said Spiliakos has likely left the tenants without heat because of "serious financial problems."

City Tax Collector Dana Childs said Spiliakos owes around $65,500 in back taxes from fiscal years 1989, 1992 and 1993 on apartment and commercial buildings on a number of city streets. He added that the city has started foreclosure proceedings on a Massachusetts Avenue building, the vacant Eagles Hall, which is owned by Spiliakos.

Task Force Formed To Find Arsonist(s)

their own flammable materials to the scenes of the fires.

Cuddy estimated the total damage done by the fires, most of which were set during early morning hours, at $24,000. Gorman said the reason for an estimate that high is that a couple of cars have also been damaged in the fires.

Gorman said the entire area where the fires have been set only measures approximately 1,000 feet in diameter. Police Chief Francis Mullen said he has increased patrols in the area significantly in the hopes of finding any suspicious activity in the neighborhood.

Police have said investigators interviewed a local man and woman regarding the earlier fires, but were unable to determine if they had any connection. Officials also said the department has no suspect now.

Mayor James Sheets and other officials at the press conference also noted that arson is one of the hardest crimes of all to prove since evidence at the scene of a crime is literally burned up.

Det. William Langeran noted there is no set psychological profile for an arsonist. He said an arsonist is a "sick person" who made be driven by revenge, insurance money or sexual motivations, and it is presently unclear which of those scenarios the task force may be dealing with.

Gorman and Mullen said that although the police and fire departments are taking are all necessary steps to try to solve the problem, residents can assist the task force by reporting any suspicious activities in the neighborhood.

Sheets also said that cooperation from the residents is extremely helpful to a task force conducting such an investigation.

The chiefs agreed that citizens should also take proper precautions to prevent arson, such as making sure all property is locked and all combustibles are secured, as well as leaving lights outside their property turned on at night. Mullen also recommended the purchase of automatic motion lights, which he called "one of the best investments going on in the market."

Gorman noted that a similar task force formed in the city in 1989 was able to quickly locate a woman who had been setting fires in North Quincy.

Studds To Hold 3 Financial Aid Forums

Congressman Gerry Studds has completed plans for a financial aid forum and two follow-up sessions, including one at Quincy College, to help parents and students cope with the cost of higher education.

The first forum will be held Sunday, Jan. 9 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Harrington Center of Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay. Subsequent workshops will be held Wednesday, Jan. 12 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Weymouth High School and Thursday, Jan. 13 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Room 101 of Saville Hall at Quincy College.

All sessions are free and open to the public. Those attending the Quincy and Weymouth sessions will be able to pick up financial aid forms and have their questions answered individually.

For more information, call Studds' Quincy office at 1-800-894-9911.

Good Neighbor Energy Fund To Help Pay Winter Bills

Massachusetts Electric customers in Quincy and surrounding area have the opportunity to donate to the Good Neighbor Energy Fund to help income-eligible Bay State residents pay their winter energy bills.

This is the ninth heating season the fund has provided assistance. Donation envelopes accompany the December and February bills of all Mass. Electric customers.

Over the past eight years, more than $1.5 million has been donated to the fund from Mass. Electric and its customers, including $169,000 last year.

The Good Neighbor Energy Fund is administered by The Salvation Army in cooperation with the state's 14 electric and gas companies and 10 municipal electric departments.

Beginning Jan. 1, residents interested in applying for assistance may contact one of The Salvation Army's 30 locations in Massachusetts, including 6 Baxter St. in Quincy.

Recipients must be income-eligible and may receive up to $200 per year to pay electric, gas, or oil bills.

$465,000 Federal Grant To Provide Rental Assistance To Homeless

The Quincy Housing Authority will receive a $465,000 federal grant to provide rental assistance for homeless adults in the city, announces Cong. Gerry Studds.

The grant will allow 12 homeless adults, all of whom are either mentally ill or have alcohol or substance abuse problems, to live in a variety of independent housing while receiving appropriate social services.

"These men and women will move directly from Quincy's emergency shelter into apartments scattered throughout the city," Studds said.

The grant, one of 129 awarded by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development under its Shelter Plus Care program, lasts for five years. If any of the 12 people helped by the grant are able to subsequently obtain housing on their own, other homeless adults will take their place in the subsidized housing.

Studds praised Quincy Housing Authority Director John (Jake) Comer and Joe Finn, director of Father Bill's Place, for their ingenuity to create a public-private partnership to help solve the housing needs of the homeless people in Quincy.

"While this obviously will not end homelessness in Quincy, it will go a long way toward helping those most in need," Studds said. "Many of them have been at Father Bill's Place for close to a year, and this will give them the boost they need to begin independent living."

Finn said the adults are ready to live on their own, with some assistance. All the adults who are helped by the grant must be receiving services for the city's social service agencies, and they will continue to do so, he said. All are from Quincy, he said, not surrounding towns.

"This will assure that we can begin to move people from emergency shelters who are ready and capable of living independently into their own housing."

NOT-SO-GOOD VIBRATIONS

When drivers of front wheel drive cars detect a shimmy in their steering wheels, they should define the problem more specifically. An oscillation causes the steering wheel to shake from side to side, and is most often caused by wheel imbalance, wheel damage, or excessive wear on the outer edges of a tire. If oscillation occurs when the brakes are applied, the culprit may be a warped rotor. If vibration results in the steering wheel shaking up and down while a front wheel drive car is idling, the idling speed may be set just enough below specification to roll the engine against its supports. If vibration occurs while a car is cruising, the problem may lie with loose or damaged accessory mounting bolts or drive belts. Engine mounts or torque rods may also be suspect.

HINT: A torque rod controls engine pitching, while engine mounts support and isolate the engine from the frame.

Come in a get acquainted with our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). Personalized service and attention is given to each customer whether they own a front or wheel drive vehicle. Our ALL-DATA computer system allows us to keep up to date on the very latest updates from the manufacturer. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."
